SENATE.

Special Session.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

SPECIAL SESSION OF THE SENATE.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, March 4, 1893.

Hon. ADLAI E. STEVENSON, Vice-President of the United States, having taken the oath of office at the close of the last regular session of the Fifty-second Congress, took the chair.

PRAYER.

Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D.D., Chaplain to the Senate, offered the following prayer:

O Thou, with whom is no variableness or shadow of turning, the unchangeable God, whose throne stands forever, and whose dominion ruleth over all; we seek a Father's blessing as we wait at the mercy seat. We bring to Thee our heart homage, God of our fathers, thanking Thee for our rich heritage of faith and of freedom, hallowed by the toils and tears, the valor and blood and prayers, of our patriot dead. We come with an abiding faith in God, who has led us all through our history, and pray that the blessings we so abundantly enjoy may abide upon the family of nations so honorably represented here to-day. Grant that this stream of mercy may flow throughout the world, and that all the people may have the freedom wherewith Christ makes free.

We look unto Thee for Thy guidance and blessing as we come to these solemnities, and pray that Thy peace may abide upon Thy servants the President and his Cabinet, upon the President of the Senate, and these Thy servants who to-day lay aside the perplexing responsibilities of public office, honored of men and blessed of God.

We commend to Thine especial favor Thy servant, the President-elect, called for the second time to these high and honorable and responsible trusts. O God, shield him by Thy power and let Thy banner over his home, in which Thou hast opened a wellspring of joy, ever be love. Gird him with Thy might. Guide him by Thy counsel. Control his judgment. Make him strong in purpose, and so do Thou direct his Administration with those associated with him in official relations that the blessing of God may continue more and more upon our Republic, which has ever been prospered of Heaven.

Bless, we pray Thee, our Vice-President, the President of the Senate, and those who to-day assume for the first time these responsibilities. So guide by Thy divine counsel, our Father, that in the future, as in the past, the unseen hand may lead us. Bless all the people of this great nation in their industries, in their homes, in their churches, in their schools, prospering every right endeavor, delivering us from lawlessness and vice, and bringing in the reign of peace and righteousness more and more, and among the nations of the world.

Guide us in the path of duty. Purify our hearts, we pray Thee, by the indwelling of Thy Spirit. O Lord, pardon what we have been. Sanctify what we are. Order what we shall be. And Thine shall be the glory and ours the eternal salvation, through Jesus Christ our Lord, who hath taught us when we pray to say:

"Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done upon earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen."

ADDRESS OF THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Senators, deeply impressed with a sense of its responsibilities and of its dignities, I now enter upon the discharge of the duties of the high office to which I have been called.

I am not unmindful of the fact that among the occupants of this chair during the one hundred and four years of our constitutional history have been statesmen eminent alike for their talents and for their tireless devotion to public duty. Adams, Jefferson, and Calhoun honored its incumbency during the early days of the Republic, while Arthur, Hendricks, and Morton have at a later period of our history shed luster upon the office of President of the most august deliberative assembly known to men.

I assume the duties of the great trust confided to me with no feeling of self-confidence, but rather with that of grave distrust of my ability satisfactorily to meet its requirements. I may be pardoned for saying that it shall be my earnest endeavor to discharge the important duties which lie before me with no less of impartiality and courtesy than of firmness and fidelity. Earnestly invoking the coöperation, the forbearance, the charity of each of its members, I now enter upon my duties as Presiding Officer of the Senate.

The Secretary of the Senate will read the proclamation of the President of the United States convening the Senate in extraordinary session.

PROCLAMATION.

The Secretary (Mr. ANSON G. MCCOOK) read the following proclamation:

Given under my hand and the seal of the United States at Washington, this 24th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1893, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and seventeenth.

The President-elect delivered the following

INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

MY FELLOW-CITIZENS: In obedience to the mandate of my countrymen, I am about to dedicate myself to their service under the sanction of a solemn oath. Deeply moved by the expression of confidence and personal attachment which has called me to this service, I am sure my gratitude can make no better return than the pledge I now give before God and these witnesses of unreserved and complete devotion to the interests and welfare of those who have honored me.

I deem it fitting on this occasion, while indicating the opinions I hold concerning public questions of present importance, to also briefly refer to the existence of certain conditions and tendencies among our people which seem to menace the integrity and usefulness of their Government.

clauses of the Constitution to which I have called attention that legislative power can not be exercised except when both Houses are in session.

PHILADELPHIA HARBOR IMPROVEMENT.

Mr. FRYE. I desire to offer a resolution and to ask its immediate consideration. I will state the necessity for it.

The contractors for the improvement of the harbor at Philadelphia some two months ago failed. Proposals were issued, bids were received, and the lowest bidder was a Canadian company, about whose ability to complete the contract the Secretary of War had very serious doubts. He rejected the bids, and he was about to issue new proposals. The Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. QUAY), who felt very desirous that the Secretary of War should give the award to the next highest bidder, on the 27th of February introduced and secured the passage of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be required to furnish for the information of the Senate copies of all papers and documents relating to the proposals for the improvement of the harbor of Philadelphia, under date of January 24, A. D. 1893, and that he be requested to suspend action upon said proposals until the information has been received and considered by the Senate.

The information which was received was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed. I have no doubt when the Senator from Pennsylvania left the city for the South, being somewhat in ill health, he forgot entirely the scope of the resolution which had passed the Senate. Now, the Secretary of War regards it as a request which he ought to be bound by—of course he knows he is not legally bound by it—but a request which ought to bind him, and he will not issue any proposals or accept any bids which have been made in relation to this work. Therefore the whole season is liable to be lost. What is worse than that, the removal of the islands in the harbor having commenced, the currents of the stream are changed in such a way that already great damage is being done to the harbor itself.

The work of removing the islands must be kept patri passu with the building of the shores in order to preserve the present condition of the harbor.

I did not discover this until the day before yesterday. Knowing that it was a matter of the utmost importance to Philadelphia, and not knowing what the Senator from Pennsylvania was telegraphed myself to Philadelphia the condition of things. They evidently found the Senator, for I have here, under date of March 10, the following telegram:

The resolution requesting the Secretary of War to suspend action upon the contract for the removal of the islands in the harbor of Philadelphia has accomplished the purpose and should be rescinded. Will you have the kindness to attend to it?

Mr. President, I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the resolution will be reported by the Secretary.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That so much of Senate resolution of February 27 last as requested the Secretary of War to suspend action in relation to the improvement of the harbor of Philadelphia is hereby rescinded.

Mr. FRYE. I thought the resolutions which were under consideration a few moments ago had been withdrawn. I find, however, they have not been, and therefore I ask unanimous consent that they may be temporarily laid aside, and that the resolution which I have offered shall be considered. It will take but a moment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maine? The Chair hears none.

Mr. HARRIS. Is this resolution to rescind a former Senate resolution?

Mr. FRYE. It is to rescind a portion of a former resolution which is still in existence.

Mr. HARRIS. It is simply a Senate, and not a concurrent or joint resolution?

Mr. FRYE. It is a Senate resolution only.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the resolution submitted by the Senator from Maine? The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT TO WEDNESDAY.

Mr. GORMAN. I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Wednesday next.

The motion was agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SESSION.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the resolution submitted by Mr. MANDERSON on the 9th instant, relative to the business of the session.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question now before the Senate is upon agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. HOAR) to the amendment offered by the Senator from Maine (Mr. HALE) to the resolution submitted by the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. MANDERSON) to the Senate.

Mr. VICE-P. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Wednesday, March 15, 1893, at 12 o'clock m.

WEDNESDAY, March 15, 1893.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. C. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of Monday last was read and approved.

Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of the private secretaries of the President of the United States, communicated to the Senate sundry messages in writing.

SENATOR FROM WYOMING.

Mr. VANCE. I present the credentials of Hon. Asahel C. Beckwith, appointed a Senator from the State of Wyoming. I ask that the credentials be read and referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections when appointed, and that meanwhile they lie on the table.

The credentials were read, and ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

STATE OF WYOMING, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

To all persons to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Know ye, that the executive of said State hereby appoints Asahel C. Beckwith, a duly qualified citizen of said State and an inhabitant thereof, a senator from the State of Wyoming, to fill the vacancy happening in the Senate of the United States by the expiration of the term of Francis E. Warren on the 24th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1893, during the recess of the Legislature of said State, and by the non-election of said Francis E. Warren's successor.

To have and to hold the said office of Senator of the United States until the next meeting of the Legislature of said State.

In testimony whereof I have caused these letters to be made public and the due seal of the State to be hereunto affixed, at Cheyenne, the 14th day of March, A. D. 1893.

JOHN E. OSBORNE, Governor.

By the governor:

AMOS W. BARBER, Secretary of State.

PROPOSED USE OF PENSION OFFICE BUILDING.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, in response to a resolution of the 28th ultimo, relative to the use of the Pension Office building for musical concerts on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, transmitting the correspondence relating to the subject and stating that permission to use the building for the purpose referred to in the resolution was expressly refused by the Secretary of the Interior; which, on motion of Mr. HAWLEY, was, with the accompanying papers, ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

ANNEXATION OF HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a memorial of the senate and house of representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, which will be read.

The Secretary read the memorial, as follows:

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1893.

To the President of the Senate of the United States up to all to whom these presents may come: Greeting.

Whereas the term of office of Hon. John B. Allen as a Senator in Congress from the State of Washington expired March 3 A. D. 1893; and

Whereas the Legislature of the State which assembled January 9 A. D. 1893, duly adjourned March 3 A. D. 1893, without electing a Senator in Congress from said State to fill the vacancy occasioned by the expiration of the term of Senator Allen; and

Resolved, That the Select Committee to Investigate the Geological Survey be, and it hereby is, authorized to employ a clerk at an annual salary of $1,400, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, until otherwise provided for.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOAR. I rise to a question of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts will state his question of order.

Mr. HOAR. It is that the rules of the Senate require the presentation of routine business in a regular order, first petitions, and afterwards reports of committees, bills, and resolutions.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The point of order of the Senator from Massachusetts is well taken, and routine business will be called in regular order. The presentation of petitions and memorials is first in order.

Mr. PASCO. What is the point of order made?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order is called for, which is the presentation of petitions and memorials.

Mr. SHERMAN. It is usual to first lay before the Senate messages from the President and communications from heads of Departments. I take the liberty of suggesting that that order precedes the presentation of petitions and memorials.

REPORT ON PHOSPHATE INDUSTRY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Commissioner of Labor, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the Senate of December 4, 1890, a special report relating to the phosphate industry of the United States; which, with the accompanying papers, was, on motion of Mr. CALLE, referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed.

LONG ISLAND SOUND COAST DEFENSES.

Mr. HAWLEY presented a petition of the Legislature of Connecticut, praying for improved defenses of the eastern entrance to Long Island Sound; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Coast Defenses, as follows:

STATE OF CONNECTICUT, GENERAL ASSEMBLY,
January Session, A. D. 1892.

[SEAL.]

Readed by this Assembly:

SECTION 1. That the proposed erection of suitable coast defenses at the

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Florida inquired why was the resolution called up by the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. HOAR. The Senate has not voted to take up that resolution.

Mr. CALL. I propose to offer an amendment to the resolution just read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. HOAR. I object, unless it can be disposed of without delay.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. I move to proceed to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. HOAR. On that I call for the yeas and nays.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Louisiana moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution reported by him yesterday to ascertain and fix the sums necessary to be disbursed by various standing or special committees authorized to sit during the recess. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

Mr. HOAR. On that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BERRY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. BUTLER (when his name was called). I should like to inquire of some Senator on the opposite side whether this is a political question or not, to determine how the contingent fund shall be disbursed?

Mr. HOAR. I regard the taking of this question up to discuss the pending resolution, speaking for one, as clearly a political and party question. If Senators on the other side desire unanimous consent to take the resolution up without debate, I do not suppose there will be any objection; but I regard the present question as a party question.

Mr. BUTLER. Then I suppose the opinion of the Senator from Massachusetts, speaking ex cathedra, will be conclusive of my vote. I therefore withhold my vote, and announce my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON], looking upon the Senator from Massachusetts, of course, as the leader on the other side.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to inquire of the Senator from South Carolina whether he voted upon this question?

Mr. BUTLER. No. I have announced my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON].

Mr. CAREY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRVY].

Mr. GORDON (when Mr. COLQUITT's name was called). My colleague [Mr. COLQUITT] is paired with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON].

Mr. GORMAN (when his name was called). I am paired generally with the Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE], who is now absent from the city. I shall refrain from voting on any question that is purely political, but I have the right to vote on any question where my vote may be necessary to make a quorum, or upon questions affecting the ordinary business of the Senate. I therefore vote "yea."

Mr. HIGGINS (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. McPHERSON]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. MILLS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], but I transfer that pair to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] and vote "yea."

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. DUBOIS (when Mr. SHOUP's name was called). I announce the pair of my colleague [Mr. SHOUP] with the junior Senator from California [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. SQUIRE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. STEPHENSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON], and withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BLACKBURN. My colleague [Mr. LINDSAY] is paired with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW]. Were my colleague present he would vote "yea."

Mr. BUTLER. I announced a moment ago that I was paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. If I can get the gracious permission of my friend from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] and my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], to transfer that pair to the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST],

I shall be very glad to do so. [A pause.] In the absence of any opposition on their part, I will announce the pair between the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON], and I vote "yea."

Mr. CAREY. I will inform the Senator from South Carolina that the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] has paired the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT].

Mr. PASCO. The Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICE] is paired with the Senator from Colorado, unless that pair has been transferred.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I was requested by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] to arrange a pair for him. I supposed the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] was absent without a pair, and so I arranged the pair in that way. However, if the Senator from Colorado is not paired—

Mr. PASCO. He is already paired.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I paired him with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] this afternoon.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, does that cut me out of my privilege of voting? It seems so.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is not a matter for the Chair to decide, but for the Senator himself to decide.

Mr. BUTLER. I wish it were. It seems that it is being decided on the other side by the two recognized leaders on that side, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER].

Mr. CHANDLER. If debate is in order, I should like to be heard.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Debate is not in order. The Chair will state that the Senator from South Carolina must determine for himself as to his vote.

Mr. BUTLER. I am not debating anything. Of course, if there is another pair arranged for the Senator from Missouri, I withdraw my vote.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina withdraws his vote.

Mr. DUBOIS. I inquire whether the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] has voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted, as the Chair understands.

Mr. DUBOIS. I have a general pair with that Senator, which is quite liberal in its terms. Either of us can vote whenever we see fit, provided that there is nothing of a political question concerned. I regard this as a political question, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. BERRY. I suggest to the Senator from Idaho that he may vote, and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] can be paired with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], which will enable me to vote also.

Mr. DUBOIS. Very well. I vote "nay."

Mr. BERRY. I vote "yea."

Mr. BRICE. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT], but with the understanding that I have a right to vote on any question by assuming the responsibility to him, which I do, and I vote on this question. I vote "yea."

Mr. CAMDEN. I desire to say that I have a general pair on all questions with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN], but with the right to vote to make a quorum and on questions concerning the ordinary business of the Senate. Therefore I vote "yea," but I shall observe the pair on any question of a political nature.

The result was announced—yeas 33, nays 16; as follows:

I certainly am not willing to be deterred from pressing the resolution concerning the Senator from North Dakota by any suggestions of this kind. If at any time any Senator sees fit to make a serious allegation against him, either as an individual or as a public official before my entrance into the Senate, I shall promptly meet the allegations and close by a request for an investigation.

But, Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Indiana and other Senators upon that side of the Chamber to the position which they have taken in the late debate. It is one that never will allow any Senator to have an investigation made against him, however injurious they may be, concerning his life before he became a member of this body. Senators can come in here and make allegations of any sort they please about a brother Senator, and if they relate to transactions happening before he was elected, the only remedy for that Senator is to make denial upon the floor of the Senate. If the doctrine which the Senators upon the other side of the Chamber are asserting is the correct one, under no circumstances is there any constitutional right of this body to investigate for the purpose of relieving a Senator upon this floor from the opprobrium which may attach to unjust charges.

That has not been hitherto the precedent of the Senate, and I trust that it is not hereafter to be the precedent of the Senate. I trust that the request of the Senator from North Dakota that he may be investigated will be granted, and that the request of the Senator from Montana that he be investigated may be granted; and it will be entirely agreeable to me to be myself investigated concerning any charge which any Senator will undertake seriously to make upon the floor of the Senate.

Mr. President, I do not know that the Senator from Indiana intended that anyone should understand in this broad land that the charges which he said he had heard against me were true, but for fear that some person might say that I sat silent in the Chamber after the Senator had stated that he had heard these things, I deemed it my duty and my privilege to make the statement which I now submit to the Senate.

Mr. VOORHEES, Mr. President, the Senator from New Hampshire says I was mistaken in what I said yesterday. I was not mistaken. I was making no accusation against that Senator; I was bringing no charge against him; but I was illustrating the conduct of the other side of the Chamber. I was alluding to the fact that for years past the country has rung with charges against Senators on that side of the Chamber, imputing to them faults and offenses graver even than those imputed to the Senator from North Dakota, and in illustration of the fact that they had sat silent, had never taken up the spirit of accusation or investigation while their own people were affected, I alluded en passant, without any intention of being responsible for the truth of the charge, that I had even heard the Senator himself gravely accused. I have, and others have.

The very language which I used I heard used by others, and at not a very remote period of time from the present. Papers have been sent to me. I am no dumping ground either, as the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] so well said yesterday. I toss those things into the waste basket and the fireplace; I have great contempt for them. But I was illustrating the fact that the Senators on the other side of the Chamber, especially the Senator from New Hampshire, were swift to avenge what the Senator termed the purity of the Senate when he could make a point against a political adversary, but he was silent and dumb in the presence of charges affecting not merely himself, but other Senators on the other side of the Chamber. It was in that spirit I brought it forward and in none other.

I am not an accusing spirit. I hold that those accusations should not be investigated if the offenses imputed took place prior to the election here. That was my argument yesterday. I stand on it now. I said yesterday that I did not arraign that side of the Chamber for what they have not done in the past, but what they were trying to do now in the present, totally inconsistent with the career they have heretofore, betraying a hypocrisy and a phariseism inconsistent with what I conceive to be a manly and true position, especially under the limitations of our Constitution.

I say to the Senator from New Hampshire if he is never arraigned or accused until I do it he will go very free and cheerful through life, unless it might be necessary, as I thought it was yesterday, to confront him with an illustration growing out of accusations even against himself. I have none to make, and I make none now.

I believe this is all I desire to say.

Mr. GORMAN. I renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I hope the Senator from Maryland will yield to me. I desire to occupy the attention of the Senate for a few moments.

Mr. GORMAN. If it is a personal matter, I will yield; but the Senator must understand and appreciate that we ought to proceed with the business before us.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. It is a personal matter. I think it can be construed as a personal matter.

Mr. GORMAN. Then, of course, I will yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I will occupy the attention of the Senate a very short time.

Mr. President, I trust the Senate will not adjourn until it gives my colleague the opportunity which he has asked to have an investigation of the serious allegations and accusations made against him. I believe when my colleague rose in his place in the Senate yesterday and said that he courted an investigation here, that through him the State of North Dakota was speaking and demanding a right that its representative in this body be heard. That, it seems to me, is a very high ideal of State rights.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. President, I rise to a question of order. The Senator from North Dakota is not speaking to a question of personal privilege. He is arguing a question that it would require unanimous consent for him to pursue.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Indiana that the floor was given to the Senator from Maryland; that he yielded the floor, and the Chair recognized the Senator from North Dakota. As to the question of the propriety of the remarks of the Senator from North Dakota, that is a matter he must judge of himself. It is not a question of order that the Chair recognizes the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I think that this matter is personal to me, as it relates to my colleague and to the State I have the honor in part to represent here.

Mr. President, I claim that no political party has a right to come here and deny the privilege asked for by my colleague. I hope, as I said in the beginning, that the Senate will not adjourn without giving him the opportunity he has asked to be investigated. I do not want him to go back to his people and to rest under this cloud all summer until we convene here again next December. I believe the Senate should grant him the request he has submitted here. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] may be adopted.

Mr. VEST. I object.

Mr. GORMAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota has unanimous consent.

Mr. GORMAN. I move that the Senate proceed—

Mr. CHANDLER. I rise to a question of order.

Mr. COCKRELL. I object, and that ends it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of the opinion that the Senator from North Dakota, being on the floor, had a right to make the request as part of his remarks, and that his request the Chair is bound to submit to the Senate. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. COCKRELL. There is.

Mr. HARRIS. Pending which, a motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business was unquestionably in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Before a motion can be made to proceed to the consideration of executive business by a Senator the Senator must be recognized by the Chair. The Chair has recognized no one but the Senator from North Dakota. The Chair understands that there is objection to the request of the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is; I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

ANTITRUST AND INTERSTATE-COMMERCE DECISIONS.

Mr. MANDERSON. I dislike at this moment to ask the privilege, but as I feel compelled to leave the Chamber I wish to make a request.

A few days ago, in that latitude of debate which is permitted here, the decisions that have excited some comment throughout the country, made by Judge Ricks, in Ohio, and Judge Spear, in Georgia, were referred to. It was very evident, when I read the comments made upon the decision of Judge Spear, that the same misapprehension the newspapers seemed to be under had also obtained with some Senators who addressed themselves to that subject.

I have in my hand the full decision of Judge Spear, transmitted to me by that judicial officer. It bears upon questions of moment and of exceeding importance that have excited very great interest. Referring as the decision does more particularly to the antitrust act and the interstate-commerce law, I think it would be well that the decision, which is not of length, should appear in the RECORD. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that it be printed in the Record of to-day's proceedings.

Mr. BUTLER. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina objects to the request of the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to ask if there is any objection to publishing as a document the three decisions which were referred to.

Mr. MANDERSON. I was on the point of asking that it be printed as a document.

Mr. HOAR. That is what I desire.

Mr. MANDERSON. I know a great many will desire to see it.

Mr. VEST. Let that be done.

Mr. MANDERSON. Does the Senator from South Carolina object to that request?

Mr. BUTLER. No, sir.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to add to the request to print the decision of Judge Speer, that the document also include the decisions of Judge Taft and Judge Hicks, to be printed under the direction of the Committee on Printing, if the chairman will undertake it.

Mr. VEST. That is right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nebraska, as amended by the Senator from Massachusetts, that the decisions be printed as a document? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BUTLER. All three decisions are to be printed?

Mr. MANDERSON. All three are to be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Writing the understanding of the Chair.

The order was reduced to writing and entered on the Journal, as follows:

Resolved, That the latest reports of Judge Speer of Georgia, Judge Hicks of California, and Judge Taft of Ohio, made in certain cases involving the rights and duties of railroad employees and conductors, be printed and three thousand copies of each be printed in document form for the use of the Senate.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. GORMAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and thirty minutes past in executive session the doors were reopened.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY CONFERENCE.

Mr. GORMAN, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the resolution submitted this day by Mr. DAVIS, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the proceedings of the International Monetary Conference, held at London, England, in 1891, be printed in three thousand additional copies of Executive Document No. 82, Fifty-second Congress, second session, being the proceedings of the international monetary conference.

REPORT OF DEPARTMENT COMMISSIONER SCHULTZ.

Mr. GORMAN, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the resolution submitted yesterday by Mr. CHANDLER, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Public Printer be, and he is hereby directed to print for the use of the Senate, with a title page, 15,000 additional copies of the report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, submitted to the Senate, Executive Document No. 29, Fifty-second Congress, second session, inclusive.

Mr. GORMAN. The reports accompanying these resolutions will be printed under the rule?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAULKNER). The reports will be printed under the rule.

THANKS TO THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

Mr. MANDERSON. I offer, with great pleasure, the resolution I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be read. The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate do, and he is hereby ordered, to the Vice-President for the impartiality and courtesy with which he has presided over the Senate during its present extraordinary session.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, unanimously agreed to consider the resolution, and it was read and agreed to.

INVESTIGATION BY COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE AND FORESTRY.

Mr. GEORGE. I ask leave to call up the resolution, which I introduced several days ago, in relation to the investigation of the agricultural interests of the country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Mississippi that he desires to call up the resolution which he offered as an amendment to the resolution of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL]?

Mr. GEORGE. No; the independent resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. GEORGE on the 10th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary, and such Senators and land-holders interested in the investigation of the agricultural interests of the country, be and they are hereby directed to investigate the agricultural interests of the United States, etc., as directed by the resolution of the Senate, introduced by the Committee on Agriculture last February, the sum of $5,000, one thousand of which to be paid out of the contingent fund, and the balance to be paid out of the contingent fund for the contingent fund for the next fiscal year.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I rise to a question of order. When the Senate went into executive session the measure pending before it was the resolution of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] reported by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to which the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE] had offered an amendment, and the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi was the pending question. That is the matter now before the Senate, according to my conception of the rules of the Senate.

Mr. GEORGE. I move to take up the resolution which has just been read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that in the judgment of the Chair the point of order raised by the Senator from Tennessee is well taken, and the business properly before the Senate is the resolution of the Senator from Missouri, the pending question being on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. GEORGE. I move to take up the resolution just read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi now moves that the resolution just read be taken up for consideration by the Senate.

Mr. HARRIS. Before we get into a wrangle here—

Mr. GEORGE. I do not want any wrangle about it. I merely want a vote on my motion.

Mr. HARRIS. I am sorry the Senator from Mississippi to test the strength of his case upon his amendment, which presents precisely the same question. Why should he move to divert the Senate from the consideration of the resolution reported by one of its standing committees?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair rules that a motion to proceed to the consideration of any other than the regular order is not debatable. The question is on agreeing to the resolution of the Senator from Mississippi, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution submitted by him. [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let us have the yeas and nays and be done with it.

Mr. HOAR. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I desire to know whether if this resolution be taken up it must not under show to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would hold that a reference would not be necessary, as a resolution has already been passed authorizing an appropriation for the purpose.

Mr. GEORGE. The resolution for that purpose has already passed the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. The Chair will pardon me, this resolution provides that $1,000 of the sum is to be paid out of the contingent fund for this year, the remainder to be paid out of the contingent fund for next year. The resolution creates for the first time a charge upon a particular contingent fund, I submit. I will not press the question if the Chair is not in doubt about it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is not properly now before the Chair for it to rule upon. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Mississippi to proceed to the consideration of the resolution. [Putting the question.] The yeas seem to have it.

Mr. COCKRELL. I stand on the yeas and nays.

Mr. HARRIS. Very well; let the yeas and nays be ordered if the Senator from Mississippi wants them.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GEORGE. I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. VEST. Aye.

Mr. CALL. I hope the Senator will allow me one moment. I withdraw the objection I made to the consideration of the resolution reported by the committee, and will state that my objection was only to the consideration of the resolution in executive session.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask the Senator from Mississippi to allow by unanimous consent the two resolutions which were reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate to be adopted first, so as to show what special committees are to be authorized to sit in vacation, and then dispose of his resolution.

Mr. GEORGE. I desire to have a vote of the Senate upon the question whether they will give the money, in preference to all other appropriations out of the contingent fund, to the Agricultural States, etc., as directed by the resolution of the Senate to be made by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, the sum of $9,000, one thousand of which to be paid out of the contingent fund available for the present fiscal year and the remainder out of the contingent fund for the next fiscal year, which said sum of $9,000 is to be first deducted for the use aforesaid, and the balance remaining of said sum only shall be apportioned by said committee.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. I move to lay the amendment on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana moves to lay the amendment submitted by the Senator from Mississippi upon the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on agreeing to the resolution of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I have only one word to say. I think this is a very dangerous resolution. It gives opportunity for the rule of the Senate by a few men. It opens the way to all corrupt influences to control this body. I believe it is unconstitutional to delegate the legislative powers of this body to any three Senators on this floor, and I shall vote against the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

INVESTIGATION BY COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask that the reports from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate be taken up for consideration in their order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection, and the first resolution in order reported by the committee will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. JONES of Arkansas April 10, 1893, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Indian Affairs be instructed, either by full committee or such subcommittee committees as may be appointed by the chairman thereof, with the full power of such committee to continue, during the recess of Congress, the investigations authorized by the resolution of May 13, 1890, and passed by the Government, and the five nations in the manner and to the extent provided in said resolutions, and in the pursuance of such investigations to visit the several Indian reservations, Indian schools supported in whole or in part by the Government, and the five nations in the Indian Territory, or any reservation where, in the opinion of said committee, it may be necessary to extend their investigations.

2. That said committee or subcommittee shall have power to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and to examine witnesses under oath touching the matters which they are hereby empowered to investigate, and may hold their sessions during the recess of the Senate at such place or places as they may determine; and the necessary and proper expense incurred in the execution of this resolution shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman of said committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

INTERSTATE-COMMERCE INVESTIGATION.

Mr. BUTLER. Let the next resolution be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution reported by Mr. BUTLER from the Committee on Interstate Commerce April 10, 1893, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Interstate Commerce be, and is hereby, authorized to inquire whether or not the methods prevailing in the transportation of freight and passengers over the great railroad lines of the country and the conditions and necessities of travelers and shippers and of the transportation companies justify or require a repeal or modification of section 3 of the interstate-commerce act of February 4, 1887, which prohibits pooling under any circumstances; and that said committee be further authorized to inquire whether the system of closing and sealing cars engaged in transporting merchandise from one of the States of the Union into another State through foreign territory, or from such territory into any State, or from such territory through the United States into foreign territory, or any system of bonding merchandise so transported, needs to be modified or further regulated by law, and whether any revenues engaged in such trade should either be required to conform to all the provisions of the said interstate-commerce act, or be proposed to be continued upon a special investigation; and whether any modifications should be made of the existing provisions of law concerning the relation of the freight carriers and their employees, the said committee, being hereby empowered to sit during the recess of the Senate to hear all subcommittees if deemed necessary, to take testimony at convenient points, to employ stenographers, and to have expenses paid from the contingent fund of the Senate; and it is expressly provided that no additional expense whatever shall be allowed for or paid thereunder in the terms of this resolution.

Mr. HOAR. I move to amend the resolution, to make clear what the Senator from South Carolina understands is already in it, in line 9, after the word "circumstances," to insert "and also the provisions relating to long and short hauls."

Mr. BUTLER. I have no objection personally to that amendment, and I do not suppose any objection can be urged to it. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. HARRIS. I have no objection to the investigation of the question, but I shall have very serious objection to repealing either the long and short haul clause or the pooling clause of the interstate-commerce act.

Mr. HOAR. The resolution proposes to confer on the committee in terms the power to reconsider or modify or improve in anyway the pooling clause.

Mr. HARRIS. To investigate.

Mr. HOAR. I wish to have that clearly within the power of the committee.

Mr. BUTLER. There is no proposition to repeal.

Mr. HARRIS. I comprehend. It is an investigation resolution.

Mr. DOLPH. Let the amendment be reported.

The SECRETARY. In line 9, after the word "circumstances," it is proposed to insert:

And also the provisions relating to long and short hauls.

Mr. BUTLER. That is sufficient.

Mr. HARRIS. Insert the words "of section 4" after the word "provisions." That is the section which relates to the long and short haul.

Mr. HOAR. I suggest that we insert the words "of said statute."

Mr. HARRIS. That will be satisfactory.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be so modified. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as modified.

The amendment as modified was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question now is on the resolution as amended.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

SENATE EMPLOYEES AT MALTBY BUILDING.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. I beg leave to report at this time a resolution from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms be, and he is hereby, authorized to continue the present session employees at the Maltby Building, authorized under the resolution of July 26, 1892, until June 30, 1893.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. HILL (at 6 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.). I move that the Senate do now adjourn sine die.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York moves that the Senate do now adjourn sine die. [Putting the question.]

Sensors, before announcing the result of the vote just taken, I beg to express my earnest appreciation of the uniform courtesy shown me by the members and officers of this body during the session now closing.

For the resolution personal to myself, so kindly adopted by the Senate, I am profoundly grateful.

In accordance with the vote just taken, I now declare this extraordinary session of the Senate adjourned without day.

First Session.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

FIRST SESSION.

SENATE.

MONDAY, August 7, 1893.

The first session of the Fifty-third Congress commenced this day at the Capitol, in the city of Washington, in pursuance of the proclamation of the President of the United States of the 30th day of June, 1893. The Senators assembled in the Senate Chamber.

The VICE-PRESIDENT of the United States (Hon. ADLAI E. STEVENSON, of the State of Illinois) called the Senate to order at 12 o'clock meridian.

PRAYER.

Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D., Chaplain to the Senate, offered the following prayer:

Our eyes are toward Thee, Lord God Almighty, the governor among the rulers and the unseen leader in life's great battle. We pray for abiding faith in God, in His presence and power, in His wisdom and love and mercy. Are we not Thy children, chastened but not destroyed? We come confessing our sins, Thou art the God of pardon. We open our hearts to the indwelling of Thy spirit, and pray that these Thy servants may be filled with the wisdom that is pure and peaceable and gentle and easy to be entreated, which is without partiality and without hypocrisy, the wisdom that cometh from Thee, the only wise God.

Thou art overturning and overturning, O God. Thy kingdom is coming, the kingdom of truth and of righteousness. Establish it in our hearts and in the hearts of all the rulers and in the hearts of all the people.

Remember Thy servants, the President and the members of the Cabinet. Bless the two Houses of Congress now assembling, and so guide, O God, in their councils that the best interests of the people may be advanced in this time of doubt and perplexity, of unrest and agitation among the nations, and in our own land, which Thou hast led all through our history. Guide this day by Thy counsel. Have these Thy servants in Thy holy care and keep- ing, in their persons and in their families: bless them in their social and in their official relations: and grant, O God, so to order all things concerning us and concerning Thy kingdom that very soon the power of iniquity may be destroyed and truth and righteousness everywhere prevail. Grant us grace, blot out our transgressions, and may the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keep our hearts and minds through Jesus Christ our Lord.

O Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen.

THE PROCLAMATION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the proclamation of the President of the United States, convening the Congress in extraordinary session.

The Secretary (Mr. ANSON G. MCCOOK) read the proclamation, as follows:

By the President of the United States of America.

A PROCLAMATION.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, D. C., June 30, 1893.

Whereas the distrust and apprehension concerning the financial situation which pervade all business circles have already caused great loss and damage to our people, and threaten to cripple our merchants, stop the wheels of manufacture, bring distress and privation to our farmers, and withhold from our workmen the wage of labor.

And whereas the present pecuniary condition is largely the result of a financial policy which the executive branch of the Government has embodied in unwise laws which must be executed until repealed by Congress.

Now, therefore, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, in performance of a constitutional duty, do by this proclamation declare that an extraordinary session requires the convening of both Houses of the Congress of the United States at the Capitol in the city of Washington on the 7th day of August next, at 12 o'clock noon, to the end that the people may be relieved through legislation, from present and impending danger and distress.

All those entitled to act as members of the Fifty-third Congress are required to take notice of this proclamation and attend at the time and place above stated.

Given under my hand and the seal of the United States at the city of Washington, on the 30th day of June, in the year of our Lord 1893, and of the independence of the United States the 17th.

[SEAL.]

WILLIAM LINDSAY, a Senator from the State of Kentucky, appeared in his seat to-day.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. GORMAN. I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

Mr. LODGE. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.
The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHANDLER (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). Previous to the departure of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] for Europe in the discharge of his duties as a member of the Beveling Sea Commission a pair was announced between us covering all questions upon which a vote might be taken except the Nicaragua Canal bill and the Hawaiian business. PROPOSED SUSPENSION OF STATE BANK TAX.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. President, I have purposely waited until this moment to introduce a bill to which I ask the attention of the Senate. It is not a panacea for all our ills, but I believe that if enacted into law it would end the panic in the South, at least, within fifteen days.

It is a bill not to repeal the 10 per cent tax on State bank issues, but to suspend its collection for six months. As a result, the bill will indolge me, a few moments, I will endeavor to explain the necessity for it and its effect upon the Southern section of the country.

The present cotton crop is to be moved. Only yesterday a telegram was received from a cotton center requesting that something be done by the Treasury to have bills of lading authenticated or cashed or money in some way provided to move that crop. This bill would enable our own banks to move the crop. Take Savannah, for example, which is our leading port, with seven banks, all good and with an aggregated capital of $3,000,000. The programme is this: Bank A, say with $100,000 capital, would sign its own notes or promises to pay to the extent of $20,000 and place in trust abundant collateral to secure these notes or bills of convenient denominations—say for $5, $10, and $20 until they aggregated the $20,000 or 20 per cent of its capital. These would be good notes; but to render them vastly more secure and acceptable to the people, all the six banks would indorse them and thus make them equal in security to any bank bills in the country.

A like process is adopted for each of the other banks and to the extent of 20 per cent of its capital, which 20 per cent of notes or bills will likewise be indorsed by each of the other banks—these notes or bills being also of convenient form and denomination for a circulating medium in the State or locality. When this programme is finished for all seven of the banks, we would have an increase to the extent of least $600,000 in Savannah, which would be received by depositors, by the city authorities, by merchants, and others, because they would be fully as good as any bank bills in the discharge of people's debts—leaving the currency now in the bank vaults to be used in moving the crops. If the objection be urged that this suspension of the tax would permit State banks to organize or permit what is termed wildcat banking, the reply is that it would be utterly impossible, under this provision, to organize any bank within six months. No man with any brains or thought whatever would try to start a bank in a new bank of this sort, chartered by a State, which would be wiped out of existence within six months, or taxed out of existence by the expiration of the provisions of the bill.

Only last night, sir, I had a conference with a number of able bankers as there are in this country. Each of them united in the opinion that the circulation thus provided would relieve our State and Texas and Mississippi and all the cotton States within a few days from the embargo now imposed by the want of currency.

It is a matter of gigantic moment, sir, to us. Our banks are not only without the ability to provide the money for moving this crop, but they are without the ability to command their own money lying on deposit in the city of New York. Their own bills or checks drawn upon their own funds in the city of New York may come back to them in some other shape than in currency. What is promised by this bill is a temporary currency which will pay the indebtedness of any citizen who is so fortunate as to possess it.

There is not a merchant in any of our towns who would not recognize the fact that any bank in good standing in our State which would issue notes thus secured would find them current in every section of the State. There is no better or more secure currency than this would be. It would be equivalent to a ship load of gold emptied into our markets, and would at once relieve the pressure, and make possible the use of present currency for moving the cotton.

I ask the serious attention of the Senate to this measure, and while I know the remark that it would relieve the panic in fifteen days is calculated to provoke a smile from those who oppose State banks and local currency, yet it is true that it would relieve the panic in my State in ten days after its passage. It would do it in every other Southern State. Our people know our banks. They have confidence in them in every city. The City of Savannah has never had a defaulting bank from the days of Oglethorpe to this hour. I beg pardon; I will qualify that statement to this extent: When the war came, some of our banks were, of course, broken; but at no time in our history has a Savannah bank failed to pay its depositors dollar for dollar except during the war.

Now, sir, with that knowledge of our people as to the solvency of our banks, with the indorsement of other banks upon the bills of the particular bank issuing this currency, I undertake to say it would answer all the purposes of gold or silver or Treasury notes of the United States.

This is all I have to say, sir. I ask that the bill be read and referred to the Committee on Finance. I trust the committee will report upon it at an early day.

The bill (S. 448) to suspend for six months the operation of section 3412 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the same being section 122 of the national-bank act, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, and referred to the Committee on Finance, as follows:

Be it enacted, That the operation of section 3412 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the same being section 122 of the national-bank act, shall be suspended for six months from the date of the passage of this act, and the operation of said section shall be suspended for the period of six months from and after the passage of this act.

INCREASE OF NATIONAL-BANK CIRCULATION.

Mr. VOORHEES. I did not hear the order called for reports of committees, and I ask leave now to report a bill. I will state that I am instructed by the Committee on Finance to report the bill and to ask for its present consideration.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read at length for information. The bill (S. 453) to provide for the issue of circulating notes to national banks was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, That upon any deposit already on deposit made by any person, State, or association, or any other person, of any sum of money in a national banking association which has made or shall make such deposit shall be entitled to receive from the Comptroller of the Currency circulating notes of any denomination not less than one dollar, and not exceeding the amount of the deposit, and the notes so issued shall be payable to the order of the depositor, and shall be redeemable in gold or silver coin at the option of the holder, and shall be subject to the same rules and regulations as the notes issued by the association in which the deposit was made, and shall be paid in of its capital stock.

Mr. VOORHEES. I desire to say a few words, and a very few. I wish to call the attention—

Mr. COCKRELL. One moment. I do not understand that the bill is before the Senate, because I intend to object to it, after the Senator finished his remarks. I do not want to have it understood that consent is given to take up the bill and consider it.

Mr. VOORHEES. I desire to say in connection with this report that the bill of Mr. Cockrell has the indorsement of the Committee on Finance and the Secretary of the Treasury, but it has a still higher indorsement. It was passed practically without debate and practically unanimously by the Senate at the last session of Congress, and twice before that. It has had full consideration heretofore. It was passed, I repeat, at the last session by this body, and at that time there was no such requirement, to my mind, as there is now for its enactment.

I have always thought the Government might safely resort to the full faith of its credit to supply the people with a circulating medium. It is no new thought to me, and no new measure. The peril at this time is so much greater that I think the Congress of the United States is far more instructed, as it were, by events than they were when to pass this measure.

Mr. President, I do not proclaim it as a measure of entire relief by any manner of means, but I look upon it as a measure of relief. To some extent it will help the people. The Secretary of the Treasury says that on the bonds now in the Treasury it will authorize an increase of our currency to the extent of $19,000,000. I am advised by others of great experience in financial matters that there is scarcely a doubt but that it will carry an increase of our currency from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000, which at this time would be a solace and a comfort to our people in every quarter of the United States.

I repeat, Mr. President, if there were reasons heretofore for the passage of such an act by the Senate of the United States, those reasons are magnified now a hundredfold, and I sincerely hope that practically without discussion the Senate may do today, in the face of the extreme peril of our situation, what it has done heretofore for an increase of our circulating medium.

I need not say that the national banks are no favorites of mine. I have not been enamored of them and doubtless they have not been of mine. They have done wrong and harm perhaps, but that is no reason why we should not seize upon them to bring about a measure of relief if they are capable of doing it. In this instance I believe they have the power to do good, and I desire to authorize them to the extent of the bill at least to render a measure of help to our people.

This is all I desire to say at this time in explanation of the bill and of its motives.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair understood the Senator from Indiana to request the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President—

Mr. VOORHEES. I do. I am instructed by the committee to make that request.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. COCKRELL. There is objection.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri objects.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is objection, because there are a number of Senators who desire to be heard upon this proposition, and who will have amendments to offer proposing to give to the masses of the people the same rights that are conferred upon the national banks and stop favorite and proscription legislation. There is no objection, so far as the validity of the national-bank circulation is concerned, to allow the national banks to issue dollar for dollar, because their paper does not derive one particle of its currency and recognition by the masses of the people from its issue by the national banks.

As to whether the national banks are solvent or insolvent is an immaterial question. The masses of the people take the notes upon their confidence in the United States and the United States bonds deposited as security for the currency. If every national bank in the United States to-morrow were wiped out of existence and declared insolvent, unable to pay a dollar, every dollar of national-bank circulation would be just as good as gold.

To-day, Mr. President, we have various kinds of money in circulation in this country. We have the greenback as full legal tender. We have the gold certificate, we have the silver certificate, we have the national-bank note, and we have the United States Treasury note or notes issued in the name of the United States. I know that the honor and integrity of the United States are back of every one of these dollars and they take one of them just as quickly as they take another.

There is no loss of confidence in this country in the money of the country; not a particle of it. The masses of the people will take a silver-purchasing certificate and a silver dollar as quickly as they will take a gold dollar, and take them from the bank and hide them away in their stocking and they place them in the vaults of the safe-deposit company. Why? Because they have unbounded confidence that they can let that money remain there one month or three months or six months, or one year or five years, and then take it out and at that time it will be just as good as any other money on God's green earth.

Mr. VOORHEES. If the Senator will allow me, I cannot in every word he has said, and I merely wish to authorize more of that kind of money to be put in circulation. That is the object of the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. I want still more than the measure of the Senator from Indiana proposes. We want still more, and you simply ask for this much. Besides, we do not want to have such a measure rushed through in a minute. The financial systems that are upon us were not created in a day, and they are not to be destroyed in a day. I want the unanimous consent of the Senate to have it distinctly understood that the people of this country want to understand the measures that are passed at this time.

Senators may talk about this bill restoring confidence. Where is confidence lost? I appeal to Senators to stop and think what confidence is destroyed. It is not the confidence of the people of the United States in their currency. Think of it a minute. Is a man who has lost confidence in the currency of the United States a man who has lost confidence in a silver dollar, a silver certificate, going to a responsible bank and draw out that money and hide it away in an old stocking or in a safe-deposit vault, to lie there a week, or a month, or six months, or twelve months? Why will he do that? Because he has no confidence that the money is good? Why, it is farcical. It is idiotic, nothing more, nothing less and nothing else, to talk about the people of the United States having lost confidence in their money. I do not care what kind of money it is, to-day the people of the United States know that the honor and integrity of the whole Government stand back of every dollar that bears the stamp and impress of the Government, and is receivable for all public debts and dues.

Mr. President, I confess that the people have lost confidence;

ing, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] on the 15th instant, to report it with a substitute. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAULKNER in the chair). The substitute resolution reported by the committee will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and the House of Representatives concurred, That there be printed and bound in cloth 1,000 copies of the report of the commission appointed to inquire into the Indian currency, commonly known as the Tweed Report on the Comanche Silver in India, with the accompanying correspondence and testimony of which number 2,000 shall be for the use of the Senate and 1,000 for the use of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? The Chair hears none. The question is on the amendment reported by the Committee on Printing.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.
Mr. GORMAN. I ask that the report of the Committee on Printing on the resolution may be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be printed under the rule.

the great corporations of this country, under this supposed interpretation of the Constitution that the governor would have power to appoint a Senator, has been used to prevent the voice of a Legislature chosen, four-fifths of it, under instructions to obey the will of the people in a particular direction. For the purpose of enabling this power to be exercised, the great corporate wealth and power of the country was brought to bear upon the Legislature, with the understanding that the governor of the State would exercise the power in correspondence with their will; and such will be the case in other States. If any other interpretation of this Constitution shall prevail than that the vacancy may be in the office of a Senator chosen by the Legislature of a State, this evil will have free course, and the way will be opened for the constitution of this body, not as a representative body of the people of this country, but as the representative of particular and special interests.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the pleasure of the Senate? ["Vote!" "Vote!"] The question recurs on the adoption of the resolution reported by the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. HOAR. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. VANCE. Do I understand that the Senator from Massachusetts asks for a vote now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the understanding of the Chair. The Senator from Massachusetts demands a vote on the passage of the resolution reported by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, on which he demands the yeas and nays.

Mr. VANCE. I hope that will not be done. I wish to say something myself upon the question, and I am not able to do so to-day. There are a number of Senators on this side of the Chamber who are not expecting that the vote would be called for to-day, and consequently they are not prepared to proceed. I hope the Senator from Massachusetts will not insist upon his request.

Mr. HOAR. Of course I shall not insist on a present vote against such a suggestion from the chairman of the committee, but it is proper to say that early in the week I tried twice to fix the vote, so I informed the Senate, and stated that I hoped we should proceed to vote on Thursday. I thought there was general acquiescence in that purpose, and I have thought every Senator on both sides of the Chamber understood that there should be a vote, as no one expressed a wish to the contrary. So I am not pressing the resolution unduly. Of course, I shall not object to its going over if the honorable Senator does not desire to speak to-day; but I wish we may have an understanding when he has concluded his speech, or within some short time after he has taken the vote.

Mr. VANCE. I understood the Senator to say the other day that he did not ask for a binding agreement.

Mr. HOAR. That is true; I did not.

Mr. VANCE. But that it should be understood that we should proceed regularly with the case.

Mr. HOAR. Yes.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. We can not hear the interesting dialogue which is going on between the two Senators.

Mr. VANCE. What I have to say on the question I shall submit to-morrow, and it will be very brief. I should not ask the indulgence if I had known the vote was to be had to-day. Other Senators who wish to speak, I suppose, will understand that they must be prepared to speak to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the demand for the yeas and nays on the resolution reported by the Committee on Privileges and Elections is withdrawn.

Mr. CHANDLER. I did not understand the Senator from Massachusetts to withdraw the call. I renew the demand, if it is withdrawn, but of course there is no objection to the resolution going over until to-morrow at the request of the Senator from North Carolina. The difficulty is that many Senators on this side of the Chamber could not understand what arrangement the Senator from Massachusetts and the Senator from North Carolina were reaching.

Mr. HOAR. I did not propose to object to the case going over until to-morrow, but I craved leave to say that, by the universal assent of all Senators, the business of this special session of the Senate is of a gravity and importance affecting all sections of the country, affecting every State in the Union, which has scarcely a precedent, and it seems to me that justice to these States requires the prompt determination of their present right to a representation here, and that I ought to press upon the Senate the settling of this question before any other business of importance is transacted. That I propose to do.

Mr. EWEART. Each side of the Chamber, Massachusetts could arrange a time, by common consent, for the taking of the vote, so that Senators may know when the vote is coming off and be here. Ample time should be given.

Mr. HOAR. I ask that we may have a vote to-morrow before the Senate adjourns, say at 5 o'clock.

Mr. STEWART. Let that be done by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts submits a request for unanimous consent that the vote upon the resolution before the Senate be taken to-morrow evening at 5 o'clock. Is there objection?

Mr. VANCE. I object to that.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator from North Carolina state a time at which he will consent to the vote being taken?

Mr. VANCE. I am not prepared to do so until I ascertain precisely what number of Senators on this side of the Chamber desire to speak.

Mr. HOAR. I will ask, then, that we may have an understanding that the vote be taken on Monday at 5 o'clock.

Mr. VANCE. I believe I shall agree to that.

Mr. HOAR. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts submits a request that the vote on the pending resolution reported by the Committee on Privileges and Elections be taken on Monday evening at 5 o'clock. Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. COCKRELL. I understand, in consequence of what has occurred and announcements made elsewhere, that the Senate will be very soon called upon to adjourn. Prior to that, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened.

PAYMENT OF MILEAGE.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have been requested by a number of Senators to call up the joint resolution (H. Res. 3) making immediately available the appropriations for mileage of Senators and Members of the House of Representatives, which was objected to by the Senator from Kansas (Mr. PEPPER) the other day. I ask that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution, with a simple statement. If any Senator does not desire to draw his mileage now, I am perfectly willing to have a proviso inserted by way of amendment which will excuse such Senator from accepting it.

Mr. ALDRICH. I think the Senator from Missouri the other day sufficiently explained the great exigency which demands immediate action upon the joint resolution.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is no exigency about it at all. The joint resolution explains itself. If the Senator from Rhode Island does not want to take his mileage he will be excused from it, and I will thank him to offer an amendment to that effect.

Mr. ALDRICH. I was satisfied with the explanation the Senator made the other day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Missouri, that the joint resolution be taken up for consideration?

Mr. PEPPER. It is not my purpose to interpose any further objection to the immediate consideration of the joint resolution; but I wish to state, in withdrawing my objection, that I do so at the earnest request of a number of gentlemen who have spoken to me about it in this and the other Chamber, and the only reason why, in the beginning I objected was that it seemed to me as though we were acting with undue haste in the premises. When we are called together in view of a depressed condition of things in the country and a general clamor for more money and for relief, it seemed to me to be a hasty proceeding, to say the least, that the first joint resolution we should be called upon to pass is one to provide ourselves with money that is now in the Treasury.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. VEST. Let the joint resolution be read at length.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc. That the appropriations for mileage of Senators, Members of the House of Representatives, and Delegates from the Territories made in the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation act for the fiscal year last approved March 3, 1893, and the same are hereby made immediately available and to be paid to Senators, Members of the House of Representatives, and Delegates from the Territories for attendance on the first session of the Fifty-third Congress.

Passed the House of Representatives August 14, 1893.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment.

Mr. VEST. I do not propose to make any exciting like factions. Resisting to this I think I do not like it and I shall vote against it. We know what the law says in regard to the payment of mileage. We are entitled to it at the regular session and not now. We are voting ourselves special favors in a financial way under circumstances that are not at all pleasant, to say the least. I think it is bad policy on our part. It is acting in bad faith. The amount involved is inconsiderable, but the measure is very objectionable, and I want the privilege of recording my vote against it.

Mr. HARRIS. I wish to inquire of the Senator from Missouri, for I was not a very careful listener to the joint resolution, whether he understands the measure to provide for the payment of mileage to the extraordinary session and also to the regular session.

Mr. VEST. Oh, no. I stated distinctly that we were anticipating our mileage; that is to say, we are changing the operation of the law that gives us the mileage on the first Monday of December, and taking it now. That is what I was speaking of.

Mr. HARRIS. Then I have but to add, Mr. President, that there is no gentleman occupying a seat on this floor who needs the funds more than I do; but I am in full sympathy with the view expressed by the Senator from Missouri, and I think I can walk.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I think the people of the United States understand that a servant, public or private, is entitled to his pay when he has earned it. The arrangement was for this sum to be paid the first Monday of December next, at the beginning of the next session, because that was supposed to be the time when the law was passed that we should do the traveling for which we were to be compensated as a part of our salary. Now we have done it at midsummer, and when we have done it at midsummer we are as much entitled to it at midsummer as any other servant who has done his work.

I do not think that the people of the United States are affected by the small gibes on this subject. The Senators who render this service of legislation to the country, to their States, and to the American people, do it at an immense pecuniary cost. I am one of the least conspicuous in my profession of the law of the members upon this floor, but I do it easily year, working only nine months in the year, never working evenings, selecting only from professional employment offered to me that which was agreeable, without any drudgery, five times the amount of my salary. I could have earned this summer but for this session three times the amount of my salary as a Senator.

There is a great compensation and satisfaction in holding this office of public honor, in the opportunity for large usefulness, the opportunity to do the things which are great and permanent in their importance, which no money can measure; and I am not to be understood as saying that, when any Senator for the living salary with which he can pay his board in Washington, acts as a legislator for 65,000,000 of people, and represents a sovereign State of two or three or five million people, he is making a sacrifice. It is not that the compensation which he receives for full service here is less than it is for any other in the line of money. I do not believe that any American citizen whose judgment or opinion is respectable takes any other view of it. When the little hundred or two dollars which is a part of our salary that is assigned under the form of mileage has been earned, I think I am as much entitled to receive it as any workman on a farm or in a mill; and I propose to pursue the same policy in regard to both. I am struggling to bring about a condition of things by which the workmen in our mills and on our farms can get promptly their wages, and that they may have an opportunity to resume their earnings. The same principle applies to me that applies to them.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, I did not care to discuss this question. I simply desired to state what my own action upon it would be, and not even to call for the yeas and nays. I am wholly indifferent as to who can stand in regard to my motives in the matter, because I am satisfied with those motives for myself. That is the important matter to me.

At a time of great distress, when the people of the country are looking to us for immediate relief if possible, and when, from circumstances I do not care to discuss, it is almost impossible for us to come to a conclusion, I do not think it is in good taste, to use no stronger expression, to attend to our own financial condition now, to say nothing else, we are unable to give relief to the people.

All that the Senator from Massachusetts says is doubtless true as to his being able to make a much larger amount by his professional pursuits outside of the Senate; and yet the fact remains that none of us are here by coercion, and that whenever coercion is employed it is by the people in relieving us from these responsibilities. We assume them voluntarily and generally hold on to them. That is unquestionable. When we took this office we knew the law or we are not fit to be here. We know that our salaries and our mileage were payable at a certain time, and to change the time of payment is as much an attack upon the principle of observing the law as it is written by the lawmakers as if we should now vote ourselves back salaries or should change the contract as put in the statute between ourselves and the people in any other respect. If we now vote ourselves this mileage, in advance of the time when it is due to us, we change that contract or use the power the people have given us to take money out of the public Treasury before the time when it ought to be taken out under the established law for our own benefit. I need this money as much as any man living. I think I can safely say.

My friend from Kentucky (Mr. LINDSAY) asks me what his been the practice. I do not know that there has been any precedent established on the question. I recollect that I attended a called session the first time I ever appeared in the Senate Chamber. It was the session called by President Hayes in the spring of 1879. We did not vote ourselves any mileage then in advance. I recollect distinctly, and the books of the financial clerk in the Secretary's office will show it, that we got no mileage until we met in regular session in December. I do not want to be either sensational, dramatic, or oratorical; but this country is now in a financial condition unprecedented, and the people are demanding bread literally and looking to Congress for relief, and we are unable to do anything except to give ourselves our mileage three months in advance of the time fixed by law.

Mr. VILAS. Mr. President, I suppose it will be by this time pretty generally recognized that this is but an extension in advance of the regular session beginning in December; that as we have paid our mileage expenses in advance, in doing so we perform the duties which we should perform at a regular session, as they may be now discharged; and we are just as well entitled to our mileage as if it were a regular session.

Mr. VEST. How as to the law?

Mr. VILAS. The law is made by Congress and was intended to be applied according to the circumstances, as was well stated by the Senator from Massachusetts. Now, what is the practical point of this matter to the people? If we anticipate we simply have the money in three or four months in advance, practically three. We then might impose a burden on the people if the Treasury was obliged to borrow the money at interest in order to discharge this mileage. If it is shown that the national debt will be increased by the payment of this money out of the Treasury now instead of in December we should be imposing some burden upon the people. Unless bonds are to be issued whereby there is interest to be imposed upon the people, I make no difference whatever to the people. It seems to me that the reason is so plain that we ought all to agree upon it without any more discussion.

Mr. ALDRICH. I think the semiofficial statement—I say semiofficial on account of the relation which the Senator from Wisconsin recently held to the Administration—that this is to be a continuous session of Congress, will be more welcome to the people of the United States than the payment of any sum to Congress on account of mileage. I am very sorry that Democracy do not carry the National Administration as the Senator from Wisconsin should have felt obliged at this time in the session to say that we are here to stay permanently. As I have said, that statement will be very welcome to the people of the United States.

Mr. PASCO. The Senator from Missouri speaks of the contract and the law. I do not think it is well settled by law that the mileage is payable until the next session. The act of 1857 so regulates it, but there is a later act, the act of December 23, 1877. I will read both. The first says:

Mileage for two sessions only, to be paid in the following manner, to wit: On the first day of each regular session each Senator, Representative, and Delegate shall receive his mileage for each session, and the second regular session of the Congress each Senator, Representative, and Delegate shall receive his mileage for each second session.

But that was changed in 1871. Both these sections are in the Standing Rules of the Senate, under the head of "Compensation of Members of Congress," on the 59th page. The act of 1877 provides that:

On the first day of the first session of each Congress—Not the regular, but "the first session of each Congress"—as each Senator or he may be in attendance shall, each Senator, Representative, and Delegate shall receive his mileage as now allowed by law; and on the first day of any adjournment, or any subsequent session, he shall receive his mileage as now allowed.

That was the act of December 23, 1877. I do not think it is at all plain that this joint resolution is necessary. I suppose, however, it was considered proper to pass it and it is before the Senate. But it seems to me that the last law, passed in 1877, clearly carries out the views of the Senator from Massachusetts by stating the true object, which is to pay no mileage as soon as possible after the Senator and Representatives have paid it out of their own pockets.

Mr. VILAS. I merely wish to add, with reference to what the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. ALDRICH) has said, that the observation which I made with regard to the continuance of the present session was neither uttered as a friend of the Administration nor as an expression of judgment on my part of what ought to be done, but merely to indicate that it is obvious we have a good deal of business before us.

Mr. ALDRICH. I feel reassured.

Mr. CALHOUN. Mr. President, according to my view of this matter, the law as it stands—the spirit of the law, its proper interpretation—is that the members shall have mileage for coming to Congress to perform the duties required. What else is it given for? If a man is elected to the Senate or the other House of Congress, and charged with the duty of coming here, the law provides him with the means of coming. It is not at one session or another. The term "regular" is employed, but the object of the law is to bring the servants of the people here to the place of performing their duty, and it is a proper law. The people of this country are not disposed to quibble about small matters for the convenience and necessities of public business; they want to see every Senator here and every member of Congress. They are able to pay them a reasonable compensation, and they desire them to be in sympathy with their needs in earnestly seeking some method of relief.

I am willing, Mr. President, to vote for mileage for every servant of the people to perform his duty, when the people require him to do it, and to furnish him with the means and appliances to do it. This is not a bill of rich men, or the representatives of the wealthy; they are the servants of the people, with the right and duty imposed upon Congress to furnish them every means and every facility to perform their duty to the people.

Mr. PEPPER. I move the indefinite postponement of the further consideration of the joint resolution, and I call for the yeas and nays upon the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas moves that the joint resolution be indefinitely postponed; and on that motion demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPHE]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). I am paired on all such questions with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. WALZHAL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON].

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS. I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. BUTLER. I have a general pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. If his colleague will permit me, I should like to vote.

Mr. QUAY. I have no objection. I have no doubt if my colleague were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. BUTLER. I vote "yea."

Mr. HARRIS. I desire to inquire if the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL] is recorded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont is not recorded.

Mr. HARRIS. Having a general pair with the Senator from Vermont, and not being absolutely certain as to how either he or I would vote on this question, I will withhold my vote. I am inclined, however, to think that if I should vote at all I should vote "yea."

Mr. PLATT. I have a general pair with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON], and I therefore do not vote. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Resolved, That a sum of money be appropriated out of the contingent fund of the Senate to be used in such manner as may be deemed proper for the funeral of the deceased, and that the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House shall take suitable care in notifying the friends and the necessary expenses attending the execution of this order shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk be directed to communicate to the Senate a copy of these resolutions.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the House do now adjourn.

In accordance with the above resolutions, the Speaker announced the following committee on the part of the House:

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President, I offer the resolutions which I send to the desk, and ask for their adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolutions will be read. The Secretary read the resolutions, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep regret and profound sorrow of the death of Hon. J. Logan Chipman, late a Representative from the State of Michigan.

Resolved, That the Senate concur in the resolution of the House of Representatives, and that the sum of money be appropriated out of the contingent fund of the Senate to be used in such manner as may be deemed proper for the funeral of the deceased at his late residence in the State of Michigan; and that the committee on the part of the Senate, consisting of two Senators, be appointed to see that the necessary expenses attending the execution of this order shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

The resolutions were unanimously agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed as the committee on the part of the Senate, under the second resolution, Mr. McMILLAN, Mr. FROSTON, Mr. VILAS, Mr. GIBSON, and Mr. WHITE of California.

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

Now, let us see what is the meaning of the word "wise." Wise is a noun as well as an adjective. It means: "a person of superior intelligence; a sage; one seldom used as an independent word, except in such phrases as in my wise, in no wise, on this wise."

IN ANY WISE, IN ANY WAY, BY ANY MEANS.

IN NO WISE, IN NO WAY, ON NO ACCOUNT, BY NO MEANS.

Therefore, when I say "otherwise," I mean "in any other way under the sun, resignation included." That I think is very clearly what is meant. Of course, there is a temptation to follow up this kind of speculation, but that is enough for me. I do not care, for my vote here, what A B or C or D say. Any distinguished man said except that it throws more light and appeals to my reason, for I have a theory of the Constitution, and I can read the English language, and I think I know what "otherwise" means. There is the great underlying pervading theory of the Constitution. Like nature, it abhors a vacuum. There is no want that is indispensable to the existence of a great imperial nation that is not in the Constitution; and it is one of the first duties of this Congress to see that there are no empty places where there is work to be done.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I desire to say a few words—probably I shall not desire to occupy more than ten minutes—in conclusion of the debate.

Mr. CHANDLER (at 5 o'clock p. m.). I ask unanimous consent that the time for taking the vote may be extended fifteen minutes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire that the time for taking the vote on the pending resolution be extended fifteen minutes?

Mr. YANCEY. I have none.

Mr. HARRIS. Does the Senator from Massachusetts need that much time?

Mr. HOAR. I shall not take so much, I hope.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire, and the time for taking the vote is extended until a quarter past 5 o'clock.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, this seems to me as simple and plain a question as ever was confused by metaphysics or clouded by legal argument. The Constitution of the United States says that when there is a vacancy in this body by death, resignation, or otherwise—

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. It does not say that. The word "death" is not in the Constitution.

Mr. HOAR. Well, "resignation or otherwise," then. It may be filled when caused by resignation or otherwise. As my friend says, "death" is not mentioned, and if the word "otherwise" means "in any other way," then, of course, you cannot have the vacancy when a Senator dies, according to his suggestion.

Mr. President, one of two things is true: either when the framers of the Constitution said "otherwise" they meant "in any other way," and intended to provide for all cases of vacancy, or the framers of the Constitution meant to provide that there should be certain cases, naturally to be expected, easy to be foreseen, impossible not to have been thought of by them, in which the States should not be equally represented in the Senate.

Anybody doubts that? Now, remember that we are an experienced man, we knew very well that State Legislatures, bodies who, if their two branches acted separately, were to record the action of two artificial beings who were very likely to differ, and if they acted as they have done only since 1866 in joint convention were to be composed of a number of men who might be divided into three or four parties, and so could not agree—is there a member of the Senate who will stand up here and say that he doubts seriously that the framers of the Constitution did not mean to anticipate and provide for that condition of things?

If they did mean to provide for it, is there a man bold enough to justify his vote on this question by announcing that he believes in that case our fathers did not mean to have the Senate filled? They provided that ninety-nine one-hundredths of the American people could not for ninety-nine hundred or ninety-nine thousand years, if this nation should endure so long, under any conceivable circumstance or for any conceivable reason, have two Senators for forty-three States and the forty-fourth State have but one. It is a constitutional impossibility, so far as the wit of man could devise, and the power of a national Constitution could enact, was that when this Senate was to act on the important questions affecting the rights of the States and the people two voices should answer for each.

Now, that is the whole of it; and when there is a vacancy by resignation or "otherwise," a word comprehending every possible or conceivable case, the governor, if the Legislature has no power, is to appoint it. Upon the meaning of the word "otherwise" and upon the truth of these two simple propositions this whole debate has, in fact, turned. There have been winding and turning and searchings of precedents and splitting of hairs; but when any Senator objecting to the admission of Mr. Mantle is asked, Do you admit that the decision in the New Hampshire case was right? he is obliged to answer as the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] answered, "I voted for it because I thought it would be a hard case, but I have now concluded it was wrong." That is the substance of what the Senator says.

Why, Mr. President, the Senator from Connecticut and I, think, one other Senator sought to convict me of an inconsistency because when in the middle of the debate, the question not being before the Senate, when we were discussing something else (as he thinks, when we were discussing the New Hampshire case), Mr. Carpenter, of Wisconsin, asked me if I claimed or thought that if the Legislature met and separated the governor could then appoint. It was such a case as every lawyer in this body is familiar with. Somebody comes up to you when your head is full of something else, in the street or in the town meeting, and says: "Squire, how will it be, supposing?" I never heard of the lawyer who admitted that the opinions he gave under such circumstances were of much value. Almost as soon as I took my seat after that speech, on reflection, I came to the conclusion that I had made an erroneous answer, and I have acted on another principle in the Senate ever since.

If my honorable friend thinks I am to be held in law, or in morals, or in consistency, or in responsibility to public opinion by the answer which I gave to that shrewd question put by that shrewd gentleman at that time, what is his condition, who comes in here to take back four solemn votes of his own on cases before the Senate—the Bell case, the Blair case, the Marston case, and the Pasco case, two of them cast after the most deliberate and solemn debate, a debate participated in by the great constitutional lawyers of the country?

Mr. President, if there was nothing else in this case but these four great and recent precedents, I should argue both to the understanding and the conscience of the members of this body to stand by them. No court, no legislative body, no tribunal can maintain the respect of the people long that does not maintain its own consistency, and it does not regard its own solemn judgments. He and I struggled for half a winter to maintain that principle in the case of Mr. Kellogg, of Louisiana, against the gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber, angered, possessed with the feeling that Mr. Kellogg had been improperly admitted; and when the majority changed and the Democrats came in, they still held and held fast, under the lead of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Hampton], and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Bayard], now in honorable retirement, and the great jurist from Mississippi [Mr. Lamar], who recently went to his reward to the grief of all his countrymen North and South to the doctrine of sustaining the deliberate judgments of the Senate.

My honorable friend from Connecticut speculates about the possibility of a Legislature being influenced by corrupt reasons and refusing to elect a member of this body in order that the governor may appoint some ambitious person who is in league with him; and he thinks there may be a very bad result from our adhering to the solemn judgments of the Senate on that account. I should like to know what possibility of corrupt influence bringing popular liberty and republican government itself into discredit can be greater than the influence which, if this disregard of our precedents is established as a policy, will be brought to bear on the minds of the members of this body to seat or unseat men who have a rightful title to seats here according as they expect they will vote one way or the other on some exciting question pending.

I think that the attitude of my honorable friend from Connecticut, who has voted four times for this doctrine and now seeks to reverse it (honest as every man who knows him knows everything he does and thinks is honest), is still an attitude more fraught with a graver public danger than any he has suggested as flowing from one or the other exposition of the Constitution in this matter. My honorable friend says that although he thinks the New Hampshire cases were wrong still there is a distinction between those cases and the one before the Senate. Mr. PLATT. I have not said that I thought the New Hampshire cases were wrong.

Mr. HOAR. I asked the Senator whether he thought it was a sound constitutional decision, and he said no.

Mr. PLATT. I understood the Senator's question to be on the point as to whether, if the case was admitted to be decided on the question that a governor could appoint at the commencement of a term, I thought it was wrong.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator thought it was wrong.

Mr. PLATT. I did not say that.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator said he did not think it was right on any ground; but if he thinks so, on what ground?

Mr. PLATT. I do.

Mr. HOAR. On what ground?

Mr. PLATT. On the ground that the State of New Hampshire had not had an opportunity to make the election.

Mr. HOAR. Now, just let us look at that a moment and see where the true principle comes in. The Senator says if a State Legislature has tried its best to make an election, as in the case of Montana, where the Legislature met and balloted at the time fixed, and balloted dry after day and week after week, and failed because the members of that Legislature could not find a man on whom a majority could conscientiously agree, an inability which to every just and honest man is absolute in the conduct of the affairs of life, he will keep the man out; but when the whole people of a State deliberately put it into their constitution that their Legislature shall not meet at the proper time and shall not elect at the proper time, so that not only there has been no attempt on the part of the Legislature to do its duty, but the people say that the Legislature shall not try to do its constitutional and lawful duty, then in such case my honorable friend from Connecticut says of course he will let the man in.

The Constitution then, according to my honorable friend from Connecticut, is this: When the framers of the Constitution, Oliver Ellsworth, James Madison, and their associates, said if there is a vacancy "by resignation or otherwise," they did not mean in any other way but in the same way as resignation, if any other same way could be conceived of; that they intended that in a certain easily to be foreseen condition there should be vacancies in this body, and then further they provided that if a State Legislature tried its best to elect and could not, the governor should not have any power to elect, but the State should be presented; but if the people of the State put it into their constitution that their Legislature should not even try to elect a Senator, then it is such a hard case that the man ought to be admitted.

Mr. President, that is the whole of it. You may discuss and refine and bring into this matter the subtlety of dialectics and split hairs, if when the framers of the Constitution said "resignation or otherwise," they meant resignation or any other conceivable case, then this case belongs to Mr. Mantle. If they meant to narrow the provision to the case of a vacancy by resignation or something like it, to the case of the abandonment of his post for a good or evil reason by the Senator, and in the great field of other possibilities, and intended that the State should lose its equality and its sovereignty, that it should not be represented here, then the case is not with Mr. Mantle.

If the words "by resignation or otherwise" include the case at the beginning of a term where the State has sent nobody here and it was impossible to send any body here, then this case belongs Mr. Mantle upon the precedents; but if it be sound doctrine that it is a hard case and the State shall be excused and the governor shall appoint when it does not try, and the people say the Legislature shall not try to elect its Senators, then the case is not with Mr. Mantle upon our precedents. If the case be that upon precedent, upon principle, upon authority the people of these three States have a right to have their constitutional voice uttered, then for one—other gentlemen will do as they please—I should feel myself degraded and man-sworn if I voted to keep them out because I do not like the votes they are expected to give.

The VICE-PRESIDENT (at 5 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.). The Chair reminds the Senator from Massachusetts that the fifteen minutes' extension of time has expired.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Massachusetts is through.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The pending resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution reported by Mr. HOAR, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, March 27, 1893, as follows:

Resolved, That Lee Mantle is entitled to be admitted to a seat as a Senator from the State of Montana.

Mr. VANCE. I offer the following as a substitute:

Resolved, That Hon. Lee Mantle is not entitled to a seat in this body as a Senator from the State of Montana.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is upon agreeing to the substitute offered by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE] to the resolution reported by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR].

Mr. VANCE. On that I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALLEN (when his name was called). I am paired on this question with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COCHRAN]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. ALLISON (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON], and therefore withhold my vote. I should vote for the admission of Mr. Mantle if I were not paired.

Mr. FAULKNER (when Mr. CAMDEN's name was called). The junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CAMDEN] is necessarily detained from the Senate to-day. If he were present he would vote "yea" on the pending resolution. He is paired with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW].

Mr. CHANDLER (when his name was called). Upon this question I am paired with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. If he were present he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon (when Mr. DOLPH's name was called). My colleague [Mr. DOLPH] is detained from the Senate by illness. He is paired with the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. VOORHEES]. If my colleague were here he would vote "yea."

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], who is necessarily absent; but, he and I agreeing in opinion upon this question, he asked me to allow him to pair with another Senator. That pair has already been announced. I vote "yea."

Mr. PETTIGREW (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CAMDEN]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. AMERSON (when Mr. QUAY's name was called). My colleague, Mr. QUAY, is paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN]. If my colleague were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. RANSOM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. That pair has been transferred to the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON], and I vote "yea."

Mr. TURPIN (when Mr. VOORHEES's name was called). My colleague, Mr. VOORHEES, is paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH]. If my colleague were present he would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. ALLISON. My colleague, Mr. WILSON, is paired on this question with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE].

Mr. ALLEN. I am paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. COCHRAN]. If he were here I should vote "yea."

Mr. DUBOIS. I wish to inquire of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH] if he knows how his colleague [Mr. MORGAN] would vote on this question.

Mr. PUGH. I am satisfied that if my colleague were present he would vote "nay"; that is, in favor of the appointment by the governor.

Mr. DUBOIS. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] is paired for the pending proposition.

Mr. PASCO. Mr. President—
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The debate is proceeding by unanimous consent. The Chair hears no objection, and the Senator from Florida will proceed.

Mr. PASCO. I will state that in the list of yeas and nays on the Bell case, which is regarded by many as the same case as this, the VICE-PRESIDENT [Mr. MORGAN] was among those who voted "nay." Those who voted in the negative on the Bell case were the following Senators:

Messrs. BAILEY, CALL, CARPENTER, CORBELL, COKE, COOKING, DAVIS of Illinois, Eaton, Farley, Garland, GROVER, HARRIS, HERRON, Hill of Georgia, Houston, Johnston, Jones, KEMMAN, LAMAR, MANN, MORGAN, PENNINGTON, RANSOM, SALTER, VANCE, VETER, WALLACE, and WILKES.

That is the official record in the case.

Mr. PUGH. There are a good many who voted that way then and vote differently now.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I object to discussion.

Mr. DUBOIS. I submit that it is customary in this body when a Senator announces how his colleague would vote that his word is taken.

Mr. STEWART. And he is paired accordingly.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. This is a matter over which the Chair has no control. The announcement of the pair was made when the name of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] was called.

Mr. MANDERSON (after having voted in the negative). I desire to change my vote. I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 30; as follows:

So the substitute submitted by Mr. VANCE was agreed to.
Mr. MANDERSON. I enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the substitute was agreed to.

Mr. VANCE. I move to lay that motion on the table.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska moves to reconsider the vote by which the substitute was agreed to, and the Senator from North Carolina moves to lay the motion on the table.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask unanimous consent to say a word. Of course I understand that the motion to lay on the table is not debatable.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senator from Nebraska will proceed.

Mr. MANDERSON. My purpose in changing my vote was that I might put myself in a parliamentary position to enter the motion to reconsider.

Mr. VANCE. I think I shall have to object.
Mr. MANDERSON. I did so simply because of the fact that there seemed to be a dispute as to pairs. That dispute certainly can not be ended now. I think that common fairness to those who have objected to the disposition of the pairs should prompt the Senate to let the vote go over until another day, so that the question as to the pairs can be properly disposed of.

Mr. VANCE. I object to debate, Mr. President.

Mr. MILLS and others. Question.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that debate proceeds only by unanimous consent. The Senator from North Carolina interposes an objection.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Pending the motion of the Senator from North Carolina to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Nebraska to reconsider, the Senator from Colorado moves that the Senate do now adjourn. [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt.

Mr. VANCE. I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the Senator from Colorado to withdraw the motion to adjourn in order that I may move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I withdraw the motion for that purpose.

Mr. HARRIS. Then I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Tennessee. [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt.

Mr. HARRIS. Then let us have the yeas and nays on the motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business.

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, August 24, 1893, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, August 23, 1893.

The House met at 10 o'clock a. m.

The SPEAKER. The Chaplain is absent this morning, the reason being, as the Chair assumes, that he did not know of the change in the hour of meeting. The Clerk will read the Journal.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

CONTESTED ELECTIONS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following letter from the Clerk of the House, which was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Elections:

SIR: I have the honor to lay before the House of Representatives a list of contests for seats in the House of Representatives for the Fifty-third Congress of the United States, notices of which have been filed in the office of the Clerk of the House, and also to transmit therewith all original testimony, papers, and documents relating thereto, as follows, to wit:

- STATE OF ALABAMA.
Fifth district—Martin W. Whitley vs. James E. Cobb, three packages.
STATE OF CALIFORNIA.
Third district—Warren B. English vs. Samuel G. Hilborn, two packages.
STATE OF GEORGIA.
Tenth district—Thomas E. Watson vs. James C. C. Black, two packages.
STATE OF ILLINOIS.
Eighth district—Lewis Steward vs. Robert A. Childs, two packages.
STATE OF KANSAS.
Second district—H. L. Moore vs. Edward H. Funtston, five packages.
STATE OF MISSOURI.
Eleventh district—John J. O'Neill vs. Charles F. Joy, two packages.
STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA.
Fifth district—A. H. A. Williams vs. Thomas Settle, two packages.
STATE OF TENNESSEE.
Eighth district—P. H. Thrasher vs. B. A. Enloe, three packages.
STATE OF VIRGINIA.
Fourth district—J. T. Goode vs. J. F. Epes, three packages.

The Clerk has also received a notice of contest from F. D. Koonce vs. B. F. Crady, Third District, North Carolina, but said notice has not been accompanied by any testimony, and consequently the original notices laid before the House for such action as it may deem proper to take. The Clerk has also received notice of contest and answer thereto in the case of Frank Balzell vs. J. F. Stallings, Second Congressional district of Alabama, but it was accompanied by testimony; all of which papers are laid before the House for its action thereon.

In compliance with the act approved March 2, 1887, entitled "An act to regulate the proceedings in contested elections," such portions of the testimony in the above cases as the parties interested agreed to or were compelled to present to the Clerk, after giving the requisite notices, have been printed and indexed, together with the notices of contest and the answers thereto, and such portions of the testimony as were not printed with all the original papers have been sealed up and are ready to be laid before the Committee on Elections.

Two copies of the printed testimony in each case have been mailed to the contestant, and the same number to the opposer. The law in reference to the filing of both the contestant and contestant in each case has been complied with as far as possible up to the receipt by the Clerk of said bonds. Others have not yet been returned to him by the parties to these contests; so far as the bonds have been furnished to the Clerk they are also ready to be laid before the Committee on Elections upon the order of the House.

Very respectfully,

JAMES KIRK,

Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Hon. CHARLES F. CRISP,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PAYMENT OF CLERKS TO MEMBERS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Clerk of the House, explaining the insufficiency of the contingent fund for the payment of clerks to members; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

EXCUSSED FROM COMMITTEE SERVICE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the request of Mr. BOUTELLE to be relieved from service on the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries; which, without objection, was granted.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message from the President, by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had approved and signed joint resolutions of the following titles:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 1) making available appropriations for the payment of session employes of the House and Senate during the first session of the Fifty-third Congress.

Joint resolution (H. Res. 2) for the appropriate commemoration of the one-hundredth anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of the Capitol of the United States, September 18, 1793; and ment, at any time by an additional issue of greenbacks, and wishes to maintain their parity and their value equal with gold, he must provide for the deposit also of a corresponding sum in the Treasury to keep up that redemption or resumption fund. That is the difference between the bill and the amendment.

One is a perfectly safe system by old and tried instrumentalities. The other is a new contrivance without restrictions. You simply loan so many greenbacks upon a like deposit of bonds. You give them more powers and privileges than you give to the banks without one particle of the restriction that you place upon the national banks.

Mr. BATE. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. COCKRELL. I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. BATE. I understand the banks can make a maximum issue of money on their deposit of bonds. There is no minimum. Now, has the maximum issue been reached by the banks?

Mr. MCPHERSON. I have already stated that an amendment has been proposed to the bill by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] regulating the withdrawal of circulating notes by national banking associations. I have always been of the opinion that there ought to be some restriction in the national banking act which would not permit a national bank to withdraw at pleasure. I have always been of that opinion, but unfortunately we have made no such provision. It is now proposed, however, that when this bill becomes a law, if the amendment shall prevail, and I assume it will, the national banks can not then retire circulation except in the manner designated by the amendment, and with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency. So we shall have a provision that whatever is in circulation now can not be retired except in some way that will be satisfactory to the financial administration of the Government.

Mr. BATE. I desire to know of the Senator if there is any provision to be made that will cause the banks to issue circulation to the maximum?

Mr. MCPHERSON. I can only answer the Senator by saying that if he were the president of a national bank, and the Government of the United States should offer to give him 10 per cent more circulation than he had before without any new cost to him, it would seem to me that self-interest would dictate that he should apply for that additional circulation. I do not see how such a provision would have a very beneficial effect upon the volume of currency, which the Senator from Missouri is most anxious to increase. It would induce national banks to deposit new bonds and take out additional circulation.

I have every reason to believe that under this bill the increased circulation will amount to $50,000,000. I believe that with the $19,000,000 which this gives to the banks without any new deposit of bonds, with the addition of the amount already taken out or applied for ever since this bill was introduced, by the time you will get some $30,000,000 more, it will make nearly $40,000,000, and with the added inducement which this bill will confer it is reasonable to suppose that the currency will be increased to the extent of $50,000,000 or $60,000,000. Further, I am told that the national banks and the savings banks of this country hold to-day more than $100,000,000 of United States bonds. This being so, there is no reason in the world why circulation should not be taken out to the extent of $100,000,000, especially while there is such a demand for currency.

Mr. BATE. As I stated before, it seems that the national banks have a right to go to the maximum in the issue of currency. Have they done so? Is there not a very large margin upon which they have not issued currency which, if they had wanted to increase the volume of the currency, they could have issued?

If they have not come up to the margin heretofore, will they do it now? That is my question.

Mr. MCPHERSON. The Senator from Tennessee is perfectly well aware of the fact that on the gold basis, where every dollar issued by the Government is as good as gold, where not only the circulation, but the bonds, are as good as gold, our 4 per cent bonds were selling upon the market a year ago at 125 to 134 upon the par value of the bond. No banking institution can very well pay that premium, paying 1 per cent tax on the circulation, and still maintain a very profitable banking business. At all events, no banking institution could do it with the knowledge before it that in the course of thirteen years—the maturity of the bonds—the 28 to 34 per cent of premium which it pays is to be wiped out absolutely.

The result of all this is simply that it has prevented the taking out of new circulation. The bonds have now gone down to about 108 or 109. I think the last sale I noticed was at 111. The bonds have thirteen years to run and are selling to-day at a premium of 11 above their face value. Give the banks the increased circulation proposed up to the par value of the bonds, the bonds having been cheapened in the market in the last year, and then they will not only take out the circulation provided for, but they will also take out new and other circulation upon a deposit of new bonds.

Mr. BATE. What guarantee has the Senator that they will do it if they are given the right?

Mr. MCPHERSON. It will be an additional inducement, surely.

Mr. GRAY. May I answer the question of the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. COCKRELL. I yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. GRAY. Under the present law a bank buys in the market United States bonds, say $100,000, and pays of course the market value of those bonds, whether it be 115, or 127, as it is used to be. For that it gets $90,000 of circulation, or can get it if it chooses to deposit those bonds in the Treasury. But having paid a high price for the bonds, the 90 per cent is not in some cases a sufficient inducement to the bank to take out the circulation. The banks say, "If you will give us more circulation, that is, give us circulation to the full par value of the bonds, or if you were to give it to us for the market value of the bonds, which is still better, we could then afford to issue the circulation." The restriction of 90 per cent is a burden upon the banks, and the nearer you approach to a hundred per cent the nearer you approach to wiping out that restriction entirely.

Suppose the national-banking law had said, "When you deposit $100,000 in bonds you can take out only $50,000 of circulation," I take it no bank would be willing to take out circulation upon those terms. The nearer you approach the $100,000 the easier it will be for them to take out the circulation; that is all.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President—

Mr. COCKRELL. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. GEORGE. It has been suggested, even asserted, two or three times in this debate that there is a serious objection to the proposition made by the Senator from Missouri, to issue greenbacks upon the faith of the United States bonds, because those greenbacks constitute a demand obligation upon the Treasury of the United States, which the Treasury of the United States would be unable to meet, and that that objection does not lie against the issuance of additional national-bank notes.

In other words, Mr. President, we are met with the objection to the proposition of the Senator from Missouri that we may allow the national banks to buy every bond of the United States and upon them issue notes to the face value of the bonds, which is the proposition of the bill before the Senate; that that would be an entirely safe operation, because those national-bank notes do not constitute a demand obligation on the part of the Treasury of the United States, whilst the issuance of Treasury notes under the proposition made by the Senator from Missouri would constitute a demand obligation on the United States; and that is held up before us to terrify us from adding to the currency of the country, as we can largely do if the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri is adopted. We are to be terrified from sustaining that proposition and at the same time we are to be induced to sustain the proposition to allow the national banks to buy bonds to any amount and issue notes upon them, because the notes of the national banks are not demand obligations on the part of the United States.

Mr. President, that is just a mistake in law. That is all there is to it. Every note issued by a national bank under section 5229 of the Revised Statutes constitutes a demand obligation on the Treasury of the United States. It is not, as has been supposed and as has been argued, that the United States, upon the deposit of United States bonds for the issuance of the national-bank notes, constitute themselves as a trustee to dispose of the bonds for the purpose of redeeming United States notes. That is not the law, sir. The deposit of bonds is not a fund out of which by the sale of those bonds the United States can get the money to redeem national-bank notes. On the contrary, every national-bank note that is presented to a national bank and not paid is immediately presentable to the Comptroller of the Currency, and when presented what is it his duty to do? Let us see about that.

Immediately upon declaring bonds of an association—

That is, a bank—

forfeited for nonpayment of its notes, the Comptroller shall give notice, in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury shall direct, to each such association to present them for payment at the Treasury of the United States; and the same shall be paid as presented, in lawful currency of the United States; whereupon the Comptroller may, in his discretion, etc.

Then when he wants to get back the money he has to advertise the bonds for at least thirty days in order to get it. So the hypothesis upon which the proposition of the Senator from Missouri is condemned is an untrue one. The note of every national bank issued in this country is as much a demand obligation upon the Treasury of the United States as the greenback or the Treasury note.

Will the Senator from Missouri allow me another moment or two?

Mr. COCKRELL. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. It is said that the United States can not safely upon a deposit or a reserve fund of $100,000,000 in gold increase these demand obligations upon the Government. That is the view presented. Now, let us see whether that is true. That view, recollect, is presented by the same Senators who wish to increase the demand obligations of the national banks; and upon what basis? Let us see. The United States has $100,000,000 of gold for $346,000,000 of greenbacks. That is $1 in gold for $3.50 in greenbacks. Well, how much have the national banks? I believe that they have a deposit of 5 per cent in the Treasury for redemption—that is, that is $20 for $1. So in the view of those Senators this great Government, which collects and disburses more than $300,000,000 a year, can not safely issue demand obligations upon the Treasury to a larger extent than $3.50 to $1, and at the same time those gentlemen say that the national banks may issue circulation upon a deposit of $1 for $20 of circulation. Now, that looks to me a little unreasonable.

But, further than that, they say that the national banks, it is true, have only 5 per cent in the Treasury to meet redemption; but they have a great many other assets which they can apply to the redemption of their demand notes. Now, let us see how that is. I wish to call attention of Senators, especially those who have such a love for the national banks, to a table issued by the Treasury, found on page 102 of the Coinage Laws. They have 5 per cent deposited in the United States Treasury for redemption. What other demand obligations exist against the national banks—obligations which they are bound by law to pay on the very day that demand is made? They have deposits to what amount to meet that demand obligation, according to this table? They have 16-10-10 per cent, say 17 per cent.

In other words, it is perfectly safe in the opinion of those Senators for the national banks to have $1 for every $20 in circulation for redemption purposes, and it is also perfectly safe for the same banks to have ten other dollars of demand obligations for one in the national banks. That is the position. By that kind of argumentation the very meritorious and necessary provision contained in the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri is to be voted down.

Now, let us look at it again. We can not issue safely, say they, Treasury notes upon the deposit of bonds, because it largely increases the demand obligations of the Treasury of the United States; with all the taxing power of this great Government the Treasury of the United States can not meet a demand obligation of more than 3 to 1, and yet when it comes to a national bank 5 per cent, or 20 to 1, is entirely sufficient, and when it comes to their demand obligations for deposit, then 10 to 1 is sufficient.

Mr. President, I think with that statement there can be no objection to the proposition made by the Senator from Missouri in the mind of anyone who is willing to allow the national banks to go on in the way they have been going on, with cash for redemption of only $1 for $20 and with cash for other demand obligations of only $1 for $10.

Mr. CAMDEN. May I ask the Senator from Mississippi a question?

Mr. COCKRELL. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia to ask a question.

Mr. CAMDEN. Does not the law require the national banks to keep 15 per cent against their deposits?

Mr. GEORGE. I do not know what the law is; I know what the fact is.

Mr. CAMDEN. Is it not the fact that they have to keep 15 per cent reserve against deposits? If so, it is not 10 to 1, but 6 to 1.

Mr. GEORGE. Well, put it 6 to 1.

Mr. CAMDEN. And 25 per cent in the case of other banks would be 4 to 1.

Mr. GEORGE. Very well, put it 6 to 1. Ought not the United States to have as good a chance to redeem its demand obligations with 3 to 1 as the national banks have with 6 to 1?

Mr. McPHERSON. May I ask the Senator from Mississippi a question?

Mr. GEORGE. Of course.

Mr. McPHERSON. Is the Senator not also aware that as an additional security for the note-holder and for all the obligations the Government assumes, all the property, all the stock, all the reserve or surplus fund, and everything in a national bank the Government has a first lien upon?

Mr. GEORGE. Oh, Mr. President, I have not been talking about the ultimate security of the national bank circulation, nor have gentlemen who merely set to the issue of these notes upon the bond of the United States objected to the ultimate responsibility of the United States. We are talking about demand obligations which must be met at the very time the demand is made or discredit follows. That is what we are talking about; and gentlemen are now so enamored with some kind of a divinity, I know not what, which seems to hedge about the national banks that they are perfectly content, with all obligations payable on demand, that these institutions shall have only 5 per cent of a redemption fund, 20 to 1, and only 6 to 1 for their other demand obligations.

As the whole national-banking system, notes and everything else, depends upon the bonds of the United States, the credit of the United States, it does seem to me that this great Government with its unlimited taxing power can float demand obligations as well at 6 to 1 as well as a national bank.

Mr. MILLS, rose.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, I am always very good natured and I yielded gladly to let others answer questions; but I was just about making a calculation about the amount of a national bank notes that have been retired. I doubt not it will be thought I am trying to oppress the national banks, these poor dilapidated institutions, and to deny them some privileges they are struggling for while they are now making a dollar out of nothing.

Now I figured up exactly what national banks got for the fiscal year September 1, 1891, to September 1, 1892, just to see if they are really making expenses; if they are entitled to the charitable consideration and favoritism of the greatest Government on earth; if they are such objects of charity and benevolence and patriotism that we should extend to them favors and privileges and pecuniary aid which we would deny to the citizen.

I did that from September 1, 1891, to March 1, 1892, an average of six months, during which they had a capital of $675,456,310, up to that time with that amount of capital they had accumulated a surplus of $234,676,901.27, or a surplus of 34.75 per cent of their entire capital.

Now, their gross earnings for the six months from September 1, 1891, to March 1, 1892, were $75,110,650.89, or 11.12 per cent. Their net earnings during that time were $34,363,090.45, or 5.09 per cent. That was their absolute net earnings.

Now, what was the difference between the net earnings and the gross earnings? I have given the two amounts. The difference was $40,747,560.44. How did that arise? They charged off from the gross earnings the amount of loans and premiums, $11,731,503.64, and all expenses, taxes, etc., amounting to $28,930,056.80.

In other words, of the gross earnings they charged off $40,747,560.44. During that time, for six months, they declared dividends of $46,834,800, or 7.78 per cent. But their net earnings were 5.09 per cent and they added a portion of it to the surplus fund.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri will please suspend.

Mr. COCKRELL. Certainly.

SENATOR FROM MONTANA.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is the resolution reported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution reported by Mr. HOAR from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, March 27, 1893, as follows:

Resolved, That Lee Mantle is entitled to be admitted to a seat in the Senate from the State of Montana.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE] will be read.

THE SECRETARY. Strike out all after the word "resolved," and add in lieu thereof:

That Hon. Lee Mantle is not entitled to a seat in this body as a Senator from the State of Montana.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment having been adopted, the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] moved to reconsider the vote by which it was agreed to. The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE] moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table, which is the pending motion before the Senate.

Mr. STEWART. On that, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALDRICH (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. PASCO (when Mr. ALLEN's name was called). I wish to announce the pair of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT].

Mr. BERRY (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY]. If he votes "yes" I should vote "yes" and he would vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). On Thursday last, at my request, I was paired with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. My impression is that he considers the pair as still holding, but I have authority to transfer my pair to the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICE], and I therefore vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH], but we agree on this question, as I am assured by his colleague [Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon], and I vote "yea."

Mr. PASCO. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH] is paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY].

Mr. GORMAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE]. If he were present he would vote "nay" and I should vote "yea."

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. He and I agreeing upon this question, the Senator from Vermont is paired with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER]. If the Senator from Vermont were present, he would vote "yea," and the Senator from New Hampshire would vote "nay." Having been relieved from my pair with the Senator from Vermont by this arrangement, I consented to pair with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], who, if present, would vote "nay" upon this question, and I should vote "yea."

Mr. LINDSAY, when his name was called. I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL]. If he were here, he would vote "nay," and I should vote "yea."

Mr. MARTIN (when his name was called). I am paired generally with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], but I understand that if he were present, he would vote "nay." As I agree with him upon the question, I will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. VEST. I should like to have the attention of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN]. I received a telegram from the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY], stating that he has a regular pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], but they are both on the same side of this question, and the Senator from Pennsylvania asked me to pair with him. My vote would be in the affirmative. Has the Senator from Alabama voted?

Mr. MORGAN (after having voted in the negative). I voted with the understanding that a pair had been arranged between the Senator from Pennsylvania and some other gentleman, which relieves me from my pair.

Mr. VEST. Then I announces my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY], who would vote "nay" if he were present, and I should vote "yea."

Mr. ALDRICH. Has not a pair been announced between the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]?

Mr. VEST. Do I understand that such a pair has been announced? I should like to ask the Senator from Rhode Island, if I can be heard, whether such a pair has been announced? There are five of us on the floor at once.

Mr. ALDRICH. It seems I was mistaken in supposing the pair had been announced. It was stated by two or three Senators around me that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] is paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL].

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I understand an arrangement has been made by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] stands paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL].

Mr. VEST. Then I will vote. I vote "yea."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. LINDSAY. I understand that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] is paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON]. I will therefore vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. MCPHERSON. Did I understand the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] to announce a pair between the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS] and myself?

Mr. ALDRICH. No; I announced a pair between myself and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS].

Mr. MCPHERSON. Then I vote "yea."

Mr. ALLISON. I am paired on this question with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]. If he were here I should vote "nay." My colleague [Mr. WILSON] is paired on this question with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE].

Mr. CAREY. I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH]. I will transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] and vote.

Mr. PASCO. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] is paired with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICE].

Mr. CAREY. I was wrongly informed.

Mr. HILL. I desire to know who is paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] is paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], and I am paired with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR].

Mr. HILL. I thank the Senator for the information which I asked the Chair to give.

Mr. BERRY. The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY] having announced a pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH] I vote "yea."

Mr. PASCO. There is so much confusion about the pairs (one or two Senators having been announced as paired with more than one) I ask unanimous consent that the pairs be reported at the desk so that there may be no mistake as to the vote.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection that will be done.

Mr. TELLER. I wish to announce that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] is paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY].

Mr. PASCO. I withdraw my request.

Mr. HILL. I renew it. Let us have the pairs announced so that there may be no sort of mistake about the vote.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the pairs will be announced. The Chair asks the attention of the Senate to the reading of the pairs.

The Secretary read as follows:

Mr. ALDRICH with Mr. HIGGINS.

Mr. ALLEN with Mr. COLQUITT.

Mr. DOLPH with Mr. CAREY.

Mr. BRICE with Mr. LODGE.

Mr. GORMAN with Mr. TURPIE.

Mr. MORRILL with Mr. CHANDLER.

Mr. HARRIS with Mr. HOAR.

Mr. GIBSON with Mr. DANIEL.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon with Mr. QUAY.

Mr. GORDON with Mr. ALLISON.

Mr. HALE with Mr. WILSON.

The result was announced—yeas 31, nays 23; as follows:

So the motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs upon the resolution reported by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], as amended on motion of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]. The resolution as amended will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That Hon. Lee Mantle is not entitled to a seat in this body as a Senator from the State of Montana.

Mr. GRAY. I rise to parliamentary inquiry: I ask whether the vote just taken was not to lay on the table the motion for a reconsideration?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It was.

Mr. GRAY. If that be so, is it not the end of this episode?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Delaware that it was a motion to reconsider the amendment adopted by the Senate, which was laid on the table. The question now recurs upon the resolution reported by the Senator from Massachusetts, as amended, on motion of the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. TELLER. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask that the resolution as amended be read. Let the proposition we are now to vote on be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution as amended will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution as amended, as follows:

Resolved, That Hon. Lee Mantle is not entitled to a seat in this body as a Senator from the State of Montana.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Upon agreeing to the resolution as amended the yeas and nays are demanded.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

I also desire to announce that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL] is paired with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER]. If those Senators were present, the Senator from Vermont would vote "yea" and the Senator from New Hampshire would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. ALLISON. On this question my colleague [Mr. WILSON] is paired with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. My colleague would vote "nay" and the Senator from Maine would vote "yea." I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]. I should vote "nay" and he would vote "yea" if present, I understand.

Mr. MARTIN. I am paired with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. If he were present he would vote "nay," and as I would vote the same way, I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 32, nays 29; as follows:

So the resolution as amended was agreed to.

SENATOR FROM WASHINGTON.

Mr. VANCE. The case from the State of Washington is pending, and if it is the pleasure of the Senate to take it up, I ask that that be now voted on.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution reported by Mr. HOAR, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, March 27, 1893, as follows:

Resolved, That John B. Allen is entitled to be admitted to a seat as a Senator from the State of Washington.

Mr. VANCE. I suppose the result can be reached not by offering a substitute, but by taking a direct vote on the report. ["No," "No."]

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution of the committee.

Mr. VANCE. In deference to those who prefer to follow the precedent, I move to amend by inserting the word "not."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from North Carolina will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the word "is" in the first line of the resolution insert the word "not;" so as to read:

Resolved, That John B. Allen is not entitled to be admitted to a seat as a Senator from the State of Washington.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE].

Mr. STEWART. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALLISON (when his name was called). On this question

I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]. My colleague [Mr. WILSON] is paired with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE].

Mr. CAREY (when his name was called). I am paired on this question with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I again announce the transfer of my pair with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICE]. I vote "yea."

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] upon this question. If he were present I should vote "yea" and he would vote "nay." The Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL] is paired with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER]. If those Senators were here the Senator from Vermont would vote "yea" and the Senator from New Hampshire would vote "nay."

Mr. MARTIN (when his name was called). I am paired generally with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], but if he were here he would vote "nay" and I would also vote "nay." I therefore vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DUBOIS. I ask that the pairs be announced.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the pairs will be announced.

The Secretary read as follows:

Mr. GORDON with Mr. ALLISON.

Mr. HALE with Mr. WILSON.

Mr. DOLPH with Mr. CAREY.

Mr. BRICE with Mr. LODGE.

Mr. HARRIS with Mr. HOAR.

Mr. MORRILL with Mr. CHANDLER.

Mr. MANDERSON. I desire to announce my pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN].

The result was announced—yeas 32, nays 29; as follows:

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

Several SENATORS. Let it be read.

The resolution as amended was read, as follows:

Resolved, That John B. Allen is not entitled to be admitted to a seat as a Senator from the State of Washington.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

INCREASE OF NATIONAL-BANK CIRCULATION.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 453) to provide for the issue of circulating notes to national banks; the pending question being on the amendment proposed by Mr. COCKRELL.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President—

Mr. VORHEES. Before the Senator from Missouri proceeds, will he allow me a single word?

Mr. COCKRELL. Certainly.

Mr. VORHEES. I do not see, Mr. President, to discuss the merits of any of these amendments. The amendment which we voted on awhile ago, offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] had much to commend it to me, and under different circumstances, and as an independent proposition, I would have voted for it. Standing here, however, charged with a duty by the Committee on Finance, I felt it my duty to protect the bill from amendments as far as possible. For that reason I gave the vote that I did, and for that reason I shall oppose, as I am now advised in my own mind, any amendment with the exception of the one offered by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] in regard to the right of banks to retire their currency. I reserve

TRANSACTIONS OF NATIONAL BANKS.

Mr. PEPPER. At the suggestion of the Senator from Colorado, I see no parliamentary obstacle in the way of modifying the resolution I made to a request that the pending business be temporarily laid aside in order that the resolution may be taken up, with the understanding that if that request is objected to I shall then renew my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas asks that the unfinished business, the bill now before the Senate, House bill No. 1, be temporarily laid aside for the purpose of taking up and considering a resolution which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. PEPPER on the 22d instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to inform the Senate.

First, Whether and in what respect the national banks, or any of them, in the cities of Boston, New York and Philadelphia are being now carried in violation of law.

Second, Whether said banks are paying depositors' checks promptly in lawful money.

Third, Whether said banks, or any of them, are demanding rates of interest higher than those provided by law, for the loan of money or in discounting notes and bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kansas? The Chair hears none and the resolution is before the Senate for consideration. The question is on the motion to refer the resolution to the Committee on Finance, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I desire to inquire if the Senator from Kansas has modified the resolution or does the resolution stand as originally introduced?

Mr. PEPPER. It stands as originally introduced.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. That being the case, I shall vote to refer it to the Committee on Finance, because I am decidedly opposed to the resolution in its present form.

Mr. FRYE. Is the question on a reference?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLPH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], who does not appear to be in the Chamber, and therefore I shall not vote.

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. PUGH (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. I do not know how he would vote on this motion. I should vote "nay" if he were present.

Mr. McPHERSON (when Mr. SMITH's name was called). I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. SMITH] is paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS]. At least I am so informed. I do not know whether the Senator from Idaho has voted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho has voted.

Mr. McPHERSON. My colleague would vote "yea" if present.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DUBOIS (after having voted in the negative). I voted inadvertently. I see that the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] is not present. I am paired with him, and therefore withdraw my vote.

Mr. DAVIS. I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TAYLOR].

Mr. CAMERON. I am paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER].

Mr. PLATT (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON]. I voted supposing that he is in the Chamber, but I do not see him and I withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 21; as follows:

YEAS—35.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE MUTCHLER.

Mr. CAMERON. Mr. President, I ask that the resolutions which came from the House of Representatives relative to the death of my late colleague in that House be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate resolutions from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, August 31, 1893.

Resolved, That the House has heard with deep regret and profound sorrow of the death of Hon. William Mutchler, late a Representative from the State of Pennsylvania.

Resolved, That the Clerk be directed to transmit a copy of these resolutions to the Senate, and send a duly attested copy to the widow of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to our deceased colleague the House do now adjourn.

Mr. CAMERON. Mr. President, I offer the resolutions which I send to the desk, and I desire to accompany them with the statement that at some appropriate time in the future I shall address some remarks to the Senate in reference to my late colleague in the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolutions submitted by the Senator from Pennsylvania will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. William Mutchler, late a Representative from the State of Pennsylvania.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased the Senate do now adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolutions.

The resolutions were unanimously agreed to; and (at 3 o'clock and 13 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, September 1, 1893, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, August 31, 1893.

The House met at 12 m. Prayer by Rev. ISAAC W. CANTER, of Washington, D. C.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland, until Monday, on account of important business.

To Mr. SICKLES, for one week, on account of sickness.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. WHITE, by unanimous consent, obtained leave to withdraw from the files of the House papers in the case of George C. Abbey, there being no adverse report.

PRINTING FOR COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution I send to the desk.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Affairs be authorized to employ "printers" at designated printing offices, or call on printers that they may be in need of in connection with subject referred to that committee.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this resolution?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that these printing privileges are being extended very far. The law provides that printing, when it exceeds $50 in cost, can only be done upon a concurrent resolution, and I observe that there is no limit named in this resolution, or in some others that have already been passed. Heretofore it has been customary to grant this privilege to that committee, and the Committee on the Conduct of the War, and the Committee on Ways and Means, and I do not think we ought to extend it much further.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I will say to you, I send from Tennessee that during the last ten years I have been in Congress this privilege has always been granted to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. If he desires to have a provision inserted in the resolution that the cost shall not exceed $500 I have no objection, because, in fact, it will not reach anywhere near that amount.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. That is not necessary, because if the cost does exceed that amount a concurrent resolution will be required.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Yes. I will say to my friend from Tennessee that this is a copy of the resolution that has been adopted every Congress since I have been here.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I will not object in this case, but I do not think this privilege of printing ought to be extended so far as we have been extending it this session.

The resolution was adopted.

EASTERN JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY.

Mr. GOODNIGHT, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 6) to create the eastern judicial district of Kentucky, and to change the present judicial districts of Kentucky, and fix the time and places for holding courts in said districts; which was read twice, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

SETTLERS IN OKLAHOMA.

Mr. FLYNN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to introduce a bill and have it referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I would ask the gentleman why he makes that request at this time? Is he sick or compelled to go away?

Mr. FLYNN. This is a bill affecting settlers out there, and which requires action prior to the 22d day of September. Therefore I ask leave to introduce it now, so that the committee may have an opportunity to consider it without delay.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. We have a great many bills on this side that we would like to get in.

Mr. FLYNN. I understand that; but this case is urgent.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

An act granting settlers on certain lands in Oklahoma Territory the right to continue their business enterprises and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The bill (H. R. 5) was accordingly read twice, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I shall have to object to any further unanimous consents. I call up for further consideration the report of the Committee on Rules.

THE RULES.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the pending amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. PICKLER to an amendment proposed by Mr. Hooker of Mississippi:

Strike out "eleven" and insert in lieu thereof "nine"; so as to make the paragraph read:

"On Rules, to consist of nine members."

The question was taken on the amendment; and the Speaker declared that the yeas seemed to have it.

Mr. PICKLER. I ask for a division.

Mr. HOOKER of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOOKER of Mississippi. Would it be in order for me now, as the mover of the original amendment, to accept the amendment of the gentleman from South Dakota?

The SPEAKER. The House is voting upon that amendment. If the House adopts it that will settle the question.

Mr. HOOKER of Mississippi. But if I should accept it that would dispense with the necessity of a vote.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that when the House is dividing the gentleman can not accept the amendment.

Mr. HOOKER of Mississippi. Then that will put me to the necessity of moving to reconsider.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can do anything that the rules permit him to do.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 57, noes 89.

Mr. PICKLER. I ask for the yeas and nays on this question. The yeas and nays were not ordered; only eleven voting therefor.

So the amendment of Mr. PICKLER was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs on the amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER], which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

In the clause relating to the committee on Rules strike out the word "nine" and insert "eleven," so as to read, "On Rules, to consist of eleven members."

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. Debate is exhausted.

Mr. KILGORE. Is it in order to offer an amendment to the amendment so as to strike out "eleven" and insert "seven?"

The SPEAKER. That motion would be in order.

Mr. KILGORE. I make that motion.

The question being taken on Mr. KILGORE's amendment to the amendment, it was rejected; there being—ayes 33, noes 91.

The question recurred on the amendment of Mr. HOOKER of Mississippi.

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 48, noes 95.

Mr. HOOKER of Mississippi. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered, only 19 voting in favor thereof.

So the amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. If there are no other amendments to be offered to Rule X, the Clerk will begin the reading of Rule XI.

The Clerk proceeded to read Rule XI, when

Mr. CATCHINGS said: Mr. Speaker, if there are no amendments to be offered to this section I will ask that it be passed without reading.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER], as the Chair understands, desires to offer an amendment.

Mr. BOATNER. I have an amendment which I wish to offer to Rule XI.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Then I ask that the reading be dispensed with down to the point where these amendments will come in.

Mr. HOOKER of Mississippi. It would be more in order to read the whole rule.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the proposed rule.

The Clerk, proceeding to read Rule XI, read the following:

2. To the revenue and the bonded debt of the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. KILGORE. I move to amend by inserting after the word "revenue" in the clause just read the words "and such measures as purport to raise revenue." The object of this amendment is to prevent the squabbles which have so frequently taken place in this House in regard to the jurisdiction of particular committees. Measures are often presented here which, on their face, purport to raise revenue, a provision on that subject being introduced for the purpose of giving them a standing in the House and securing right of way.

Mr. DINGLEY. I suggest to the gentleman that the language of his amendment does not change the effect of the proposed rule, but is simply a less appropriate way of expressing the idea already conveyed.

Mr. KILGORE. No, sir. Frequently bills are presented here which on their face purport to raise revenue, but which, notwithstanding that fact, are referred perhaps to the Committee on Appropriations or the Committee on Agriculture, which committee thus gets control of the subject. Now, if bills of this character are sent to the Ways and Means Committee that committee would treat them as they deserve to be treated under such circumstances.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. KILGORE, it was agreed to there being—ayes 52, noes 9.

The Clerk, continuing the reading of Rule XI, read the following:

51. All proposed action touching the rules and joint rules and order of business shall be referred to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. HOOKER of Mississippi. I move to amend the clause just read by striking out the words "and order of business;" so that the clause will read:

All proposed action touching the rules and joint rules shall be referred to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. SPEAKER, this amendment is in keeping with the suggestions which I had the honor to submit to the House a few days ago during the general debate on this subject, and also in keeping with the remarks which I submitted yesterday. The Committee on Rules in its original appointment was, as I understand, invested simply with the authority to present rules for the consideration of the House, and I can not see why there should be given to this committee any more than to any other committee the power to indicate to the House what should be its order of business.

There is certainly no reason why this committee, the smallest committee of the House in point of numbers—consisting of two members from the Republican side and two from the Democratic side, with the Speaker ex officio acting as chairman—should have the right to supersede or overrule the action of all the other great committees of the House, as for instance the Ways and Means Committee, the Appropriations Committee, or the Judiciary Committee, by indicating upon report to the House what measures coming from those committees should have a hearing.

It is a misnomer to call this a "Committee on Rules." It is to be invested with the power to determine what measures the

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. I do not know how he would vote if here, but I should vote "nay," if at liberty to vote.

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Kansas [Mr. MARIEN]. I do not know how he would vote if he were present, but I should vote "nay."

Mr. PUGH (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR].

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON]. I am satisfied if he were present he would vote "nay;" I therefore vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MANDERSON. I have received a telegram from the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], stating that he is detained from the Senate by a death in his family, and for that reason will not be here to-day. On this and all other questions during the day I shall endeavor to see that the Senator is paired. On this vote I will pair him with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN].

Mr. DIXON. The Senator from Kentucky is paired.

Mr. MANDERSON. Then the Senator from Connecticut will have to remain unpaired on this vote.

Mr. HUNTUN. I have a general pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT]. I believe if he were here he would vote "nay" on this question, and I shall record my vote "nay."

Mr. CALL. I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. If he were here, I should vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 8, nays 41; as follows:

YEAS—8.	Power, Shoup.	Vance, Vest.

Archibald,	Faulkner,	McPherson,
Beaumont,	Henderson,	Squire,

REDEMPTION IN SILVER.

Mr. ALLEN submitted the following resolution; which was read:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to furnish to the Senate, without unnecessary delay, full information on the following subjects:

1. Whether the Treasury Department has at any time, redeemed any portion of the silver certificates in circulation, as provided by the act of July 14, 1890, commonly known as the Sherman act, and, if so, when and what amount has been so redeemed.

2. What amount in the face value of silver bullion purchased by the Treasury Department under the act of July 14, 1890, and subject to contract, in the redemption of the Secretary of the Treasury, remains unredempted, and what silver bullion has been so redeemed and later returned to the Government as bullion.

3. Whether any part of the bullion so redeemed by the Treasury Department since March 1, 1893, was canceled after redemption or in any manner withdrawn from general circulation.

Mr. ALLEN. I desire to have the resolution considered at this time.

Mr. VOORHEES. Let it go over until to-morrow.

Mr. MOFFETTS ON. And be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over under the rules, and be printed.

PURCHASE OF SILVER BULLION.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Concurrent and other resolutions are still in order. If there be none, that order of business is closed, and the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, the title of which will be reported.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of an act, approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes."

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President—

Mr. PEPPER. I ask that the pending amendment may be stated before the Senator from Illinois proceeds.

Mr. CULLOM. The amendment may be laid before the Senate later.

Mr. PEPPER. I offered an amendment to the bill, which is the pending amendment, as I think the Journal will show, and I ask that it be stated as the pending amendment.

Mr. VOORHEES. I will suggest to the Senator from Kansas that at 2 o'clock this measure will be laid before the Senate as the regular order of business, and at that time, or a little later, it might be well to read his amendment, but not in connection with the remarks of the Senator from Illinois.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment of the Senator from Kansas to the amendment of the Committee on Finance is pending.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President, the questions now engrossing the attention of the country and especially of Congress surpass in importance any which have been the subject of Congressional action since slavery was abolished and the perpetuity of the Union secured. The determination of great financial questions affect beneficially or disastrously not only the people of one country, but, to an extent, all the nations.

Opinion is unanimous that the condition of affairs in this country now demands immediate attention and prompt action by Congress; all agree that commerce is stagnant in all the geographical divisions of our country; that banks and commercial houses are failing; that factories and mines are closed, and that within the last six months perhaps a million wage-earners have been thrown out of employment.

But, unfortunately for the country, there is no such agreement of opinion among the people or in Congress as to the cause of the distress that has so swiftly and unexpectedly come upon us, or as to what is of paramount importance, the remedy for it. No such peculiar condition as exists in America to-day was ever known in our history. The people have suddenly found themselves in changed circumstances—the merchant without customers; the factory closed for lack of orders; the bank losing its deposits; the farmer without price for the products of the soil; the laboring man without work; the business man without confidence, and the entire country appealing to Congress for speedy relief.

We have been admonished by the public press and from sundry other sources, that in the present emergency patriotism should be superior to partisan politics, and sectional interests should yield to the common weal. Sir, if I believed it necessary that such admonitions should be given to the American Congress, I should regard it as a duty to say as without honor, and should deplore the condition of national spirit. Conscious of no purpose on my part other than that of securing the greatest stability to our Government, the highest prosperity, consistent with conservatism, to the nation, and the largest sum of happiness to the individual, I am unwilling to believe that other motives actuate my colleagues.

The chairman of the Committee on Finance has reported a bill allowing national banks to secure and issue circulation to the purchase of the bonds deposited by them with the Treasury Department. The cry comes from the people for more money. This bill, if enacted into law, would result in an increase of our circulating medium, and as good money as the world affords. The measure is recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury, and yet, before a vote can be had on it, the whole national-banking system, which has been discredited more than any other system, must be discussed again in the same old strain and with the same arguments that have been heard at every crossroads from the time the act was passed. Why not give the country this crumb of relief, and when the people have emerged from their present distressed condition, take up the bank act, discuss it, and amend it if that is deemed wise?

The amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CULLUM] is of no great consequence in itself, yet if it should be adopted is to be the entering wedge which will result in the retirement of the national-bank notes now in circulation, and the issuance in their place of an equal amount of greenback promises to pay on demand in gold, added to nearly one thousand millions of paper currency issued, which the Government is pledged to maintain. To what port are we, as a nation, drifting? Is it not time to stop and take our bearings, if it is not the purpose of the majority of such amendments to wreck the national Treasury, as I am sure it is not?

I favor the passage of the bill as it is, but think I do not object to the amendment of the Senator from Maryland.

The chairman of the Finance Committee, in response to the message of the President, has reported a bill to repeal the clauses of the act of July 14, 1890, providing for the monthly purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of silver. I shall vote for the bill. I am not one of those who believe that the act of 1890 is in a great degree responsible for the existing financial condition. I am for its repeal, however, for the reason that it was passed as an expedient, and was not expected to remain on the statute book very long, and because the Government can not afford to cussion. They fear the result of an exposé of their conspiracy. It is significant at this time that the great journals of New York say, "Vote first, and debate afterwards." Surrender and give up your arms, then fight if you can.

We notify them now that the fort occupied by the defenders of the people will never be surrendered. The armies of avarice, fraud, and deception must take it if they can.

To-day the united metropolitan press applaud bimetalists who will vote for monometallism. The service of deserters is always gratefully received during the hour of battle; but when the war is over there is but one opinion of their conduct by both friends and foes. Seventy millions of people constitute the tribunal which must ultimately pass upon the proceedings of this extra session. They will not view with approbation the men or parties whom they trusted with power, on the promise to restore the money of the Constitution, who use that power to rob them of that money and transfer their property to an organization of gold monopolists.

The pretext for the passage of this bill is not only flimsy, but it is absurd. We are told that the object of the bill is to restore confidence. Confidence in what, and in whom? Confidence in the Government? Nobody has questioned the solvency of the Government or the quality of any money bearing the stamp of the Government. Confidence in the people themselves? Nothing has happened to shake the confidence of the American people in their own ability to live and prosper, except the robbery which has been practiced in the past and is threatened in the future. Confidence in the bondholders and banks? They have sufficient confidence already in their power to measure the wealth of others. They have been in the habit so long of reaping where they did not sow that their confidence in their own ability is sufficiently strong. The fact that they regard the Sherman act as an obstacle to their schemes of plunder is no reason why it should be repealed.

On the contrary, it is the strongest possible reason why it should be retained until all the Sherman acts, from 1873 to 1890, both inclusive, can go, and go together. The country wants no more Sherman acts. But let us repeal the act which was enacted from us, let us blot from the statute book the act which he placed there without the knowledge or consent of the American people in 1873. When that is done prosperity will be restored, and not till then. There can be no progress or prosperity while the iron grasp of contraction binds the limbs of enterprise. Contraction can not be permanently prevented without the remonetization of silver. The metallic basis of gold is too narrow for the present generation, and will continue to grow narrower and narrower as the supply grows less and less.

The creditor class may as well know first as last that the people of this country will not consent to continual falling prices, hard times, and stagnation. If the bondholders can change the contract and make it payable in gold and take away the option of the debtor to pay in either gold or silver, the people will ultimately see to it that the debtor has money of no more or less value than the money of the contract. The people do not ask to change the contract; the bondholders do. They have already doubled the value of gold, and by so doing they have doubled the obligations of the debtor. This was revolutionary. It is dangerous for capital to engage in revolution, and I appeal to the Senate to-day to listen to the voice of the people as expressed in twenty years of elections, and turn a deaf ear to a subsidized press and bankers' petitions extorted from their trembling debtors.

Mr. President, there are many other branches of this subject which it is necessary to discuss, and to discuss in good faith. I do not know whether I can get through to-night with what I wish to say; I do not suppose I can; but I wish to refer to a few additional facts. When the false pretense is made that this bill is the road to bimetalism, we should examine that question carefully.

What is the situation of the world in this respect? In the first place, England is the CRIBBED NATION OF THE WORLD.

The outside world owe her $15,000,000,000 upon what she has received, and she is receiving $500,000,000 annually in interest. When I speak of England I mean the bonded aristocracy, for the poor people of England are suffering the same as are our poor people; but the England that governs is concentrated capital with claims against the balance of the world of $10,000,000,000. I do not know how much of that this country owes, but I am inclined to think that we owe very nearly half of it. I said in my remarks that we had to pay England $150,000,000 annually. I think we are paying more by that date. I think we are paying $200,000,000 to England. See what a position she has! The outside world has to pay her $500,000,000 a year; which is an enormous contribution to England, besides the supremacy she has in the carrying trade and other commercial advantages.

The continent of Europe is POOR AND PROSTRATE.

It is said that they are supporting 22,000,000 soldiers at an expense of more than $800,000,000 a year. Most of those countries are bankrupt, and exhausted, particularly Austria and Italy.

It was England and the United States which destroyed silver. The United States joined England to destroy silver, and for what purpose? For the obvious purpose to enhance the value of money. Now, it is said that we must go on a gold basis with England; that there is no other mode; that there is nothing else for us to do.

THE PRESIDENT SAYS.

We must have the same kind of money that England has. What does that mean? We have to pay her $300,000,000 a year now, and she has demands enough against us at present to break us down, if we attempt to compete with her for gold.

If we undertake to buy gold, where is the gold? It is all locked up; $536,000,000 in Russia, for instance; $150,000,000 probably in Austria, most of which she got from us; she can not pay it out; eight or nine hundred millions are in France, and she dare not pay any of it out. She protects herself by paying out silver.

The same condition exists in Germany. She can not pay out gold. England has the advantage of collecting gold from all the world. That does a good deal toward keeping up her gold supply, but she adopts an expedient to keep her gold at home. Whenever an attempt is made to draw out her gold, she raises her rate of interest. England has never allowed any country to draw out her

INTERNATIONAL MONEY.

From the earliest history of England, whenever that attempt has been made, she has suspended specie payments or raised the rate of interest, and in that way protected her people.

During the Napoleonic wars she would not allow any international money to circulate in the country; no nation could draw her gold out and bankrupt her. If she allowed such an enemy as the gold board in New York to exist in London she never could have sent a soldier to the Continent. Since that war she has suspended specie payments three or four times, and she has time after time raised the rate of interest, so that the money could not be drawn out of the country. She has tried to do the only thing standing she was a great creditor nation. We, the only country in the world which pretends to have an international money, allow gold to go where it pleases.

Now, what position are we in? It is said that we must SELL BONDS TO BUY GOLD.

Suppose we do it. In that event greenbacks will be presented and take the gold out. I know the banks want that, because they want the bonds to bank on. That is what makes them so intensely anxious for this plan. If we sell bonds and buy gold, you can not keep it; it will be taken away from you, and the same trick will be played on you which has been played this year.

When they want to carry out the Austrian scheme, and when they want gold in Europe for any purpose, they come here and sell our bonds, create a panic, and then the gold goes. The gold went last spring in that way; securities were sold, dumped on the market, and

A PANIC CREATED.

That was one of the processes by which it was created in connection with the New York banks, where agents for the English bondholders are simply investors and collectors of foreign account. They started this trouble. They sold the securities, got the gold, and took it away, and when the panic came the securities went down 40 or 50 cents on the dollar, and the gold is coming back to buy them up. The gold which is coming now is to devour the carcasses of those who were killed and destroyed by taking it away.

It is said we must fight with England for this gold and that we can bring England to time. When we buy gold she can call it back by calling on us for three or four thousand millions. We can not compete with England in that way. We are a great country, but with vast unimproved resources, and if we begin to draw that gold out they will draw it back when they want it. They will take the foundation right out of our financial system. Do you not see what game was played in New York regularly some years ago when we were buying bonds every year for two three years? There would be a little combination in New York that would buy the bonds during the winter and summer months, invest in them, got the interest, and when the stringency came to move the crops in the fall they would call on the Treasury to buy bonds, and $30,000,000 or $40,000,000 would be thrown in the hands of those men. The stringency had created a panic; stocks would be down 20 or 30 per cent and they would have the gold to buy them, and then they would make their regular harvest; and while we were buying bonds the harvest was as regular as the returning seasons.

Do you not suppose that our English friends who can draw this gold out when they please will have that harvest all the time? They will have it this year. They will make hundreds and hundreds of millions

OUT OF THIS CALAMITY.

Do you not believe that they will repeat it? You have no foundation but what they can take out from under you. You will always have a panic when they command. With that great creditor nation we can not live in the world on an equality. If we give her the control of our circulating medium, if she can say at any time when a panic shall come, the people of this country are at her command. You in your experience know something of English rule. I speak of the greatest body of the people of England. I speak of the concentrated capital that controls more than $20,000,000,000 of bonds, to which the whole world is paying tribute to-day. I speak of that capital which has no sympathy with the laboring interests of humanity. I speak of that capital that is crushing the masses of Europe to the earth. I speak of that capital that GRINDS THE FACE OF THE POOR.

I speak of that capital that accumulates at the expense of the sweat and blood of the laboring masses. I speak of that capital that has turned back the wheel of progress and placed the laboring masses of Europe in a worse condition than they were fifty years ago. I speak of that capital that has produced this panic, stopped our mines and our mills, and filled the country with sorrow and grief. I speak of that heartless organization that looks upon America, not as a country, but as a land to be plundered. They look upon our people with scorn and contempt, and they

in their reports.

The contempt which bondholding Europe has for America is well expressed by Daniel Watney, one of the leading advocates of the gold standard of Great Britain before the royal commission, when he said:

I cannot suppose that everybody is wise. Just think of the folly of the United States when they were a debtor nation in adopting a gold currency. I have known nothing else, but the money market, they did not know that it was going to increase their debt enormously.—Second report, Royal Commission, Page 210.

Ah, the Senator from Ohio tells us that silver was demonetized by English influence. Oh, if some of our friends could be free for one session from English influence and legislate for America things would be different. What would have been the condition of this country if this crime had not been committed? At the time silver was the miners of the West were taking their bullion to the mints. Previous to that time it had been more profitable to export it because of the mistake in the ratio, but the accumulations were too great for export. We had silver mines and in addition the great mines to make us the strongest financial nation of the world. We were on the western hemisphere, where gold and silver have always been obtained in the greatest quantity. We had Mexico as a near neighbor, willing to buy of us, willing to trade with us, and to-day, notwithstanding the obstacles thrown in the way by the gold monopolists, she is, or she was until her silver mines were closed a short time ago, a great consumer of our products and we had no ample supply. We had employment for our people. We might have had in this country to-day, if it had not been for the crime of 1873, as much gold and silver coin as the Roman Empire had in its palmist days—nearly $2,000,000,000; and we would then have been free from debt. We would have owed nothing by this time. If we had been allowed we would have been the leading nation. But by destroying our own resources, by taking away from our people the right they had under the Constitution, we are to-day reduced to the verge of bankruptcy. We can do nothing without the consent of the money powers of England. We can not legislate in these halls without such consent. Their organs tell us that we must not discuss the question. They are teeming every morning with commands to the Senate to abdicate its power.

Right in this connection I will show you how they talked on another occasion when there was no money in question and when they were free from their masters. We will see what they said when they were not under the money power, when they were of which the Senator from Ohio speaks. He says the act of 1873 was procured through English influence. I am going to read what some of these papers said when they were free from English influence. I first read from the New York World of January 5, 1891:

Will the brave-talking Western Senators execute the "ghost dance" to the crack of the party whip in the hands of those supernaturally medicine men. Hoar and Edmunds, at the caucus to-day.

This is the way they talk when there is no money in it:

The desperate attempt of the old Republican leaders to drive the force bill through the Senate under the crack of the caucus whip is the boldest defiance of the popular will seen since the days of secession. * * * Under the lead of this besotted partisanship a Republican caucus will to-day seek to drag down unwilling and protesting Senators.

[New York World, January 6, 1891.]

The Administration organ regards free speech in the Senate as "a pretended courtesy," and says "it cannot afford to waste time" in it. Fancy what Seward and Greeley would have said to such a claim. * * *

[New York World, January 8, 1891.]

The country has turned its face toward the future, and these younger men who realize that there are concerns of the present and future to be considered decline longer to be led by men whose eyes are in the back of their heads.

The assumption that men are traitors because they ally themselves with one political party rather than another is no longer to be accepted anywhere outside an asylum for aged and decrepit politicians of a past generation.

[New York World, January 8, 1891.]

Do you deny the agreement? says HOAR to GORMAN. Were you not to lie still and have your throat cut?

[New York World, January 19, 1891.]

The Democratic Senators would indeed be false to their duty if they neglected any measure, even the most extreme possible under parliamentary forms, to defeat this rascally and revolutionary conspiracy.

[New York World, January 20, 1891.]

No Democratic Senator would so far forget his constitutional duty as to refrain from resorting to every device to defeat the passage of the force bill.

[New York World, January 21, 1891.]

The present duty of Democrats in Congress is to kill the force bill. No sacrifice is too great, and no means should be left unused.

[New York World, January 23, 1891.]

If the minority of the Senate had no rights, there would be no one in Congress to speak in behalf of the people. * * * It is to silence the minority, to turn the people out of court, that closure is suggested, and if the Democrats should not resort to every device to prevent the outrage they would be betraying a sacred trust.

MR. MORGAN. Will the Senator from Nevada yield to me for a moment?

MR. STEWART. Certainly.

MR. MORGAN. The Senator has been on his feet discussing this question for a great while and evidently he is fatigued. He has not drawn as yet to the conclusion of his remarks, and doubtless has some valuable suggestions to make upon this question. With the Senator's permission, I will move that the Senate proceed to executive business.

MR. STEWART. I yield for that purpose.

MR. MORGAN. I make that motion.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Alabama moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

MR. ALDRICH and MR. HAWLEY called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

MR. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [MR. MORRILL]. I should vote "yea" if the Senator from Vermont were here.

MR. LODGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Kansas [MR. MARTIN]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

MR. STEPHEN LODGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Maryland [MR. GIBSON]; but I am advised that he would vote "nay" if present. I will therefore vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

MR. BUTLER. I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [MR. CAMERON]. I am not sure how he would vote on this question, and I withhold my vote. If he were present I should vote "yea."

MR. DOLPH (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the senior Senator from Mississippi [MR. GEORGE], but I do not see him in the Chamber, and I will withdraw my vote.

MR. HARRIS. The Senator from Oregon can let his vote stand if he chooses. I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [MR. MORRILL] and I will record my vote.

MR. DOLPH. Very well.

MR. HARRIS. I vote "yea."

MR. BUTLER. I am informed by Senators who appear to know that the Senator from Pennsylvania [MR. CAMERON] would vote "yea" if present. I therefore vote "yea."

MR. BLACKBURN (after having voted in the affirmative). I ask if the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] has voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted, the Chair understands.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I am paired with that Senator on all questions, and I withdraw my vote.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be so noted.

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 28, not voting 22; as follows:

Mr. VANCE. From the Committee on Privileges and Elections, I submit reports in reference to the compensation of the three appointed Senators who were refused seats in the Senate. The amount to be allowed to each appointee is specified in the report. I suppose I may ask for the immediate consideration of the reports.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the reports be read, and then we will determine whether we will consider them.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The first report will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

That certain certain Privileges and Elections, to which the reported resolution provides compensation for Jean B. Allen for his time and expense in prosecuting his claim to a seat in the United States Senate from Washington in respect of an alleged election fraud.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the resolution be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. SQUIRE and referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections August 30, 1893, as follows:

Resolved, That, if there be no out-of-pocket fund of the Senate to John B. Allen, he shall be paid full compensation for all time and expense in prosecuting his claim to a seat in the Senate as a Senator from the State of Washington.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from North Carolina that the resolution and report should go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. I was going to make that suggestion. Let all the reports take the same course.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. That will be the order.

Mr. VANCE. I ask that the other reports be also read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Mr. PLATT introduced a bill (S. 856) for the relief of Louis

Wheat down even below 50 cents a bushel, cotton 5 to 54 cents a pound, corn at less than 30 cents a bushel, and all because the banks and bankers have got the money locked up in their vaults and treasuries and will not let the people have it, while they are taxing them to pay interest on it, and we stand idly by here and dream of party success and party allegiance and party fidelity, and see our people starve and go naked, and never raise a hand, or a voice, to undertake to change this thing. I am not of such, thank Almighty God. [Manifestations of applause.]

I could go on, Mr. President, and show from the papers I have before me—but I shall not now refer to them—other very important facts to prove the necessity of our taking hold of this subject in a strong and earnest way.

Now, I have no pet policy or purpose about it. I am willing to go with and abide by my people after they have had a full hearing and after a free conference upon any system of measures which will make our people secure henceforth against these outrageous and wrongs from which we are just now escaping. I care not whether it may be called a Republican, a Democratic, or a Populist measure—it makes no difference. If it will give the relief to the people, in accordance with the Constitution of the United States, which they have a right to demand at our hands, I will unite with whoever it is that brings that measure forward if it commends itself to my judgment. I am not going to be illiberal or stringent about it, either. I am not going to inquire who is outside of this Chamber wants it done or does not want it done. I am not going to ask persons who have no legislative power whatsoever to form joint commissions to investigate this question. I feel upon this question the responsibilities of a representative of my State and people; I feel the necessity of action. I desire broad, catholic, orthodox action in respect of this question, consistently with the Constitution of the United States, and that is all I desire.

If you want to take the tax off the State-bank system, and that is the judgment of Congress as being one of the useful remedies or one of the best remedies which can be adopted, do so. If you want to remonetize silver as a means of restoring confidence and as a means of giving to the people a basis of credit and power of redemption, do that. I should be delighted if you were to do it. If you want to strike both gold and silver to death, if necessary, do it, if it is for the welfare of the people; but let us, Mr. President, hold the reins over our own institutions. Let our own assistants let America furnish to Americans the proper currency to circulate in their business, let us not be dependent upon Great Britain or Germany or France for anything in respect of our currency. We have the material here to build up a system of finance better than that which exists in this world.

We already predicate a system of finance which requires us to redeem $800,000,000 of circulating paper on less than $100,000,000 in gold, and we sustain it without difficulty. Why do we supplies the great vacuum between $100,000,000 of gold in the Treasury and $800,000,000 of paper in circulation in the hands of the people, for the redemption of every dollar of which the United States is responsible? What supplies it? The credit of the people. Their taxpaying power, their labor, their toil, their economy, their suffering, their patriotism supplies all that great breadth of disparity between $100,000,000 of gold in the Treasury and $800,000,000 of paper to be redeemed.

Any, let us help the people, Mr. President, let us give them as far as it is possible, to do so, all the relief that we can. While we are here in Congress, while this question is up, while it is absorbing the public attention, while it is engaging the utmost efforts of everybody connected with government, while it is making demands upon our time, upon our talents, upon our energies, our industry, and our honesty and courage, of the most supreme character, let us not refuse to take the whole subject into consideration, and so deal with it and dispose of it that this country and our noble toilers shall have a monetary system suited to our greatness.

Mr. President, I could broaden this view of the question, if I had time to do so and felt that I was warranted in doing so, upon one idea or line of thought, which I shall merely suggest. The States of the western hemisphere from Mexico and Central America down, including all of South America, have a monetary system which is somewhat akin to ours—pretty close kin, based chiefly upon silver. They have free republics and constitutional governments, which are copied after ours; they have sympathies in common with us; they are becoming more and more great producing peoples; their contributions to the commerce of the world are becoming exceedingly important. Those contributions ought to be interchanged in New York, and not in London.

There is enough of financial wealth and power in the western hemisphere to make of New York a city as great with the coin of the world as London at this time, than London is in its financial and commercial power. If we will, in the effort to adjust our financial system, accommodate it to the interests and conditions of the people in South America, we can draw them right to our homes, with all their trade and credit. They are suffering as we are, perhaps in a worse degree, from the same causes; they have not got the credit that we have, and if a great joint committee of the two Houses would also take that subject into consideration and act upon it there would be brought into the Treasury of the United States and into the reach of the people an amount of wealth and power that we little dream of. That is one of the matters which this great committee ought to consider. It has not been considered heretofore, or, if so, in such a perfunctory manner that nothing has come of it. The subject has been slurred over.

Within what length of time, Mr. President, could this committee prepare itself to act upon all the leading propositions which I have suggested, or others, if you please, and report either separate bills or one bill to cover the whole question? I can take the honorable Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL], whose seat is now occupied by my colleague [Mr. PUGH], and put him at the head of a committee of that kind, and in twenty days he would have all the facts before this body which would be necessary for the purpose of having the subject perfectly understood, and acted upon with wisdom, caution, and security. There would be no trouble about that.

By the time that in decency and in order the debate in this body should end upon the proposition which is now before it by the passage of the bill of the House as amended by the Committee on Finance of the Senate, the Senator from Missouri in charge of a committee of 14 members of both Houses—I designate him merely because his qualities and characteristics, his energy and his power entitle him to be designated—the Senator from Missouri could take such a committee as that, and under his leadership, be prepared, within thirty days, to submit a plan which would cover the whole field of financial and monetary legislation in which we ought to engage.

I am entirely unambitious in this matter, and if the Senate of the United States should raise this committee, I give notice now that I would not accept a position on it, my notice being predicated upon the fact that I can look around me and see half a dozen Senators, both Democrats and Republicans, who are better fitted for such work than I am.

I want, Mr. President, that our people shall come together; I want that the finances of the people of the United States shall not be knocked about, like a weaver's shuttle, between politicians while they are suffering and starving; I want that they shall have relief, and that the politicians shall not stand in their way. I am as much a politician as any of them; but when I get upon a question of this sort, I am willing to surrender my politics for the welfare of the people, and I am willing to do so. If the Senate should pass the resolution in the form I have it, or in any form whatsoever, I will not be a member of that committee. I want to stand upon ground where I can recommend this measure to the consideration at least of the Senate of the United States entirely aside from all party and personal considerations.

Now, is there any reason why we should not do this? Can any man, from pride of opinion or otherwise, rise in his place and object to having a great joint committee act on this subject? Have we not on many occasions when our country was imperiled, when the people were suffering, raised great joint committees to consider questions like this, before whom everybody could be heard and in whose body almost every feature of opinion in the Senate and House of Representatives was distinctly represented? That is all I ask you to do. It makes no difference whether the bill which is now before the Senate shall pass or shall not pass, the duties of this committee would be just as vital in the one case as in the other. The committee would be ready with its investigation, ready with its report, to take up this subject after the pending bill had passed or failed to pass, and enter upon the consideration of the broader view of the duty of the Congress of the United States toward the people. Then hope would revive in the hearts of the people, and we should inspire them with confidence, so much needed, in the justice of their own Government.

Mr. VOORHES. Mr. President, I ask now that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 1, on which the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] desires to occupy the floor. It is not necessary, I suppose, to make a motion to that effect.

Mr. MORGAN. I should like to have a vote on the resolution. The hour of 2 o'clock has not arrived.

Mr. VOORHES. Let the resolution of the Senator from Alabama go over. I believe it goes properly to the Calendar.

Mr. HARRIS. The resolution of the Senator from Alabama is now before the Senate. It may be necessary to pass it, but it is not disposed of in the manner the Senator from Indiana suggests.

Mr. VOORHES. I supposed it would not be necessary to make a motion to take up the regular order at this time, though I know a motion is necessary if there is objection to doing so. As there seems to be objection, I move the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 1.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of a bill the title of which will be stated.

THE SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 111) to amend a part of an act approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes."

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Indiana. (Putting the question.) The "noes" seem to have it.

MR. VOOHEES. I ask for the yeas and nays.

MR. JONES of Arkansas. I rise to a question of order.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arkansas will state his question of order.

MR. JONES of Arkansas. Rule VII, in prescribing the order of morning business, after the first paragraph, specifies—

"The presiding officer shall himself call in the following order:
1. Consideration of pending constitutional amendments.
2. Reports of standing and select committees.
3. Introduction of bills and resolutions.
4. Consideration of other resolutions."
and then he shall proceed to call for a vote in each order unless unanimous consent be given to the contrary.

This being a resolution regularly before the Senate, it seems to me that it must be disposed of in some way by the Senate, unless unanimous consent is taken to the contrary; and a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business is not a proper disposition of this resolution.

MR. McPHERSON. If the Senator will look at Rule VIII he will find that—

"At the conclusion of the morning business for each day, unless upon motion the President or any other member of the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the order of business resolutions."

The motion of the Senator from Indiana is therefore in order.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks the motion of the Senator from Indiana is in order; and upon that motion the yeas and nays are demanded. Is there a second to the demand?

The yeas and nays were ordered.

MR. ALLISON. About like to make a suggestion to the Senator from Alabama and the Senator from Indiana. In seven minutes from now the regular order, which the Senator from Indiana desires to reach, will be reached in the course of the business of the Senate.

MR. VOOHEES. What we shall do in the next seven minutes is what is troubling me.

MR. ALLISON. The Senator from Alabama desires to have a vote upon his resolution this morning. I submit to him that the importance of his resolution and the suggestions which have been made by himself will probably elicit other suggestions in the same direction or perhaps in other directions. So I think it would hardly be practicable to get a vote this morning. I suggest that we go on as though the hour of 2 o'clock had arrived without taking the yeas and nays, which will occupy nearly the whole intervening period of time.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Iowa?

MR. MORGAN. I wish to say a word about that. Inasmuch as the morning hour had not yet expired I had a right to have a vote on my resolution, unless some Senator wished to debate it. Of course, if anyone wishes to debate it, I am entirely willing that it should go over; but it is not proper that the resolution should be destroyed merely by a resort to the regular order of the Senate within the morning hour.

MR. VOOHEES. I desire to say to the Senator from Alabama that my action was not prompted by the slightest disposition to destroy his resolution or to do anything derogatory to it or to put it in any wrong attitude; but there were ten minutes left of the morning hour when I rose, and I did not know what else to do with those ten minutes before the measure of which I have charge would be laid before the Senate as the regular order of business, and so I asked the Senate for permission to proceed with what would be the regular order in ten minutes. Objection was made, and nothing was left to me but to make the motion which I did, with perfect respect to the Senator from Alabama and his resolution.

MR. HARRIS. I suggest to the Senator from Indiana that we might consume the remaining minutes of the morning hour in taking the vote upon the resolution of the Senator from Alabama.

MR. VOOHEES. I would suggest, from what I have heard other Senators say, not to speak of my own views, that this is in matter of such importance that it deserves further consideration than one single speech. It seems to me; though, if the Senate wants to consider a measure of this sort without anything further, of course I am not going to interpose.

MR. HARRIS. Of course, if any Senator takes the floor to debate the resolution, no one would go further than I to preserve his rights to do so; but as nobody does so, why not dispose of the resolution now?

MR. VOOHEES. I insist upon my motion to proceed with the regular order of business.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. This debate has been proceeding by unanimous consent. The Secretary will call the roll on the motion of the Senator from Indiana.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

MR. DOLPH (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], whom I do not see in his seat, and therefore withhold my vote.

MR. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH] has announced a pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. If it suits the convenience of the Senator from Oregon, we may transfer our respective pairs.

MR. DOLPH. That is entirely agreeable to me.

MR. HARRIS. Then I vote "nay."

MR. DOLPH. I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

MR. LODGE. I am paired on this question with the Senator from Kansas [Mr. MARTIN]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

MR. PUGH. I am requested to state that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT] is paired with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON]. If the Senator from Georgia were present he would vote "nay."

MR. VANCE (after having voted in the negative). I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] on this question, and withdraw my vote.

MR. ROACH (after having voted in the negative). I am paired with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. MURPHY] on this question, and therefore withdraw my vote.

MR. CALL (after having voted in the negative). I inquire if the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] is recorded as voting?

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is advised that the Senator from Vermont is not recorded.

MR. CALL. Then I withdraw my vote, as I am paired with that Senator.

The result was announced—yeas 37, nays 21; as follows:

YEAS—37

So the motion was agreed to.

MR. HARRIS. Does not the Senate proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business by reason of the fact that it is the unfinished business and the hour of 2 o'clock has arrived?

MR. VOOHEES. That will do very well, but the vote which has been taken is somewhat what I wish to emphasize.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The title of the bill which has been taken up by vote of the Senate will be stated.

THE SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of an act, approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes."

MR. TELLER. I rise to a question of order. I simply wish to know, as a parliamentary question, whether the bill is before the Senate by virtue of its being a special order or by virtue of the vote which has been taken?

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Colorado that, in the opinion of the Chair, House bill No. 1 is before the Senate both by virtue of the vote just taken and the fact that the hour of 2 o'clock has arrived.

of justice and fair dealing, because these people are entitled to the same treatment that is accorded to citizens or subjects of the most favored nation, and that the present provision for registration is a violation of that principle. The petitioners then add that the Methodist Episcopal Church has one hundred and twenty-five missionaries in the Chinese Empire; that it has churches, chapels, dwellings, school-buildings, hospitals, printing presses, and other property there to the amount of $400,000, and that they think their property and their missionaries will be imperiled, and that the sentiment of the country is opposed to its maintenance. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR presented a petition of the Puget Sound Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, assembled at Seattle, Wash., August 10, 1893, composed of 110 ministers, and representing 7,000 church members, praying for the repeal of the so-called Geary Chinese law, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE.

Mr. FAULKNER. I am instructed by the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 353) to punish the carrying or selling of deadly or dangerous weapons within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, to report adversely thereon, and to recommend its indefinite postponement, the bill having been introduced by mistake, the same measure in substance having become a law in July, 1892.

The report was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BERRY introduced a bill (S. 933) relating to the disqualification of registers and receivers of the United States land offices, and making provision in case of such disqualification; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. WHITE of California introduced a bill (S. 904) providing for the construction of a steam revenue cutter, for service in the harbor of San Francisco, State of California; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also introduced a bill (S. 905) to refer the claim of Sarah E. Haskell, and the legal representatives of Leonidas Haskell, deceased, to certain lands and the improvements thereon, in San Francisco, Cal., to the Court of Claims; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. CAMPDEN introduced a bill (S. 906) for the relief of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at Charleston, W. Va.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. McMILLAN introduced a bill (S. 907) providing a pension for George Welz; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 908) providing a pension for Mrs. Julia C. Sharper; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 909) for the relief of Thomas Antsile; which was read twice by its title, and with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 910) for the relief of Eunice Tripler, widow of Charles S. Tripler; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PEPPER. I introduce a bill by request. It has some features with which I agree and some with which I do not agree. Still it is a bill which I think ought to be considered by the Committee on Finance, and I ask that it be referred to that committee.

The bill (S. 911) to institute a national currency based upon gold and silver, approximately in equal values, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. POWER introduced a bill (S. 912) to amend section No. 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Mr. WALSHALL introduced a bill (S. 913) providing for the dedication of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Park; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. DANIEL introduced a bill (S. 914) for the relief of the legal personal representatives of Henry H. Sibley, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 915) for the erection of a public building for the use of the custom-house and post-office at Newport News, in the district of Newport News, Va.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

PROPOSED FINANCIAL LEGISLATION.

Mr. MILLS. My friend the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] contends that he will take Thursday next to deliver his address, and I will ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that I may have the floor next Tuesday at 2 o'clock. I do not give notice; I ask consent that I may have it, so that I shall not be taken off the floor by somebody holding it before.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas asks the unanimous consent of the Senate that he may be heard at 2 o'clock on Tuesday next.

Mr. HOAR. I have very great respect for the Senator from Texas and am very unwilling to object to anything that he asks, but I must object to such a change in the practice of the Senate as gives unanimous consent, which can not be departed from under any reason of convenience or otherwise, to a Senator's taking the floor at a particular time to debate a measure. The notice of a Senator given beforehand that he desires to speak at a particular time always secures him the opportunity, unless there be some very good reason at the time in the convenience of the whole Senate to the contrary; and such a notice, will, I am sure, be ample to secure all the Senator from Texas desires. It would be a very great innovation upon the practice of the Senate and upon the freedom of debate to have the Senate put it out of its own power a week ahead to do anything but listen to a particular speech.

Mr. MILLS. I withdraw the request, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Texas give notice?

Mr. MILLS. I do not. I gave notice once before, and I had the floor taken from me by Senatorial courtesy. I do not wish to have that Senatorial courtesy extended to me again.

Mr. WHITE of California. Will the Senator from Texas allow me to make a suggestion? I do not think there is any likelihood of his being displaced. I have given notice that I would address the Senate upon the pending measure next Tuesday. I delayed giving the notice heretofore because I recognized what I thought was the propriety of Senators senior to myself occupying the time of the Senate if they desired; and as the Senator from Texas was displaced some days ago, I was anxious to accord him the privilege of speaking on Tuesday if he desired, knowing that it was unlikely that he would be interrupted at that time. I suggest that the Senator from Texas fix that day, and I am sure he will not be interfered with.

Mr. SHERMAN. My own impression is that if the Senator from Texas gives notice that after the morning business is over he will desire the floor, in not one case in a hundred probably would he be deprived of it. I do not know how he came to be deprived of his right the other day. Certainly that is the usual way. I hope the Senator will not feel that he has been slighted or unduly prejudiced in the action of the Senate heretofore. If he will take the usual course he will no doubt be entitled to the floor. But I would not say at 2 o'clock; I think it better always to say at the end of the morning business. At 2 o'clock, as a matter of course, the morning hour terminates, and it would not be later than that time.

Mr. STEWART. By the courtesy of the Senator from California, I withdraw; that if the Senate is disposed to hear me, I will take the floor at 2 o'clock on Tuesday next.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas gives notice that he will take the floor at 2 o'clock on Tuesday next for the purpose of submitting some remarks.

Mr. WHITE of California. I presume it is understood that the notice heretofore given by me will stand for Thursday of next week, subject, of course, to the fortunes of war.

NATIONAL BANK INTERESTS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution which comes over from a previous day.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. STEWART on the 11th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed by the President of the Senate to inquire if any Senator is, or has been, a stockholder in any national bank or other financial institution, or is otherwise financially interested in any national bank or other financial institution, and to report thereon to the Senate within ten days. And the Senate shall have the benefit of such report. Senators who have been stockholders in any national bank or other financial institution, or are otherwise financially interested in any national bank or other financial institution, shall be notified by the President of the Senate to appear before the committee on the day specified in the report.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] suggested the other day that inquiring into the attitude of Senators with regard to their interest is unprecedented in the Senate and that my resolution is a reflection upon the honor of the Senate. I assure him that resolutions in a proceeding similar to this have been passed before. Again there was a rumor that members of the Senate were to be heard of appearing in the Supreme Court for corporations that had received subsidies from the General Government, Senator Beck of Kentucky introduced the following bill, and asked for its consideration without reference to a committee:

Resolved, That it shall be unlawful for any member of either House of Congress to accept employment as attorney at law, or payment for services of any kind, from any railroad company, or any officer or agent thereof, which obtained its charter, or any grant of lands, or pecuniary aid from the United States; and any person who violates this provision shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, be fined in any sum not exceeding $5,000, and imprisoned not more than one year, in the discretion of the court.

That bill was passed by a very large vote without reference to a committee. It was afterwards reconsidered and referred, but I cite it as a precedent.

Then again it was suggested some years ago that members of Congress were in the habit of practicing for compensation before the Departments and before the courts with regard to claims against the Government, and a very severe criminal law was passed to prevent it.

I recollect further that at the time of the Credit Mobilier investigation a member of this body had invested of his own money $4,000—I think that was the amount—in the Credit Mobilier, a part of it in the stock. The testimony came out during an investigation in the other House and it was sent here. A select committee was raised. The Senator did not give an entirely satisfactory explanation of his conduct, and a resolution was unanimously reported from the select committee to expel him. The supposed offense that he committed was of this nature: The Credit Mobilier was a contracting company. It contracted for the construction of a part of the Pacific Railroad. It issued stock, and that was the stock in which Mr. Patterson made his investment. There was no reason why the Pacific Railroad Company might not let contracts for its construction; that was the usual mode; but it was contended that inasmuch as the railroad company was subsidized by the Government and might possibly ask for further legislation, it was highly improper for a member of Congress to have stock in a construction company.

The Senate will recollect very distinctly the excitement there was in the country over that question. The country was extremely jealous of members of Congress being engaged pecuniarily in any transactions with the Government where it might possibly influence their votes.

As I said the other morning, this rule must have its limitations. It would be absurd to say that no man should participate in legislation that would be directly or indirectly benefited or injured by it. That would be very absurd. For instance, it would be absurd to say that farmers, who suffer more than any other class, should not be represented here, and it would be absurd to raise an objection that a Senator was a planter of cotton or a raiser of wheat, or to make any suggestion that it would be improper for him to participate in legislation. But it is very manifest that he would be directly interested in the result of his vote if he was engaged in that business.

I have taken the price of cotton and of wheat for the five years preceding the closing of the mints of the Latin Union. Taking the average price of wheat that was exported to Europe for 1870, 1871, 1872, 1873, 1874, and 1875, and also taking the average price of wheat that was exported to Europe in 1888, 1889, 1890, 1891, 1892, and 1893, I find that if in the latter years the producers of wheat had received the same price that they did before the demonetization of silver, they would have made a very much larger amount of money. They have lost by the fall of silver a very large amount. It aggregates $349,674,364 in five years. The fall in the price of wheat has made a loss to the producers of wheat in this country to that amount in five years. Taking cotton, the loss is much greater.

Mr. PEPPER. Does the Senator's calculation include only the exported wheat?

Mr. STEWART. Only the exported wheat. I now take the exported cotton. I am taking the average price of the cotton exported in 1870, 1871, 1872, 1873, 1874, and 1875, and also the average price of the cotton exported in 1888, 1889, 1890, 1891, 1892, and 1893. If the producers of cotton had received the same price in the latter years that they did in the former they would have a very much larger amount of money. They have lost, according to that calculation, $1,514,207,409 by the depreciation in the price of cotton. The aggregate loss of the wheat-growers and the cotton-planters during the last five years, in consequence of the fall of the price of cotton, was produced largely by the demonetization of silver. The aggregate loss of the two classes is $1,863,571,773. The following is the table showing the facts I have stated:

Table showing loss to United States by decrease in export price of wheat and cotton by comparison.

OPERATION.—Multiply total number of bushels sold from 1888 to 1893, inclusive, by average price during years 1870 to 1875, inclusive, 1.324, which shows the amount that would have been received 1893, $1,122,175,736, minus $772,501,736 actually received from 1888 to 1893, inclusive. This shows a loss to the United States of $349,674,364 on wheat. The same rule applies to cotton.

Mr. TELLER. I present a petition signed by a large number of merchants and business men of the town of Delta, Colo., praying for the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 15 to 1 or 16 to 1 of gold. I will state that this is one of the patent petitions which were sent out from New York "praying for the repeal of the silver-purchasing clause of the so-called Sherman act," and the people of Delta have stricken out those words and inserted the words which I have read. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. TELLER. I also present a petition of sundry labor organizations of Cuyahoga County, Ohio, praying for the coinage of silver, for the issue of legal-tender notes redeemable in coin, and for the establishment of postal savings banks. The secretary who transmits the petition informs me that it represents fifteen or twenty thousand laboring men in that county. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I present three petitions, signed by about 40000 of Oregon, praying that the law known as the Sherman silver-purchasing act be repealed by substituting a law for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the present ratio, and that that law shall contain a clause making silver and silver certificates a full legal tender for all debts, public and private. I move that the petitions lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce and Industry of Louisiana, praying that the silver-purchasing clause of the so-called Sherman law be repealed, that the national banks be authorized to increase their circulation 10 per cent on their present deposit of bonds, and that a national non-partisan commission be appointed to consider the future financial needs of the country; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. QUAY presented a memorial of Local Assembly No. 9228, Knights of Labor, of Throop, Pa., remonstrating against the unconditional repeal of the silver-purchasing clause of the so-called Sherman law and praying for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1; which was ordered to lie on the table.

PRIVILEGES OF THE FLOOR.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent that the privileges of the floor of the Senate be extended to Hon. William Wirt Henry, of Virginia, for the week ending September 23. Mr. Henry is an eminent citizen who has been at a previous name, and comes to Washington to deliver an address, at which the Senate has voted to be present in a body.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts? The Chair hears none.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced a bill (S. 924) granting a pension to Rebecca E. Kutz; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 925) granting an honorable discharge to John Russell; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon introduced a bill (S. 926) for the relief of James Hastings, of Oregon; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. McMILLAN introduced a bill (S. 927) incorporating the Society of American Florists; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. GIBSON introduced a bill (S. 928) to incorporate the Washington and Benning Street Railway Company; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. CALL introduced a bill (S. 929) to require the clerk of the district and circuit courts of the United States for the northern district of Florida to be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. CALL, it was Ordered, That the memorial of John Pope Holbitt, praying the intervention of the United States Government in securing to him title to certain estates in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, alleged to belong to him, be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, there being no adverse report.

CONSOLIDATION OF LAND OFFICES.

Mr. MANDERSON. I submit a resolution and ask unanimous consent that it be now considered.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be instructed to inform the Senate whether any of the United States land offices in the State of Nebraska have been abolished or closed down upon whose recommendation or upon what showing of necessity or advisability;

the number of acres of public lands subject to settlement under existing law in each of the land districts existing prior to such abolition or consolidation; and to transmit to the Senate copies of all correspondence or other papers bearing upon the subject.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska asks for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I ask the Senator from Nebraska if he has any objection to inserting the word "Oregon," so as to include Oregon as well as Nebraska?

Mr. MANDERSON. None whatever, except as it might lead to delay in obtaining the information. I desire to say a word, with permission.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska will proceed.

Mr. MANDERSON. It has come to the members of the Congressional delegation from Nebraska as a mere matter of rumor that there has been a consolidation of many of the land districts in that State. It has been done, I may say, so far as I am concerned, without consultation with me, and I think without consultation with my colleague, and without consultation with any of the Congressional delegation from Nebraska. We are naturally very desirous to know why it has been done, and the reasons therefor.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Will the Senator include Oregon?

Mr. MANDERSON. I do not object to including Oregon also.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I am not aware that anything of the kind has been done in Oregon. I have, however, within the last week, received four or five different letters from constituents desiring to know whether any changes have been made, stating that they had understood such changes had been made there by consolidation. I ask that the word "Oregon" be inserted at the proper place in the resolution.

Mr. MANDERSON. I have no objection.

Mr. BERRY. I ask that the resolution be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read as modified at the suggestion of the Senator from Oregon.

The Secretary read the resolution as modified, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be instructed to inform the Senate whether any of the United States land offices in the State of Nebraska and Oregon have been abolished or consolidated, and if so, which of them, upon whose recommendation or upon what showing of necessity or advisability; the number of acres of public lands subject to settlement under existing law in each of the land districts existing prior to such abolition or consolidation; and to transmit to the Senate copies of all correspondence or other papers bearing upon the subject.

Mr. HOAR. I suggest to the Senator from Nebraska that the word "or should be" and, "so as to read," upon whose recommendation and upon what showing of necessity," etc.

Mr. MANDERSON. Perhaps it should so read. I wrote the resolution very hurriedly.

Mr. PEPPER. I have information of the same character relating to Kansas that the Senator from Nebraska has concerning land-office affairs in his State, and I ask that "Kansas" may be inserted immediately after "Oregon."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to this modification?

Mr. BERRY. I ask that the resolution may go over until tomorrow. I want to look at it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the resolution goes over under the rule.

Mr. TELLER. I suppose the Senator from Nebraska has a right to modify his resolution before it goes over, and I ask him if he will include Colorado.

Mr. MANDERSON. I have no objection; and before the resolution goes over, if the Senator from Arkansas is willing at a moment, I will state that I do not introduce it as a reelection upon the Secretary of the Interior or the Commissioner of the General Land Office, except as I reflect upon them for making these changes, if they have been made, without consultation as to the advisability thereof with any member of Congress from that State.

Mr. WHITE of California. Will the Senator from Nebraska permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. MANDERSON. Certainly.

Mr. WHITE of California. Do I understand that the announcements have been made with reference to changes in land offices? I ask for the reason that it has been rumored that in California such changes have been made. Does the Senator understand that there has been any official declaration touching the matter?

Mr. MANDERSON. The public press tells that that has been done, and I am in receipt this morning of telegrams announcing that the consolidations of land offices in Nebraska.

Mr. WHITE of California. I have not myself been able to ascertain the fact.

Mr. BERRY. I wish to say a word in response to what was said by the Senator from Nebraska. My information is that the last appropriation act cut down the appropriations for this pur-pass with the express intention of reducing the land offices throughout the United States, and whatever has taken place in the way of consolidation has been done in response to the action of Congress in the general appropriation act of the last session. But let the resolution go over until to-morrow and I will look at it.

Mr. ALLEN. I wish to occupy just a moment in answer to the question of the Senator from California and the statement of my colleague. I desire to say that in visiting the Interior Department this morning I heard that the change indicated in the resolution had been made. My colleague is entirely correct, so far as I am concerned, when he says that the change was made without the knowledge of the delegation from our State. My knowledge of the land districts in Nebraska leads me to believe that the consolidations are not wise from the standpoint of accessibility. I think there is nothing in the resolution to reflect at all upon the Interior Department. Certainly I support the resolution freely, and I do not reflect upon the Department a particle. It occurs to me that the information called for is essential for the delegation from Nebraska and for the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to say that the Senator from Arkansas is laboring under a slight misapprehension as respects the question of appropriation for the registers and receivers of public lands. It is true that the appropriation is a small one, relatively, but it was made for the purpose of dispensing with any necessary land offices. It was as well known when that appropriation was made, as it must be now known, that it was an inadequate appropriation for the entire year, as the appropriations for this purpose for several years have been inadequate. I do not wish it to appear that the consolidation goes on, if there are consolidations, in pursuance of any statute of Congress requiring such an abandonment of land offices.

Mr. BERRY. I wish to say in response to the Senator from Iowa, that my information is that the appropriation made in the last appropriation act is not sufficient to keep up all the land offices now in existence throughout the United States.

Mr. ALLISON. So I stated.

Mr. BERRY. That you conceded?

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir.

Mr. BERRY. I am glad to make any statement in regard to a provision requiring the abolition of any necessary land offices. I have information from the Secretary of the Interior—and I want to say, by the way, it was published three months ago in all the newspapers throughout the country that these offices would be consolidated—specifying the probable places where the consolidations would take place. It is no new matter sprung suddenly, because it was published, I think, in June or July. I saw it myself in the Register. Mr. Peffer's information that the consolidations have taken place have been done because the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the Land Office believe that it was necessary to consolidate the land offices in order to keep within the appropriation made by Congress. That is the statement that I originally made or intended to make.

Mr. VORHEES. As this matter will all come up to-morrow I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 1.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over under the rule. The morning business is closed.

PURCHASE OF SILVER BULLION.

Mr. VORHEES. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of an act approved July 14, 1890, entitled "an act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes."

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee on the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill; the pending question being on the amendment proposed by Mr. PEPPER to the substitute reported by the Committee on Finance.

Mr. VORHEES. The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY] desires to address the Senate this morning.

Mr. LINDSAY. Mr. President, the bill under consideration proposes first, to repeal so much of the act of July 12, 1890, commonly called the "Sherman law," as requires the Government to purchase and store in the vaults of the Treasury silver bullion; and, second, to commit the Government to the policy of the continued use of silver as well as gold as standard money, and to the coinage of both metals into money of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value, the same to be secured either through international agreement or by independent legislative enactments, providing such safeguards as will insure the maintenance of the parity in value of the two metals, and the equal power of every dollar, at all times, in the markets and in the payments of debts.

The bill contains not one word looking to the discontinuance of silver coinage under any existing law, and leaves unimpaired the provisions of the act of 1890 for the coinage of silver in the future, if any such there be.

It is strange to hear Senators assert, as has been done day after day, that the enactment of this bill into a law will be to demote silver, and to relegate it to the condition of the base metals, and to strike down the last hope of those who hold to the policy of the bimetallic standard.

And stranger still is the claim of Democratic Senators that the bill is undemocratic in its tendency, and in open opposition to the Democratic platform adopted last year by the Chicago convention.

In the course of a carefully prepared speech delivered a few days since, the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE] used this language:

It seems to me, that the great Democratic party which I have long supposed because I believed it to be not only correct in its theoretical opinions, but also in its practical measures, the basis of the land; it seems to me, that the Democratic party will now be so thoroughly that this great party will cease to be the people's friend and become the subversive of the combined capitalists, and will constitute in its final legislation the illegal and illegitimate successor of the thirty-three years of Republican rule, which we have always heretofore denounced as building up the consolidated corporations which have well-nigh absorbed the wealth of our country.

The gravity of the charge thus implied against the Democratic Executive who has recommended the pending legislation, and against Democratic Senators who are giving it their support cannot be overestimated. Is it true the President and his Secretaries, the Treasury and the majority of the Democratic members of the House of Representatives, and the Democratic Senators who expect to vote for this bill, are engaged in the unholy work of setting aside Democratic traditions and separating that party from the common people, "the masses of the land," and turning it over body and soul to "the combinations and corporations which have well-nigh absorbed the wealth of our country?" Are the influences thus fairly deducible from the Senator's language warranted by the facts?

I would like to know when and where the Democratic party committed itself to the purchase and storage of silver bullion in order to protect and encourage the mining industries in the silver-producing States.

What part or lot did the Democratic party have in the enactment of the Sherman law, and what Democratic convention, national or State, ever gave the sanction of its approval to that law or to any of its provisions? It contains no single Democratic feature. It has all the while been denounced by the Democracy as the product of a political intrigue, whereby the representatives of the silver-producing States were induced to abandon the cause of silver coinage, accept a market for their silver bullion, and assist in the enactment of the McKinley tariff law.

It is only since a Democratic President has been elected and the Democratic Congress has become responsible for the legislation of the country that adhesion to this law has been made the test of Democracy and the shibboleth of bimetalism.

It is neither politic nor legitimate for the Government of the United States to deal in silver bullion as a mere commodity, and it is absurd to purchase silver bullion to be held as collateral security for Treasury notes, or any other form of indebtedness issued by the Government.

If we are not to coin silver, why purchase it?

This most pertinent question was asked when the conference report was pending in the Senate in July, 1890. It was not answered then, it has not been answered since, and cannot be successfully answered in accordance with the Democratic theory of the powers and duties of the Federal Government.

At the conference report in July, 1890, made it clear that this bill was intended to stop the coinage of silver and to require the Government to purchase monthly 4,500,000 ounces of silver bullion at the market price for the sole purpose of furnishing a market to those engaged in the silver mining industries; the silver, when purchased, to be held as a commodity and, except to a limited extent, not to be coined into money.

The Secretary shall each month coin 2,000,000 ounces of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act into standard silver dollars until the 1st day of July, 1891, and after that time he shall coin of silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as much as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of the Treasury notes herein provided for.

But these Treasury notes were made payable in gold or silver coin at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, and to that discretion was attached the declaration that it was the policy of the United States to maintain the two metals on a parity with each other at the present legal ratio, or such ratio as may be provided by law. This declaration meant, and was intended to mean, that these Treasury notes shall be paid in gold so long as the market price of silver as compared with gold bullion remains below the legal ratio of 16 to 1, or such other ratio as may be established by law.

It was so charged upon the floor of the Senate by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST], the Senator from Texas [Mr. COKE],

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, September 18, 1893.

The House met at 1 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m. The Chaplain, Rev. SAMUEL W. HADDAWAY, offered the following prayer: Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, through Thy good providence we have come to an interesting period in the history of the nation and in the history of this city. We praise and magnify Thee for the marvelous development of science, of art, and of architecture in the past century. We adore Thee, gracious God, that magnificent architectural piles rise upon the right hand and upon the left hand; but we would learn from these architectural piles that they are only of the day; they are not to abide for ever and ever.

The day may not be far distant when one stone shall not be left upon another. But there is a magnificent temple rising, there is a corner-stone, Jesus Christ, Thy Son; there are living stones being built into this magnificent temple, and it is to be incorruptible, undefiled, and fadeeth not away—even a Christian character; and we beseech Thee to enable us to learn these lessons from all the science and circumstances which surround us, for Thy name's sake. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Senate is in hearty sympathy with the sorrow of the death of Leland Stanford, late a Senator from the State of California.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, the business of the Senate be now adjourned, that his associates may be enabled to perform proper rites to his high character and distinguished public services.

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the Senate do now adjourn.

CAPITOL CENTENNIAL CEREMONIES.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the order adopted by the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House will attend the ceremonies of the centennial anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of the Capitol, September 18, 1893, at 2 o'clock p. m.

The recess was taken at ten minutes before 2 o'clock of that day and the House, accompanied by its officers, shall proceed to the place assigned, at the east front of the Capitol. That the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House is directed to make the necessary arrangements to carry out this order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would call the attention of the House to the fact that there is no provision made in this order as to the duration of the recess or the adjournment of the House. Therefore, the Chair would suggest that some motion be made respecting the return to the Hall and the adjournment of the House immediately thereafter.

Mr. CATHINGS. I move, that when the ceremonies have been concluded the House reassemble. I think that motion would be the idea.

Mr. REED. It is understood that there is to be an adjournment at once on return of the House.

M. LIVINGSTON. Why not adjourn now?

The SPEAKER. The only reason why the House can not now adjourn is that the House has agreed to attend this ceremony as a body, and both the House and Senate have agreed to take a recess. However, it can be the understanding, and without objection it will be the understanding, that immediately upon the conclusion of the ceremonies the House will, or such members as return, reassemble, when an adjournment will be had until to-morrow. Without objection that will be the understanding and the order.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The SPEAKER. The House will, in accordance with the order, form in line and proceed to the place of the ceremonies. The officers will accompany the House and the pages will form in the rear of the members.

Accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 50 minutes), the House, headed by the Speaker and accompanied by its officers, proceeded to the platform prepared for their accommodation in front of the east portico.

The House reassembled at 5 o'clock and 10 minutes.

Mr. MCRAE. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

The SECRETARY. At the end of the resolution add the words "Since the year 1861."

Mr. SHERMAN. Let the resolution be read as it now stands. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the resolution as modified.

The resolution as modified was read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Will the Senate agree to the resolution as modified?

Mr. SHERMAN. The whole of that is merely historical. It seems to me it is hardly worth while to pass such a resolution. The cases have been numerous, and it would require a good deal of labor in the Treasury Department, and without any use, because the whole of the information can be obtained in the ordinary history of the times.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. GOVERNOR. Let the resolution be read again.

The Secretary again read the resolution.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no doubt it would take a good deal of time to furnish the information, because during all the war, and for periods after the war, in every stage of the refunding operations, in innumerable instances interest was prepaid, as it was always prepaid under the refunding operation. So it would involve an enormous amount of labor. I do not see, unless the Senator from Kansas has some object in view, any use in requiring it to be furnished. I never like to object to any call for information; but this is a call for information upon a matter of public notoriety. I presume every Senator in the sound of my voice knows that during the last thirty years there have been innumerable cases, probably myriads of cases almost, where the interest has been advanced on bonds that have been refunded or on bonds that have been paid or prepaid, etc. I do not see any purpose that can be gained which will be useful to the public at large or to anybody by calling for this information. It will merely involve a great amount of labor on another department of the Government without any use.

Mr. PLATT. The information is to be found in the reports of the Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. SHERMAN. It will be found in the reports of the Secretary of the Treasury in general, but not in detail. The resolution calls for the details of every particular case where interest has been prepaid, as it always had to be prepaid in cases of refunding, and the cases of that kind are practically innumerable. The Secretary of the Treasury would probably be compelled to say that he could not give the innumerable cases where interest has been prepaid. It has always been done as a matter of public notoriety, and generally upon public notice given that in case the bondholder would surrender his bond interest would be paid up to a certain time. To give in detail the cases where it occurred would amount to an immense labor, for which I do not see any use. Unless the Senator has some particular object that he wishes to accomplish I certainly can not vote for the resolution.

Mr. PEPPER. I certainly would not have introduced the resolution if I did not have some object in view. In case it is objected to, I will state my object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senate agree to the resolution as modified?

Mr. HOAR. Why can not the Senator from Kansas modify his resolution so as to call for the classes of cases? Undoubtedly that is all the information he wants. I do not suppose he desires that the case of John Smith and John Jones shall be specified, indicating the holder of every individual bond, but he desires to have the facts in regard to the general policy or practice. To that there will be no objection.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I am surprised, although I ought not to be, at the tenderness which is exhibited upon the part of some Senators on both sides of the Chamber whenever any proposition is made to probe the transactions of the Treasury Department or any branch of it. I was hoping that the resolution would be permitted to go through without any objection; but it seems that nothing which is offered upon that particular line, and especially if it comes from me, is to be entertained.

This is a matter which the people have a right to understand. The Senator from Ohio does not perceive that I have any object in view. Does the Senator suppose that I am sitting here without any object in view? Have the good people of Kansas sent me here under commission to perform their will, to execute what they have charged me with executing, and am I to have no object in asking for information? Is the Treasury Department in its operation so scared that the Senate of the United States and the people of the United States shall not be permitted to know what it is doing?

The people in that section of the country which I have the honor in part to represent are getting very tired of this sensitiveness. We believe that we have a right to know what every officer of the Government does, why he does it, when he does it, and what public exigencies, if any there be, require such action. The Secretary of the Treasury is a public officer charged with a public trust, and one of the most sacred trusts confided to any officer is that of dealing with the people's money. Time and time again, as the Senator from Ohio informs us, this thing has been done, the saving of interest on Government bonds, and yet it is a question about what object I have in view.

The Senator from Massachusetts would have the subject classified in some way so that there should be less labor involved in the matter, and that the people should acquire less information concerning it. Mr. President, while I am in this body (and I shall be here three and a half years yet) I expect to probe a good many more things that have not yet seen daylight.

I did not intend and I did not desire to say anything upon the resolution, but it seems to be perfectly appropriate, indeed, I feel as if the duty were forced upon me to call attention to a little history that has taken place in this body.

Mr. McPHERSON. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. McPHERSON. I do not know whether the debate is proceeding in order this morning. The resolution has just been passed, and I understand.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution came over from yesterday, and the debate is perfectly in order. The Senator from Kansas will proceed.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, among the first subjects which I had the honor to present to this body for consideration, in the early part of the first session of the Fifty-second Congress, was a resolution proposing to instruct the Committee on Finance to inquire into the cost of lending money; in other words, to inquire into the reports of the Senate what are the actual expenses, in percentage of the amount of money loaned, attending the business of money-lending—one of the most important lines of business transaction in this or any other country, as the people, and especially the working people, know so well.

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Finance, very properly, and if it has ever been considered by that committee, or by any member of the committee, the Senate is none the wiser for it. If it has been reported, I am certain I never heard of it, and my attendance has been quite constant, I believe.

After a while I offered another resolution, inquiring of the Secretary of the Treasury what amount of paper currency had been issued by the Government since 1860 or 1861. While that resolution was permitted to pass, when the report of the Secretary came in it omitted all mention of a large number of classes of notes which had been issued and used as currency. I believed then, and so stated to the Senate, that it was a studied attempt upon the part of the Treasury Department to conceal from the people, and I took occasion to criticize the report the next morning after its appearance.

Then, Mr. President, after a time I offered another resolution touching a subject of very great importance indeed, asking that the Committee on the Judiciary be instructed to inquire into the state of the law as concerns the relation existing between employers and employees. That resolution, instead of going to the Committee on the Judiciary, where it was intended and where it ought to have gone, as it seems to me, was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, for the purpose, I have no doubt, of preventing any action upon it and any report to the Senate.

During the present session I offered a resolution instructing the Secretary of the Treasury to inform the Senate whether certain large banking institutions of this country were being conducted in violation of the law. The resolution met with violent opposition in this body from both sides of the Chamber. When I say "both sides," I mean Democrats and Republicans. There are three sides, although the Populists have not got into the center yet, but we shall be there in time. That resolution was debated hotly for an hour and a half, and then it went upon the Calendar. Now it is before the Committee on Finance, where it has been sleeping since the 31st day of August.

Another resolution, inquiring more specifically about matters in some measure of a similar character, was treated in the same way. This resolution inquired also whether any officer of the Government was in any way connected with the New York clearing house—a very important matter—was treated similarly, and it sleeps the same sleep in the pigeonholes of the Committee on Finance, if I am not speaking out of order.

Another resolution, inquiring as to the amount of bonds which had been purchased and the premiums paid upon them, fortunately went upon the Calendar without any discussion. We shall see what will become of it when it is brought up.

Now comes the present resolution, asking for information which the Senator from Ohio insists will require a great deal of labor to furnish. No matter how much labor is required, the Senate not only has a right to the information, but it seems to me to be under existing circumstances, when the first bill upon the Calendar of General Orders is a bill proposing to enlarge the circulation of the national banks, that the Senate ought to have all the information we can get. It will be but a little time until there will be a proposition to issue more bonds. The cry of the miser will have been changed by that time from "more gold" to "more bonds," on which to establish more banks, in order to issue more bank currency, to take from the people more interest, more of the products of their labor.

The people, Mr. President, are inquiring about these things; they have a right to know what their officers are doing. I repeat that I am surprised at the sensitiveness which is exhibited on the part of some Senators concerning the financial management of our affairs. No wonder that the people are asking why is it, what is there so sacred about the banks, what is there so sacred about the bonds, what is there so sacred about the management of the Treasury, that we are not permitted to learn all about them?

As long as I am here, when I want any information for my people, for the Senate, or for the country at large, I shall have no hesitancy in asking for it.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, if the Senator from Kansas supposes that I desire to conceal any information which is necessary for his guidance, or for the guidance of any one else, he is greatly mistaken.

What I desired to call attention to was the abuse—for I call it an abuse, and it is a gross abuse sometimes—of the rights of the people, and especially of the money of the people, to call upon the heads of Departments for information, which can only be obtained by careful analysis of details, and often at great expense to the Government. Sometimes a great mass of matter is sent here, is printed, and never read, never referred to, never looked at.

The Senator by his resolution calls for all the cases, for all the information which can be given by the Treasury Department for thirty-two years, during a period when millions upon millions, and I may say billions of money, bonds, and securities of various kinds have, in different forms, been passed through the operations of the Treasury Department.

I say that to literally comply with the terms of the resolution would cause the employment of a great multitude of clerks in the Treasury Department and in the sending here of a great mass of unnecessary matter, which will be of no service either to the Senator himself or to the people of the country. It is mere buncombe, waste matter, waste labor, at the expense of the people of the United States.

There is not a single transaction in all the multiplied transactions which are called for by the resolution, but what has been made public and exposed in public documents from time to time and from year to year. The amount of bonds refunded, the amount of bonds paid, under what circumstances they were paid, upon what terms issued, and all that mass of matter, if this resolution were passed, would have to be collected and sent here, and it would never be referred to.

It is in the interest of the public service that I have called attention to this matter. I never like to stand in the way of gratifying the wishes of any Senator for any amount of information; but I believe that the Senate is derelict in its duty to the people of the United States at large in not preventing a waste of public money in calling upon the Departments to answer questions which amount to nothing whatever and can have no results.

Mr. CULLOM. And which have already been answered. Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, Sir, and which have already been answered by public documents, which can be found on the files of the Departments, and which come here to our libraries in multiplied form. To have all this matter gathered together and sent here in the form of another document for the purpose of informing the Senator from Kansas upon a subject upon which there is already ample information, seems to me to be unnecessary. If the Senator from Kansas would take the pains to go to the public libraries and examine the various reports and public documents he would find the information he desires.

Is it right for him to throw upon the people of the United States the expense of gathering this matter in the form of manuscript, as must be done when it is sent here by the Treasury Department after great labor? Is it right for him to involve the Government in large expenditure to answer such a resolution? It would probably cost as much as the salary of the Senator for a year to gather the information he seeks, and even print that document for his information. What use is there in it?

It seems to me that it is a mere waste of public money to pass such resolutions; and when I hear them read I can not but feel that it is my duty to object to their passage. At the same time, there is so much yielded to the wishes of a Senator and it is so much the habit of the Senate to grant every request which is made, and to allow the passage of every bill that is presented, that the resolutions merely for buncombe, without having any good result, and without giving the Senate or the Senator any information which can not already be found in the files of the Senate and the published records of the country. I do not care anything about it, however, except that the resolution involves a considerable sum of money.

Mr. TELLER. I wish to ask the Senator whether the payment of interest on the bonds was anticipated by virtue of some statute or by the custom of the Department?

Mr. SHERMAN. Always by virtue of a statute.

Mr. TELLER. When was that statute passed? Mr. SHERMAN. Statutes on the subject have been passed, I think, from time to time in respect to the funding bills, etc. As a matter of course, when calls are made for the payment of bonds a time is fixed when the interest shall be computed, and prepayment of interest is sometimes made in calling in bonds.

Mr. TELLER. The resolution, as I understand, inquires practically how often the Government has anticipated the annual interest becoming due, and paid it.

Mr. SHERMAN. The interest has never been prepaid, I think. I do not know of any case. There may have been times during the war when the interest was prepaid, but I think not.

Mr. TELLER. Before the interest is due, I mean?

Mr. SHERMAN. It has always been prepaid when refunding operations were going on, and was no doubt prepaid up to a certain time, generally as an inducement to refunding. The law authorized it.

Mr. TELLER. That was part of the statute for refunding. I understand the Senator from Kansas to address himself to another different condition—that is, how often when and by what authority has the Treasury Department anticipated the annual interest on bonds. That is the way I understand the resolution.

Mr. GORMAN. Will the Senator from Ohio permit me?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly. Mr. GORMAN. If the Senator from Colorado will read the resolution he will find that it embraces the anticipation of the payment of interest at any time. When refunding takes place, the Senator from Ohio has well stated, the bonds are called in. I will read the resolution of the Senator from Kansas:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby directed to, keep in the Senate when, at what moments, and under what circumstances, the Treasury Department has anticipated the payment of interest on Government bonds by refunding, since 1872.

I beg to call the attention of the Senate to the phraseology of that resolution. It not only calls for the payments made and the times at which they have been made, but it goes beyond one or two other resolutions offered by the Senator from Kansas, and directs the Secretary of the Treasury to state "under what circumstances" these payments have been made. That is unusual. Resolutions of inquiry as to the amounts of money which have been paid out and the dates of their payment are perfectly natural and right, as the Senator from Ohio has well said. I call the attention of the Senator from Kansas to this point. Certainly he does not mean to impose the duty upon the present Secretary of the Treasury of going back to edit and cull from all the reports of thirty-two years the reasons which have been given for such action by each of his predecessors. That is not an ordinary resolution calling for information.

I suggest to the Senator from Kansas that if he will content himself by looking over these reports of the Secretary of the Treasury, he will find that every item has been heretofore reported to Congress. The Senator wants all the information collated and put in one document, but I think he ought not to require the Secretary of the Treasury to go back and give under what circumstances all this was done; which would be a history of the last thirty-two years of the Treasury Department.

If the Senator will content himself by asking for information as to the amounts and dates of these payments, that would be a proper resolution; but I cannot, for one, consent to the passage of a resolution requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to go back and give a history of the times. I therefore move in line 3, after the word "amounts," to strike out "and under what circumstances;" so as to leave the resolution one asking for the dates and the amounts of the payments.

Mr. CULLOM. Let me inquire of the Senator whether the amounts and dates are not already given in the reports of the Secretary of the Treasury, which are on file in the library?

Mr. GORMAN. Certainly; they are in the reports which have been furnished from year to year.

Mr. CULLOM. I think so.

Mr. GORMAN. The Secretary of the Treasury has reported the information to Congress over and over again.

Mr. CULLOM. The resolution is unnecessary from any point of view.

Mr. QUAY. Mr. President—

Mr. SHERMAN. I wish simply to read the law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. SHERMAN. In a moment I will yield.

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] inquired of me whether the advancing of the payment of interest was in virtue of law or custom. I will say that section 3699 of the Revised Statutes, which was passed on the 17th of March, 1864, and is now the law, provides as follows:

Section 3699. The Secretary of the Treasury may anticipate the payment of interest on the public debt for a period not exceeding one year, from time to time, without the consent and approval of the Congress, as a means of temporary experiment, and he is authorized to disburse any gold in the Treasury of the United States, not necessary for the payment of interest on the public debt. The obligation to create the sinking fund and not, however, be impaired thereby.

That is the broad authority.

Mr. TELLER. What was the purpose of the law?

Mr. SHERMAN. It was passed in the midst of the war, because, I presume, it was thought necessary in order to give confidence to the bondholders, etc., and secure the sale of bonds. But how can Secretary Carlisle tell what induced Congress to pass this law or what induced Secretary Chase at the time to ask for the passage of the law? This law is still the standing law, and I am told by Senators by the side of me that it has been asked upon in the last year or two in order, I suppose, to relieve the money market.

Mr. QUAY. I rise, Mr. President, simply to say that I regard the resolution of the Senator from Kansas as trivial and blocking the way of an important discussion. Therefore I move to lay the resolution on the table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Pennsylvania moves to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. CALL. I hope the Senator will withdraw that motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is not debatable.

Mr. CALL. I ask the Senator to withdraw the motion.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion.

Mr. QUAY. For what purpose does the Senator from Florida desire me to withdraw the motion?

Mr. CALL. I desire to say a word on the resolution.

Mr. QUAY. I withdraw the motion until the remarks of the Senator from Florida shall be concluded, and then I shall renew it.

Mr. CALL. It seems to me, Mr. President, that this resolution is an entirely proper one, and that all the objections which have been made to it are unfounded.

Suppose it is true that the information called for by the resolution is contained in the reports of the Treasury Department, is that any reason why a Senator here, occupied with public business, should not have the aid of a clerk in a Department to condense the statements and present them in a form in which he can readily use them?

There can be nothing in that objection, nor can it take any great amount of expense or time. If, as the Senator from Ohio says, these statements are contained in reports already published, there is nothing but the time occupied in collation; and a clerk had better be employed to do that than a Senator of the United States, occupied as he is with the study of these great questions and with their bearing upon the interests of his constituents. I think the labors of a Senator ought to be lightened. The dignity of his position, the value of his thoughts to the public, are all considerations which make this resolution an entirely proper one.

In regard to the circumstances under which the Secretary of the Treasury, to which the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] says would be a history of the Department, what difficulty is there in setting off the data published and giving the information for the particular exigency under which these payments were made? Certainly there can be nothing in the objections which have been made to the resolution of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. QUAY. I renew my motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Pennsylvania moves that the resolution lie upon the table, upon which motion the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] has demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] on the bill to repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman act, so called, and I have a general pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. I withhold my vote for the present, to see whether either of those Senators is paired with anybody else.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE]. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I withhold my vote.

Mr. DOLPH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], whom I do not see in the Chamber, and I therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. DUBOIS (when his name was called). I have a temporary pair with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS]. If he were here, I should vote "aye."

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSENBOUGH].

Mr. QUAY, when his name was called. I am paired upon all questions with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. MORGAN]. I do not know how he would vote on this question. He is not present in the Chamber, nor is his colleague, but I have all confidence in the good sense of the Senator from Alabama, and believe, if here, he would vote "yea" on the proposition, and therefore I vote "yea."

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON], and therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CULLOM. I see that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY], with whom I have a general pair, is present, and I therefore take the liberty of voting. I vote "yea."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state to the Senator from Illinois that the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] informed the present occupants of the chair, as he was leaving here, that he had a pair with the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. CULLOM. If the President has understood that the Senator from Arkansas has a general pair, I shall withdraw my vote. I had an understanding with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. VILAS] to pair with him upon what is known as the silver bill; but if the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] regards that as a general pair, I will withdraw my vote and stand paired with the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. CALL (after having voted in the negative). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. As this vote seems to be regarded as a proper subject for pairs, I withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 19; as follows:

when he yielded it. When once the floor is yielded it is yielded for good, unless by the unanimous consent of the Senate.

Mr. STEWART. Is there any difficulty about taking the floor when an opportunity is presented?

Mr. FAULKNER. I will say to the Senator from Nevada that I am not making any point on that, but I want to clearly understand the parliamentary rule of the Senate on a question of this kind. I think I am correct, and I ask the views of the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada was recognized by the Chair after House bill No. 1 was taken up and became the question before the Senate. The Senator from Nevada occupying the floor would have a right to yield to a question, to any suggestion that a Senator might choose to make, but neither the Senator from Nevada nor any other Senator can hold and farm out the floor to Senators as he may choose, for extended argument.

Mr. STEWART. I do not propose to do anything of the kind. I will take an opportunity to address the Senate when no one else wants to speak.

Mr. TELLER. The suggestion of farming out the time, I think, hardly applies to the condition now before the Senate. Since I have been a member of the Senate I have never known—known—The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Colorado will allow the Chair to remark that he did not intend to imply that any such state of case existed, but he was answering a parliamentary inquiry and chose that form of words in which to answer it.

Mr. TELLEZ. Since I have been a member of the Senate I think I have never known anyone to interfere with a Senator who had given notice that he wanted to make a speech at a particular time. Of course, as the Vice-President decided one day during the present session, when the question is raised he is not entitled to the floor by virtue of his notice, but the Senator has the floor from the preceding day is entitled to the floor he sees fit. However, it is the custom in the Senate, and it is a very ancient custom, that the Senator who had the floor, when the time arrived at which a Senator had given his notice, would give the floor to the Senator who had given the notice.

As some Senators around me by their remarks seem to think that he is farming out the time, I wish to say it is nothing of the kind. In a body where its members are not limited as to the time in which they are to speak, as is the case in some bodies, one may not only farming out the floor and giving up the time. The Senator from Nevada is entitled to the floor, and it does not make any difference whether he is discussing his resolution, the bill before the Senate, or something that has never come before the Senate and never may. There has been no rule in this body for many years that a Senator may not, when the subject he speaks on any subject he sees fit. That has been the unbroken rule in this body.

Mr. McPHERSON. May I ask the Senator from Colorado a question?

Mr. TELLE. If the Senator will wait a minute I will answer him. I do not desire to keep any Senator entitled to the floor by the common custom from the floor. I have stated the condition so far as business is concerned. I have stated the condition that I may leave the floor and in the middle of my remarks it was necessary to adjourn. The same evening the Senator from Ohio asked me if I intended to continue or whether I would give him the floor, he having given notice for the next day. I replied to him certainly, that he was entitled to the floor, not by law, not by rule, but by custom, and I should not think of taking him off the floor. He finished and I followed him. That is the basis of the universal custom in this body. It can not be a matter of complaint that a Senator yields to a Senator who has given notice.

Mr. FAULKNER. If the Senator will permit me, the question arose on this state of facts: I understand that the Senator from Nevada yesterday had the floor by virtue of a resolution which was then properly before the Senate. That resolution at the end of the morning hour went to the Calendar, and the Senator from Nevada assumed, as I understood, from the conditions of matters this morning, that when he rose a few minutes ago he took the floor by virtue of the fact that he had the floor on that resolution. Certainly there is no such condition existing under the parliamentary status of the resolution.

Mr. TELLER. Oh, no; the Senator from Nevada had the floor on the pending measure, and it does not make any difference whether he was discussing the resolution or the bill, he was proceeding on the bill before the Senate.

Mr. TELLER. He was recognized by the Chair and was entitled to the floor. By the uniform custom of the Senate he is entitled, when that bill comes before the Senate, to continue his remarks. He would like to complete the remarks, I understand.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Tennessee that the petition also refers to the formation of a commission, and for that reason the Chair thought it should be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HARRIS. Very well; let it be so referred.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The petition will be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. TURPIE presented a petition of the Board of Trade of Indianapolis, Ind., praying for the speedy and unconditional repeal of the silver-purchasing clause of the so-called Sherman silver law; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. CAMERON presented a memorial of the Farmers' Protective Tariff League, of Windom, Pa., remonstrating against any reduction in the present tariff laws on imported agricultural products and imported tobacco; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of Pomona Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, of Center Hall, Pa., of citizens of Erie County, and of Corry (Pa.) Grange, No. 55, Patrons of Husbandry, praying for the free coinage of silver; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of Deer Creek Grange, No. 337, Patrons of Husbandry, of New Vernon, Pa., remonstrating against any reduction in the volume of currency or any increase of the national debt; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of the Board of Trade of Scranton, Pa., of the Board of Trade of Greensburg, Pa., and of the Trades League of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for the immediate and unconditional repeal of the silver-purchasing clause of the so-called Sherman law; which were ordered to lie on the table.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. HOAR introduced a bill (S. 1011) for the relief of the First National Bank of Newton, Mass.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. MCILLAN introduced a bill (S. 1012) to correct the muster roll of J. Seymour Taylor; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. GALLINGER (by request) introduced a bill (S. 1013) for the relief of the heirs of the estate of John Holroyd, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Patents.

Mr. HARRIS introduced a bill (S. 1014) fixing the fees of United States circuit court commissioners, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also (by request) introduced a bill (S. 1015) authorizing the judges of the court of appeals for the District of Columbia to appoint a coroner; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. MCPHERSON introduced a bill (S. 1016) to increase the limit of cost for the erection of a public building in Camden, N. J.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. CAMERON introduced a bill (S. 1017) for the relief of Henry E. Rhoades; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. PLATT introduced a bill (S. 1018) granting a pension to Susan E. Cunningham; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 1019) reimbursing George B. Edmonds, late collector of customs of the port of Bridgeport, in Fairfield customs district; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 1020) to correct the military record of William Murphy; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 30) authorizing the State of Wisconsin to place in Statuary Hall at the Capitol the statue of Père Marquette; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Library.

PAYMENT OF INTEREST ON BONDS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day.

The resolution submitted yesterday by Mr. TELLER was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the Senate when, in what amounts, and under what circumstances the Treasury department has anticipated the payment of the annual interest on Government bonds since July, 1890.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I do not desire to discuss the resolution if there is no objection to it. It seems to me that it is not an objectionable resolution. It does not call for a statement of the interest paid during the time of refunding. There will be no difficulty in the Department in answering it. I think it is a resolution that ought to pass, and if there is no objection to it, I shall not take the time of the Senate to debate it. If there is objection, then I want to be heard on it.

Mr. SHERMAN. I see no objection to a general resolution of this kind. I objected the other day to the details called for by the resolution of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER].

Mr. TELLER. This does not include those details.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to the passage of the resolution.

Mr. GORMAN. Let it be read again.

The resolution was again read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. VOORHEES. Let me call the attention of the Senate to the fact that a literal compliance with the terms of the resolution would call for a history of public affairs for the last thirty-one years.

Mr. TELLER. Oh, no.

Mr. SHERMAN. Since 1860.

Mr. VOORHEES. It does not go back so far as I supposed. Very well, then, for thirty years; and that would be something of a task for a historian. "Under what circumstances" would call for a description of the condition of the country, why it was thought necessary and proper to anticipate the payment of interest. The reasons would have to be stated and their cogency. In other words, it is a resolution thrust at the Treasury Department asking it to justify itself for what has been done.

Now, Mr. President, I am the last person to close a single door against inquiry in this Government on any subject. I am not much for secret sessions anywhere; certainly I am not in favor of the Departments having sessions kept secret from the American people; but there is no secret to be discovered. The resolution does not go to any information that has not already been spread upon the records of the country and in its press a hundred times over. A payment of interest before it falls due is one of the things that is always chronicled in the public press and the financial journals, and the reasons for it are given at the time. The resolution simply asks for a restatement of the history of the Treasury transactions for the last thirteen years.

I would, with great respect for the author of the resolution, ask that at least the words "under what circumstances" may be stricken out. It would lighten the burden of the Department very much and call for all the information the Senator would need to have. Further than that, it seems to me, it would be a more sensible resolution than it is. I say that without intending to reflect upon the acumen and wisdom of its author, but it sounds to me like a strained resolution, one totally unnecessary in the light of the past, and involving, by its literal compliance, a queer piece of history that would reach us on this floor.

Mr. TELLER. The statement of the chairman of the Committee on Finance is inaccurate when he says that all the information which the resolution requires is to be found in the public archives. That is not correct. The bare statement that the Department has paid the interest in advance may be found, I think, in all the archives. What is desired is to know under what circumstances it was done; and the very clause the Senator objects to is the one that is meritorious in my estimation.

Mr. VOORHEES. May I ask the Senator a question, so that we may understand each other?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask the Senator to explain, then, the sense of the words "under what circumstances." To what do they relate, and what is it that is sought under them?

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, we are entering upon the commencement of a new Administration. The country has a right to expect that there is to be from the dominant party enunciated some financial policy. I know it was said the other day by a Senator on this side that the remnant of our party left here did not have the ability to formulate and present a financial system or a financial policy. It is not incumbent on us to do that now. The other party coming into power largely because of their criticism of our policy, largely because they found fault with our financial policy, as they had been doing for years, are now charged with the entire administration of this Government, and I assume of course that it means a radical revision and reconstruction of the financial policy of the country. In fact, I can not see how the party can meet the just demands of the people who supported them unless they do.

A number of months have passed since the party came into power, and they have had two messages from the President of the United States and innumerable interviews and letters, or at least one very recently, and I defy any man to determine from what has been said by the Treasury Department, what has been said by the Executive, what has been said by the advocates of the Administration on this floor or anywhere else what the policy is, except that it stands out in the forefront without contradiction that it is to be, if the Executive Department is supported by the legislative part of the Government, a single gold standard. I am speaking now so far as the money question is concerned.

It does seem to me that after so many months and after two months of session of Congress called for the special purpose of dealing with the monetary question and that alone, as we are told, there ought to be something from the dominant party indicating their financial policy, or else admitting that there is to be no change in the financial policy. I can not conceive it possible to suppose that the Government can sit idly by and do nothing further done; and yet from anything that we know from the Administration that is the inference we must draw. Of course we have before the Senate a temporary measure, as we were told it was—the allowance of the banks to issue up to 100 cents on the dollar upon their bonds, which would give us, we were told, $18,000,000 or $20,000,000 more currency. That of course does not meet the requirements of the country and nobody will pretend that it does.

In 1864 we entered upon a policy that we did not have much choice in entering upon. We were just emerging from a great war with a tremendous debt, with one-third of our country in a disorganized state, without government. In fact, we entered upon the policy before the war was over, but we perhaps crystallized and brought it into the present condition immediately after the war. We have followed that policy up to the present time, and one of the features has been that the Treasury of the United States, acting like the Bank of England or the Bank of France in those countries, could come to the rescue of the business of the country and afford it relief in times of distress and panic. In 1864, I believe, the Senator from Ohio said the law was passed which enabled the Secretary of the Treasury to anticipate three months, six months, or a year the interest on the public debt. The interest on the public debt was comparatively small at that time. It was $150,000,000 a year, or to be a little more accurate, it was $155,000,000. The payment of $155,000,000 in three months, six months, or a year, in advance, was a matter of grave consequence to the commercial interests of the country, and from time to time the Secretary of the Treasury has been compelled in the interest of commerce and trade to anticipate the payment of interest.

I am making no complaint of that. It was a policy deliberately adopted. It is a policy which I do not mean to say has ever been abused. I do not think it has been. It certainly saved us on several occasions from a severer panic than we have on hand.

Mr. President, we are about to make a change in this country. What is to be the policy? What is to be the method? We want to find out how every provision of law we made to meet these occasions has worked; and we have the right to know under what circumstances and why the Secretary of the Treasury anticipated by six months or a year the payment of interest on the public debt; we have a right to know how many times it became necessary, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury and the President—because they are supposed to act in accord in such matters—to disburse large sums of money, amounting to millions of dollars, months in advance of the time they became due.

What can be the objection to the resolution? It is an attack, says the Senator from Indiana, upon the Treasury. Certainly it is not an attack upon the present Secretary of the Treasury, for I am not myself aware that he has paid out in anticipation of its becoming due any interest at all. He may have done so; but if he has I do not know it, and the amount paid must be absolutely inconsequential if it does not count in the emergency we are passing through.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I said to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] the other day that I should not object to his resolution if he would so modify it as not to seem to involve for the reason of its purpose to win an interest which has been paid, which would impose an enormous duty on the Treasury Department. So I put this question in no spirit of hostility to the pending resolution, because it meets the objection I made to the other resolution. The question I wish to put to the Senator is, whether by the words "under what circumstances" he conceives it will be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to defend and continue for the reason of his predecessors in making these payments? If the Senator disclaims that, it seems to me there is no objection to the resolution.

Mr. TELLER. I have no idea that, when the Secretary of the Treasury shall come to answer this resolution, he will enter upon any criticism of his predecessors.

Mr. HOAR. The resolution uses the words "under what circumstances."

Mr. TELLER. The words "under what circumstances." I may say to the Senator from Massachusetts, in my judgment mean this: Was there at the time a commercial stringency, a money stringency of such a character as in the opinion of the Department required it to anticipate the payments of interest? I will say to the Senator that, in my judgment, under no other circumstances have payments been anticipated, as I think the Senator from Ohio will bear me out, except in the refunding operation.

Mr. HOAR. If I can have the attention of the Senator from Indiana, I hope that with the interpretation of the resolution the Senator from Colorado himself puts upon it, the Senator from Indiana will allow it to pass. The resolution can not be objectionable as the Senator explains it.

Mr. VOORHEES. After the explanation of the Senator from Colorado I see no serious objection to the resolution.

Mr. TELLER. Then I shall not detain the Senate, except to say further that I am a good deal astonished at the way resolutions of inquiry have been received in the Senate since this session began. I do not think that anybody who has been connected with the past Administrations—I am speaking now of the Republican Administrations—need be afraid to have inquiries of this or any other kind made touching public affairs. If there is anything in the Treasury Department or in any other Department of the Government which the public ought not to know, I shall be very sorry to learn it. I hold that the only way to maintain proper administration is to have absolute publicity. It is essential to proper administration that no doors shall be closed against any inquiry whatever.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] said the other day that to answer the inquiry, as it is introduced by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] would cost as much as a year's salary of a Senator. If that were true, if we are entering upon a new system of finance, we ought to have that knowledge, even if it should cost ten times as much. We want to determine, in preparing for a new system of finance, some way by which in times of panic and distress the Government of the United States may legally, properly, and effectively come to the rescue of the business interests of the country.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. CHANDLER. Does the Senator desire under this resolution that the Secretary of the Treasury, in giving the amounts which have been paid out when the Government interest has been anticipated, shall give in each instance the amount in detail paid to each individual?

Mr. TELLER. The resolution calls for nothing of that kind, and if the Senator thinks it does I have no objection to a modification of it.

Mr. CHANDLER. If the Senator will allow me further, I voted not to lay a similar resolution offered by the Senator from Kansas on the table, although I thought that the resolution was liable to that construction. If the Senator means that the Secretary of the Treasury be required to report to the Senate when, in what circumstances, and under what occasions, and under what circumstances, the Treasury Department has anticipated the payment of interest, I can not conceive that there can be any objection to the passage of the resolution.

Mr. TELLER. I will explain what I mean to the Senator, without detaining the Senate.

Mr. CHANDLER. I think that the resolution of the Senator from Kansas called for the amounts paid on each occasion and the circumstances connected with the payments. After the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] reads the law authorizing the anticipation of the payment of interest, I can not see that it is not a perfectly proper inquiry when, upon what occasions, and under what circumstances the power has been exercised; and with the admission from the Senator from Colorado that he does not want all the detailed amounts, but only the gross amounts on each occasion when the payment of interest was anticipated, I certainly shall support the resolution.

Mr. TELLER. Let me illustrate what I mean. In 1864 there was a severe financial stringency; that is, money was very scarce in the country, and we approached what we call a panic. I know that at that time the Secretary of the Treasury did anticipate the payment of interest on the public debt. I suppose the present Secretary of the Treasury, in reporting what occurred in 1864, will say that "the Treasury Department, believing there was such a financial stringency in the country that relief would be afforded by paying the interest on the public debt before it was due, therefore paid it."

work of the Eleventh Census, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana wishes to have the bill considered?

Mr. TURPIE. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. DOLPH. Has the bill been referred in the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana had probably better state the nature of the measure for the information of the Senate.

Mr. TURPIE. No, the bill has not been referred. In fact there did not seem to be any necessity for a reference. The chairman of the Committee on the Census, however, has taken a poll of the members of that committee, and they are unanimously in favor of the bill. Every head of a Department and head of a bureau interested in the census, every one who wishes the success of the investigation, and the speedy success of it, is in favor of the passage of the bill. There is hardly anything in the bill to justify a reference and a call of the committee in relation to it. It is very simple. There are only two subjects provided for. One is the extension of the term for completing the work of the census until the 1st of July, 1894, instead of December 31, 1893, the present law. The other is the appointment of Mr. Carroll D. Wright, Commissioner of Labor, as superintendent for the remainder of the term.

Mr. DOLPH. I object to the consideration of the bill at the present time. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN] desires to address the Senate. After he has concluded, which will be within an hour, I will withdraw my objection and the bill may then be considered.

Mr. TURPIE. I did not understand the remark of the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. DOLPH. I say, for the time being I will object to the consideration of the bill. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN] proposes to address the Senate now, but he will not speak long, and when his speech is concluded I will have no objection to the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. After the Senator from Michigan has concluded, the Chair presumes the Senator from Indiana can bring the matter up again.

Mr. TURPIE. Very well.

PURCHASE OF SILVER BULLION.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of an act approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes."

I.

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President, those who now have in charge financial legislation have given assurance that the monetary system of the United States is to be changed in several particulars. The pearl of the silver-purchasing clause of the Sherman law, they say, is to be but the beginning of a monetary reform. Just what is proposed they are careful not to tell. Vague intimations as to legislation favorable to silver and as to the repeal of the tax on State bank circulation are in the air; and the tax repeal is said, on definite authority, to find favor in Administration circles. Doubtless the promises of a change are induced by the knowledge lately forced upon the people that some change is necessary to bring our currency system but of its present condition of unstable equilibrium.

It has been argued with great spirit that the Government can, and, on the other hand, that it can not by mere legislation create value in the form of money. Yet all nations do create value in otherwise valueless paper, merely by giving to that paper the legal-tender quality. On the other hand, experience has shown clearly that when the amount of Government issues exceeds the uses created for them by the Government, that currency declines in value when compared with the universal standard. So, too, mankind has learned that the only way in which any one nation can maintain gold and silver in its currency is by limiting the amount or the availability of that metal which is cheapest in the world's markets.

To-day this nation has essentially the same kind of a mixed currency that is in use in France, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Italy, and Austria. Each of these nations is on a gold basis: each uses silver coins which are legal tender to any amount and which are kept at par with gold by limiting the quantity; and each makes a large use of paper money issued either by the state or by banks chartered by the nation. England alone has both a gold standard and a gold currency. The amount of her bank-note issues is comparatively small and both law and policy tend to make them smaller.

By a process of natural selection this country has reached the point in currency evolution that the great majority of the commercial nations have reached. Our people do not favor a gold currency such as England has; they do favor the use of silver as a currency basis to the utmost extent consistent with the retention of a gold standard. Nor is there any objection raised on any side to the use of the present amount of greenbacks, so long as their convertibility is maintained. It is only to the small and necessarily diminishing issues of national-bank notes that any objection is made; and the sure approach of the day when such issues must cease, for want of a basis, makes the discussion of national-bank notes pertinent only in connection with schemes to broaden the basis of issue, or to give to State banks also the privilege of putting forth notes.

On the whole, therefore, it may be said that the people are content with the nature of their currency. The present discussion is as to the enlargement of one or the other of its elements. It is admitted that the constant increase in business calls for fresh supplies of money. The question is as to which element—the gold, the silver, or the paper—shall be increased; and in what manner this increase shall be brought about.

Perhaps it is not strictly correct to say that there is no objection to the use of gold as a constituent part of our currency. Every person who advocates the free coinage of silver by this nation alone is an opponent, by implication at least, of the use of the gold basis, for the inevitable result of the free coinage of silver must be silver monometallism. It is maintained by some that the power of the United States is so great that were this nation to turn to the silver producers other nations would speedily do the same, and that the result would be international bimetalism.

A careful reading of the report of the Brussels conference must satisfy any person that so long as England refuses to use silver as an unlimited legal tender, no European nation will again open its mints to free coinage. And, if by reason of Mr. Balfour's utterances on the currency question in an address delivered by him at the House of Commons, London, August 3, 1893, any are so optimistic as to put their faith in an immediate change of policy on the part of England, such an illusion must be dispelled by the recent reply of the present chancellor of the exchequer to Mr. C. C. Everett, M. P., in which letter he says:

But it is of the highest importance in the interest both of this country and of other governments that we should not encourage expectations which we are not likely to be able to realize. Her Majesty's Government adhere to the declaration made in the House of Commons that any interference with the single monetary standard now by law established in this country is so far as the Government are concerned, a question. (See Questions, published in New York Sun, September 17, 1893.)

And thus such an expression, international bimetalism must be postponed to the indefinite future; and this fact must be regarded in all currency legislation.

Forced to give up, for the present at least, the idea of international bimetalism and the free coinage of both gold and silver, we still have left the refuge of national bimetalism and the use of silver as unlimited legal tender within wide limits. Silver will be used to a greater extent than gold can be in the currency of each individual nation; and after the production of the white metal shall reach a normal basis, the value of silver will again increase, the supply being regulated by the demand, and the value being established by the cost of production.

The use of silver in the arts: the demand for it as the only money used by the nations of the far East; the need of it to establish the coinage of our own and other countries; all these causes will in time insure its constant production and give it a stable value, whereas the artificial stimulus given by the Bland or the Sherman laws tend to produce such wide fluctuations in value that thereby silver becomes unfitted for a standard.

II.

It is necessary here to note the difference between gold monometallism, such as England has attained, and national bimetalism, which is the condition of the other nations. The distinction is easily made; and the difference is very great. Monometallism, either of silver or gold, requires a currency in which the given metal plays the controlling part. Monometallic England is forced to keep a gold currency; but a nation may be on a gold basis without having any portion of its currency made up of gold, as is the case with Canada.* France is on a gold basis with a currency consisting of one thousand three hundred and sixty millions of silver and paper and one hundred and fifty-five millions of gold. Holland is on a gold basis with but twenty-five millions in gold and one hundred and thirty-five millions in silver and paper.

If a gold basis required a gold currency, then there would not be gold enough in the world to allow either France or the United States to replace its silver and paper money with gold money without bringing all other nations to bankruptcy. The essen-tical condition of a gold basis, however, is that persons having a foreign debt to pay—shall be able to convert the national currency, be it gold, silver or paper, into the international currency, which is the commodity gold. The United States should maintain its finances on a gold basis, because, as compared with other nations, it gets gold cheap. Not only is this country one of the great producers of gold, but the normal condition of our trade with other nations is such as to draw gold from them, both by trade balances and by importing capital.

There is a world of wisdom in the summing up made by that experienced and clear-headed financier, Mr. Bertram Currie, in his remarks at the Brussels conference.

The real desideratum for a nation:

Said he—is to maintain a surplus of revenue over expenditure, and thereby fully extend its credit. When that has been accomplished, it may commence as monna gold as it can proceed by free and falling such credit its monetary system can never rest on a safe foundation.

The revenues of the United States, until the recent depression set in, have shown a surplus, and doubtless they will do so again when business shall revive. If they do not, then it should be the first duty of Congress to establish such a balance. With a surplus in the Treasury and the authority given to the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bonds to insure the parity of gold and silver and paper, the United States may maintain a gold standard with a comparatively small stock of gold.

III.

As the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] has well pointed out, neither of the great parties in this country has called for the free coinage of silver, at the expense of the gold standard. At the same time there is a widespread belief that the struggle of the nations to obtain gold has made the use of that metal expensive to the nations, and that some mitigation should be found for the condition of affairs, as recently stated by Mr. Goschen to the House of Commons, when he said:

I feel a kind of shame that, on the occasion of two or three millions of gold being taken to Brazil or any other country, it should immediately have the effect of causing a monetary alarm throughout the country.

He might well have said, throughout the commercial world.

What is the remedy? The ideal remedy is the free coinage of both gold and silver, but such a thing either one may be used to pay a debt anywhere in the world. For that remedy we should continue to strive. In the meantime, the best way to reduce the difficulty to a minimum is the plan suggested to the Brussels conference by Mr. Van den Berg, the delegate of the Netherlands, and the head of the great chartered bank of his country.

Is there not a more effective means—for protecting ourselves against "the struggle for gold" which is to be seen to-day in a more intense form than ever, and which, it seems, must assume a far more acute and serious character still if the present conference should lead to no result? For my part, I believe that this means is already discovered. As in my opinion, a great step in advance would be taken if all the great central banks which are subject to the "lumping standard" were to be guided by the example of the Bank of the Netherlands in the policy which they pursue with regard to the stock of gold they hold.

The Bank of the Netherlands is very wisely with its gold when it is demanded for home circulation, being of opinion that the stock of gold and silver in the Netherlands is sufficient for 10 and 50 florins, with the notes of the Bank of the Netherlands for 25 florins and upward are sufficient for international exchange. The Netherlands is so liberally the reputation of being a poor country, accommodates herself well enough to the lack of gold coins in her circulation.

If the Bank of France, the Bank of Belgium, and the other banks could follow our example, they would see their stock of gold grow much larger than it is at present, and they would be able, with no inconvenience, to liberate as much as they were allowed to come and go at the bidding, with the certainty of seeing it return to them shortly, as we have so often observed in the case of Holland. If no impediments were put in the way of the free circulation of gold, and the nations were allowed to come and go at the bidding of the temporary needs of the money market, we should see the course of business assume an entirely different aspect and calm would reign where too often at present, a feverish and unreasonable agitation turns men's minds and business out of their proper course.

I have made this lengthy quotation to show that the problem which disturbs us also weighs upon the minds of foreign financiers; for commerce, the great civilizer, has united all nations in a common bond and has made them all allies and friends in mutual help. Trade means commercial friendship, not warfare. We have friends, not enemies, across the Atlantic.

IV.

The amount of currency in any country depends on the stock of money multiplied by the rapidity of its circulation, which is another way of saying that "A nimble sinner is better than a slow sinner." If some means can be found by which the rapidity of the gold circulation can be increased, the result will be the same as if the amount were increased.

Adopting Mr. Van den Berg's argument that gold should be reserved for international uses, let us see if some feasible plan can not be suggested for giving wings to gold, as we have given wings to silver, by the use of the certificate and Treasury note. I believe that it is not only possible to issue an international currency based on gold; but that, before many years shall pass, the inventive genius of the world's inventors will overcome the present, and wasteful methods of carting gold about the world. Within the year past over three hundred tons of gold have been transported across the ocean at an absolute waste of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The cost to the Government in transporting gold from Washington to New York during the gold exodus a few months ago was $500 a day, the amount of the daily shipments being a million dollars. Within ten days our country is estimated to have transferred $1,000 in gold, whereas the same amount of currency is shipped for 15 cents. The cost of sending a million dollars in gold across the Atlantic, including freight, insurance, interest, etc., is about $900. Add to this $500 for transportation from the Treasury to Washington to the subtreasury at New York, and the total sum required to deliver $1,000,000 in gold in London is $3,500. Moreover, during the time required for shipment this million dollars is absolutely withdrawn from the currency and locked up.

Mr. Bagehot, in discussing the gold movement between Paris and London, well says:

The expense of sending gold to and fro having been reduced to a minimum between the two cities, the difference can never be very great; but it must not be forgotten that, the interest being taken at a percentage calculated on the premium, and the probable loss on the occasion of the months' bills (as contemplated) to be divided by four, whereas the percentage of expenses has to be wholly borne by one transaction, a slight expense becomes a great one immediately. If the interest is half of 1 per cent, there must be a profit of 2 per cent in the rate of interest or one-half per cent on three months, before any advantage can be shown. Thus, supposing that Paris capitalists calculate that they may send their gold over to England for one-half per cent expense, and chance their being so favored by the exchanges as to be able to draw it back without any cost at all, there must nevertheless be an excess of more than 2 per cent in the London rate of interest over that in Paris before the operation of sending gold over from London to Paris, merely for the sake of higher interest, will pay—London Street, page 182.

If "a very slight expense becomes a great impediment" in the flow of gold between two cities where "the cost has been reduced to a minimum," how infinitely greater must be the impediment to the transportation of hundreds of tons of gold between New York and London, where for every hour required in transit between the French and English capitals a full day is required for the transportation across the Atlantic, with the ocean risks added.

I have called attention to the waste and the difficulties incident to the transportation of gold between nations for the purpose of suggesting a method by which that cost may be reduced indefinitely, and at the same time gold may be made more quickly and more widely available for the payment of international balances.

Suppose the holder of gold bars were able to deposit them at a subtreasury of the United States and receive in return for the stored certificates of deposit payable at the United States subtreasury in New York (or any other subtreasury) in gold certificates of such denominations as the New York (or other holder) of the certificate of deposit might find most convenient. These gold certificates would at once become part and parcel of the currency of the country, and could take the place of gold coin in bank reserves, while the actual gold remained in the subtreasury in which it was originally deposited.

Extend the operation one step further, and pass from national to international certificates. Suppose the owner of gold or gold certificates were able to deposit his holdings at the subtreasury in New York and receive therefor registered certificates calling for gold or its equivalent at the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Bank of Amsterdam, or the Reichsbank in Germany. A small charge would be made to compensate for the shipping of the gold as might be required to pay annual or biennial balances between the nations. These international registered certificates would at once pass current in every country which participates in the movement of gold, and would form an absolutely safe means of transfer not only among European nations themselves and between those nations and the United States, but also with the politically unsettled nations of South America.

From February 13, 1891, to April 1, 1892, the exports and imports of gold were over $113,000,000; the net loss of gold to the United States was $40,680,137. The minimum amount in shipments saved by the use of certificates would have been $22,346,714. It is not the actual saving in transportation that counts, although this is no inconsiderable item. The saving would be in the form of interest on the money which gold representatives would circulate, and the ease with which debts between nations could be paid through an international clearing house, if once an international currency, based on actual deposits of gold, and guaranteed by the issuing nations were to be established.

The plan outlined is neither new nor original. A plan for international clearing was presented to the London Institute of Bankers on November 18, 1885, by Mr. Henry Chevasus,* who advanced the proposition that warrants based on gold and silver should be issued, these warrants to be legal tender and capable of transfer by telegraph. Under such conditions, Mr. Chevasus maintained, there need be no greater fluctuations normally than half a centime above or below the metallic par between England and France.

Warrants would flock from all financial centers instantly on any monetary pressure occurring in any one of these. By this means, he maintained, the scramble for gold would come to an end, and the reluctance of France to part with gold for export and the prohibitive measures of Germany would come to an end.

Substantially the same plan was advocated in the London Economist of December 14, 1889, by Mr. Ottomar Haupt, of Paris, who contends that by means of certificates the real par of exchange would at the same time be the gold point and the remitting rate of exchange through a certificate. He says:

The very highest aim of several economists—the continuance of the gold bar or the value thereof, of one nation in the money of another, without any deduction for coinage expenses, and so on—would then, indeed, have been attained.

Again—
all the charges incidental to the forwarding of gold bars or coins, as freight, insurance, any loss on the standard bars, would henceforth be done away with, and even the postage of the letter would not be increased, seeing that in case of loss an indorsed certificate could not be trifled with. In the procuring and forwarding of the certificate would involve no expense whatever, and consequently the price paid for it will find its immediate and absolute expression in the rate of exchange itself.

Even though the advantage of the plan should prove much less than is claimed for it, our own experience with paper as a substitute for coin will readily convince an American that the use of international currency based on gold would enable one dollar's worth of gold bullion to do the work of many dollars as at present utilized.

Since the movement of gold across the Atlantic is mainly between New York and London, the present Administration could not do a greater service to the business interests of this nation than would be done by opening negotiations with the British Government for a commission to arrange for cashing, at either New York or London, any New York or London bank drafts of the Bank of England, of certificates issued against gold deposits of gold, and for such periodical clearings as might be found necessary. This would be the first step to an international currency, portions of which would, in time, be furnished by all countries having a gold basis.†

V.

It is contended that the appreciation of gold is one of the causes of the general fall of prices which has been going on the world over. Admitting that gold has somewhat advanced in price, it is due mainly to competition brought about through improvements in production and the resort to more productive soils. Congress should never lower the standard of value for the benefit of the comparatively few debtors who years ago incurred debts measured in money of less value, when by so doing the result will be to lower the real wages of labor, and to reduce the standard of living among the great mass of the active and productive people of the nation.

The striking fact brought out in the report of the Senate Finance Committee on Wholesale Prices and Wages (see volume I, pages 15, 179, 180) is that while there has been a considerable fall in the price of commodities, there has been an advance in the price of labor. Investigations carried on in other countries show that this advance is not confined to the United States, but that in every commercial nation the condition of the wage-worker has steadily improved and that his standard of living has advanced. Moreover, David A. Wells has shown that when measured in commodities, the real wages of the laboring man during what are called the "flush times" that followed the war really suffered a decline as compared with 1860. (Recent Economic Changes, page 417.) It is a sufficient objection to the free coinage of silver that it will raise general prices in this country, since in that rise the laboring man, as experience shows, must suffer.

We should ever strive to keep the standard of value steady and uniform, but better a slight fall in prices than a rapid rise in which the speculator and a comparatively few debtors shall reap the advantage at the expense of the man whose welfare is measured by his daily wage.

VI.

After all is said about the increased value of money, the chief reason for that increase is to be found not in the scarcity of money, but in the improvement of production, in the decline in cost of transportation, and the linking together of the markets of the world. The farmer in the middle United States has experienced a decline in the price of wheat, due to the fact that the Indian and the Russian farmer have become his competitors in the world's markets, while at the same time the resort to new lands in the West has increased home competition.

* London Economist, December 11, 1889.

† The international certificate presented no greater difficulties than have been overcome already in the case of the international postal money order, whereby money deposited in any money-order office in the United States may be transferred by an order payable in one of twenty-nine foreign countries or colonies at a cost of 1 per cent.

But the invention of farming machinery and the extension of railroads have decreased his cost of production, and every dollar that he has received has enabled him to command more of both the necessities and the luxuries of life. He has seen his rate of interest decline from 10 to 12 per cent to 6 or 7 per cent; and at the same time facilities for obtaining money for his children and the means of enjoyment have vastly increased for him. It is only when he comes to pay the principal of his debt, if he happens to be a debtor, that he is somewhat the worse off; and in the long run even the farmer would be the loser by reason of the free coinage of silver or any other method of creating a general rise in prices. It is true that he might get more dollars for his products, but he would also pay more for clothing, groceries, and those other commodities with which he has to supply himself. The only thing that will really benefit the farmer is to have his products rise in price while other commodities decrease. So long as his foreign and home competition in raising wheat increases, no decrease in the value of money will give him real benefit.

The farmer has suffered by reason of the fall in the prices of his products. The manufacturer and the trader have also suffered from the fall of prices of manufactured articles and commodities generally. Every mile of new road that England has built in India has helped to reduce the price of wheat in America. The Suez Canal has reduced the value of wheat lands in Kansas. The competition of the Pacific ports with those on the Atlantic has become so keen that about one-third of all the wheat sent from the United States to England goes around Cape Horn.

What is the remedy for the farmer? Surely not a rise in general prices which would enhance the cost of everything he buys, while at the same time the value of his products is regulated by the demand and supply in foreign markets. His future prosperity depends, first, on the building up of cities to supply which he can diversify his products and thus in part escape from the effects of competition in wheat; and, secondly, in the fact that according to the best authorities the wheat acreage of the world can not be extended much beyond the present limit. When the ultimate limit shall be reached the value of food products must rise as compared with manufactures, and the farmer will then be able to command a larger share of commodities.

The argument that this country should continue the purchase of silver for the sake of the silver-mining and kindred industries will not stand. Silver has declined in value for the same reason that iron has. Taking the price of best refined bar iron as 100 in 1860, the tables submitted by the Finance Committee show that the price advanced until in 1864 it was represented by the index number 249.3. From that year there has been a pretty steady decline, so that in 1891 the price was 27.6 points below the price in 1860, and 176.9 points below the price in 1864.

With every fall in price the iron manufacturers were sure they could not maintain themselves, and profits have been cut down enormously; but improvements in machinery, the decrease in the cost of transportation, and the discovery of richer mines have all tended to a reduction in the price of iron, just as the same causes have reduced the value of silver. I venture to say that in the whole silver-mining section of the country the repeal of the silver-purchasing clause of the Sherman law will not work so much suffering as the panic of this year has already worked in the iron-mining regions of Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota. One of the most experienced and most successful silver-mining owners in Colorado writes me as follows:

I believe in the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law. I believe the demand should regulate the price of silver, and that the miners should regulate the supply. I believe that the repeal tender up to $5, and used as circulating medium. Let it be coined to supply the demand, and when redeemable in silver bullion the demand will regulate the supply.

The result of closing the silver mines has been to start work in the gold mines. The reports which come to the New York Sun from Colorado, Idaho, New Mexico, Oregon, and California show that capital and labor are now fast turning to the production of gold; that instead of men clamoring for work, they are combining to raise the price of their labor, and that during the present year the production of gold will be enormously increased.

VII.

One of the most common objections to the use of gold and silver and one of the arguments most relied on to justify an expansion sion of the paper currency is that there is not enough money in existence to pay the debts of the world. This is an argument much in vogue with men who claim to be friends of labor. How fallacious it is may readily be seen by examining the daily routine of business that is carried on through the various clearing houses. On September 1, 1893, the interest-bearing debt of the United States, exclusive of the $84,625,512 of bonds issued in aid of the Pacific railroads, amounted to $585,037,590. The bank clearings in seventy-seven cities for the week ending August 31, 1893, as reported by Bradstreets, amounted to $661,152,209.

In other words, in the leading commercial cities of this country during one week an amount, of indebtedness in excess of the bonded debt of the nation was liquidated without the use of one dollar in money of any sort, kind, or description; and this, too, when the exchanges showed a decrease of about one-third of the normal amount. There is no greater fallacy than that which insists that debts are paid in money rather than in credits. And, further, in estimating the amount of currency, it is necessary to take into consideration credits as well as cash.

The Treasury statement shows that the currency of the United States on September 1, 1893, was $25.01 per capita, and that the per capita in France was about $44; but the probability is that the use of banking facilities in this country so far outstrips those of France that doubtless we have in circulation a greater amount of currency per capita than has France or any other country on the globe. Even in London, the clearing house of the world, the sum of the weekly exchanges through the Bankers' Clearing House of that city fall hundreds of millions below the aggregate of those of the clearing houses in the seventy-seven reporting cities of the United States.

Whatever may be the evils of a scarcity of money the evils of an overabundance of money are still greater. When money becomes so plenty that the persons to whose keeping it is temporarily intrusted use it to promote purely speculative schemes; when it is used to bolster up stocks and bonds of little or no intrinsic value; when, in a word, money is so plenty that it can be obtained readily to purchase anything, then the evils of an oversupply become destructive beyond all calculation or conception. I believe that this country has suffered a hundred times more from the effects of an oversupply of money than it has suffered from a scarcity in the circulating medium.

VIII.

The chief use of money is as a basis of credits. At the present time 92 per cent of the world's business is conducted on credit, and only about 8 per cent of the world's transactions are made in cash. It is an argument to prove that the most disastrous thing which can happen to the monetary affairs of a nation is to have its currency impaired. Better by far lose a portion of the money outright than have suspicion cast on the value of the currency as a whole.

While I believe that the money of the country should be maintained at a stable value for the sake of protecting the credits which furnish the lifeblood of commerce, manufactures, and business of every kind, I can not overlook the fact that bank credits are every day being impaired by other means than the impairment of the currency; and that while the banks appeal to Congress to protect them, and through them the people, from the evils of a debased standard, it is equally the duty of Congress to protect people and banks alike from certain vicious practices which some banks in the effort to protect their deposits have been drawn into—practices more destructive to credits than the Sherman law has ever been. I refer particularly to the practice of the national banks in parting with the control of their reserves in order to secure interest on deposits made in other banks.

Congress undertakes to control national-bank credits by certain regulations to which every such bank must conform. I propose to show by the testimony of the most experienced bankers that the present regulations must be extended if the national banks are to do the duty which the people have a right to expect of them. I believe that the man of business, the manufacturer, the laborer, and the farmer—in a word, every member of the industrial system—has a right to demand of Congress that it shall legislate with regard to the national banks so as to prevent, or at least greatly mitigate, those suicidal acts of bank credits which with alarming frequency prostrate every kind of business, causing widespread distress and carrying destruction throughout the land.

The safety of banking depends on the size and the nature of the reserve. Unfortunately it is impossible to lay down any exact rule as to how much money it is necessary for the banks to hold in their vaults in order to meet their depositors' claims. The law does require a minimum reserve of 15 per cent for banks outside of the reserve cities, and of 25 per cent for all other banks, and it provides for closing any bank which allows its reserve to remain below the required amount.

Admitting that the law provides for a sufficient amount of reserve, provided that reserve were actually at the disposal of the bank, it can readily be shown that the law as it now stands permits the banks outside of the central reserve cities to part absolutely with from one-half to three-fifths of that reserve; and that by the payment of interest on the deposits made by other banks the national banks in the reserve and central reserve cities have built up a vicious system of banking, by which system panics are encouraged.

In making these strictures I have no fault to find with the bankers of this country as individuals. They are first of all business men, who give what attention they may to their duties as directors of banks, and in the evils which a bad system precipitates they are the men of business and the first and sometimes the only ones to suffer. More than this, the practice of paying interest on deposits finds its most strenuous opponents among the bankers themselves, many of whom resort to it only when their dwindling deposits give warning that their interest-paying competitors are outstripping them in the race for commercial success.

IX.

Under the acts of 1887 and 1877 respectively, New York, Chicago, and St. Louis have become central reserve cities, and some twenty-four others have become reserve cities. Of the three central reserve cities, New York outstrips the other two.

The practical result of interest paying is to draw money to the central reserve cities, and particularly to New York. It has been estimated that as high as $80,000,000 of the reserves of the interior banks is often held by the New York banks. Hence it happens that the whole monetary system of the United States depends for its stability on the solvency of the New York banks. If at any time they are unable to meet their liabilities the whole banking system collapses. They are the link which determines the strength of the monetary chain.

Take for example the state of the reserves on October 2, 1890. The country banks, so-called, then held a reserve equal to 26.2 per cent of their deposits, or nearly twice the amount required by law. This reserve was divided as follows:

Specie and other lawful money	Millions.
Due from agents	92.0
	5.2

In other words, the country banks, with an apparent reserve of more than double the amount required by law, really had control of but 10 per cent of their deposits. Manifestly their solvency depended absolutely on the ability of the reserve city banks to pay their debts; for nobody will contend that 10 per cent of cash is a sufficient basis to sustain a bank when even a rumor of trouble is abroad.

On the same date the banks in the reserve cities held reserves equal to 28.3 per cent of their deposits. They were 3.3 per cent above the legal requirements. Their reserves were distributed as follows:

Specie and other lawful money	Millions.
Due from agents	68.0

In actual cash the reserve city banks held an available reserve of but 12.6 per cent of their deposits, and their solvency depended on the repayment of their deposits in the central reserve cities of New York, Chicago, and St. Louis.

On that date the St. Louis banks held in available cash less than 21.3 per cent of their deposits. The Chicago banks were 5 per cent above the limit required by law and the New York banks were 2.8 per cent above the limit.

A month later, on November 12, 1890, the banks of New York confessed their inability to pay their obligations in cash, and resorted to the device of issuing clearing-house loan certificates, which were not retired until February 7, 1891. The collapse of speculations in our own country and the Baring troubles in England precipitated a crisis that was prevented from becoming a panic only by the timely action of the Government, which between July 19 and November 1, 1890, emptied the Treasury of $80,000,000 of surplus in the purchase of bonds. During this panic the public mind supposed that the surplus was available for the purchase of bonds, and the panic came with full force.

X.

The point to be observed is this: If the national banks, when supplied with the reserves called for by law and distributed as the law provides, they are unable to sustain themselves without the intervention of the Secretary of the Treasury, it is an imperative duty, now that the Treasury is no longer able to afford relief, to provide by law for larger reserves and more available ones. That duty is one which Congress owes to the people. The banks protect themselves by the issue of clearinghouse certificates, which are in themselves a confession of temporary insolvency on the part of the banks as a body; but in their struggle for existence, loans are curtailed, stocks are sacrificed, and the army of industry is put to rout.

Hon. Edwin S. Lacey, in the report of the Comptroller of the Currency for 1891, says:

"The monetary stringency culminated on the 15th of November, 1890, and its effects within thirty days thereafter had to a considerable extent passed away, so far as the ordinary business of the country was concerned. But, as large as it was, it still continued. Inability to place securities and to borrow money had arrested the operations of a great multitude of corporations and small enterprises. The confidence of the public had been in a large measure destroyed. Where failure did not take place new work was stopped, all credits were curtailed, and business in its various forms languished and depressed. The growth of the business was in many cases arrested, and the prices of city property, especially of a suburban character, became greatly reduced.

Mr. Lacey calls attention to the fact that under the present system of banking a general monetary stringency is felt first and most seriously by banks located in the larger of the reserve cities, in part because banking associations in these cities pay interest on bank balances in order to accumulate loanable funds.

Attention has been called to the dangerous condition of the bank reserve, even when they meet large requirements—a condition which demands prompt and effective treatment at the hands of Congress. I say at the hands of Congress, because the banks, while fully conscious of the source of danger, are powerless, in and of themselves, to work a remedy. I believe that the time has come when the New York bankers should maintain a reserve of more than 25 per cent of their bank deposits; and that legislation should be enacted to put a stop absolutely to the payment of interest on deposits of banks. Occupying a position analogous to that of the Bank of England, and yet being weaker than that institution in times of stress, because both of divided responsibilities and also because of not being able to replenish their reserve by a rise in the rate of discount, the New York banks should not be content with a 25 per cent reserve when the Bank of England needs from 33 to 44 per cent, and at times even more.

I have shown by figures taken from the reports of the Comptroller of the Currency how small the actual cash reserves of the banks in the country and the reserve cities usually are and how the banks, sending a large proportion of their reserves to New York, impose upon the banks of that city burdens which the nature of their loans and the character of the demands liable to be made on their deposits ill fit them to bear. Let me quote from the report of the Committee of Nine, which was prepared by that experienced and conservative banker, Mr. George S. Coe, and adopted by the New York Clearing-House Association in 1873. The evils to which I have called attention, although acknowledged by the New York banks, have not been corrected, but rather have become more widespread.*

Mr. Coe's report applies as well to the crises of 1884 and 1891 and to the panic of 1893 as to the panic of 1873.

Now says the report—

"The actual depositories of the current capital of the nation passing into and out of active industry and commerce. The balances held by them are for the time specially reserved by their owners for permanent investment and for the use of the immediate necessities of the business. These balances are consequently bound by the very nature of their trust to preserve them in their integrity and to apply them only in such ways as will prevent any diminution in their value. The banks, therefore, in order to keep their cash in hand as long experience has proved to be necessary to meet immediate demands in every possible emergency.

How the banks have recently failed to meet these necessary and reasonable requirements needs no discussion.

Mr. Coe continues:

"No institution can, in the long run, purchase deposits of money payable on demand and at the same time refuse to issue on these deposits and proper compensation for the business, without violating some of the conditions indispensable to the public safety. It must either use them in ways which are illegal and perilous to the community, or it must have been abundantly proved by innumerable instances in years past, and the practice of paying interest for such deposits was unanimously condemned by the bank officers in 1858 as one of the principal causes of the panic at that period.

The panics of 1857 and 1873, as the bank officers themselves confessed, were caused by the payment of interest on deposits, and yet the banks suffered the practice to continue until this year for the third time it has culminated in a panic.

A sharp and degrading competition has not only prevailed among banks in this city (New York), but has been excited as a necessary consequence in other places, where the far-reaching enterprise of some of our associates has led them in the pursuit of business. These banks, located in the country have been aroused to enlist in the same destructive practices toward each other and in defense of their various localities. A premium has been placed on the giving of business orders with the view of withdrawing the cash out of its natural channels, and adjusting itself to such localities as the convenience of the people and the best interests of the country require.

Just here the report makes a most important point. It is the complaint of the West and the South that New York drains away the money, in so far as money naturally flows to that place where it is most needed, this complaint is unfounded. But in so far as the central reserve cities or the reserve cities create a dangerous and unnatural demand for money, the complaint is one that deserves not only the negative consideration of bankers, but also the positive operation of restrictive legislation.

Without such rivalry—

Says the report—

"the resources of the nation would be so diffused among the banks as to give increased financial strength and stability to every part, and not only remove that cause of irritation, but add to the comfort, efficiency, and profit of all.

Since the report was written this nation has escaped from an irredeemable currency, but we are still afflicted by the lesser ills which attend an inelastic currency. Like an irredeemable currency, it is superabundant in summer and scarce at the crop-maturing season. At times money accumulates in New York. As the report says:

"Legitimate commerce does not then demand it. It is still subject to instant call. There is consequently no resource but to loan it in Wall street upon stocks and bonds, in doing which so much of the nation's taxable property is being loaned into the hands of irresponsible speculators. Its essential character is instantly changed. Loans are made with facility upon securities which have a strictly commercial quality, new and various securities are being introduced, and the business is stimulated on the one hand, and upward are heaped upon the same operations. The annual demand for the resources of the nation is naturally diverted from their legitimate uses, and they can be turned back only with difficulty and public inconvenience.

Such has been our well-known experience year after year. Interest upon money in the city, fluctuating widely from 3 to 4 per cent in summer, and in summer to 15 or 20 per cent in the fall and winter upon commercial paper, and upon stock to one-half to even 1 per cent a day. Violent fluctuations are the necessary result of speculative commerce, and institutions whose operations are in such results are enemies to the public welfare.

These are strong words to be printed over the signatures of nine of the leading bankers of New York City, but the facts show that they are none too strong. When the panic of 1873 began twelve interest-paying banks held about one-half the total deposits in New York, and the other forty-eight banks held the other half. The active demand for currency came first, as it always does, from that portion of the deposits due country banks, made timid by failures among their New York correspondents.

The deposits were loaned largely in Wall street "on call." The banks, on undertaking to call these loans to fill their depleted reserves, not only shut off the borrowers from every resource, but also made stocks unsalable. In twenty-four days the legal-tender reserve dropped from thirty-four millions to five and eight-tenths millions. The interior banks, whose resources consisted mainly of debts due from the country, found themselves unable to meet the demands of their depositors. For a time the whole monetary system of the country was in disorder; and it was not until the strong banks of New York came to the aid of their weaker brethren that the finances once more assumed shape.

On asking themselves what reforms are required in the operations of the banks with each other and the public to increase in security of their business, the committee "first and most prominently recommend that the banks entirely discontinue the payment of interest upon deposits, whether directly or indirectly."

Unfortunately, the New York Clearing-House Association, while admitting the evil, took no effective steps to remedy it. So it remained to breed another panic.

Mr. FRYE. Is that limited to deposits made by other banks? Mr. McMILLAN. Yes, deposits of other banks—country and reserve city banks.

In my judgment, the time has come for Congress to say that no national bank shall pay interest, or procure interest to be paid, on deposits, and the penalties for the violation of the law should be sufficiently stringent and sufficiently simple in their application to insure obedience. In this way each bank would seek uses for its money at home, the reserves would become more widely diffused; rates of interest on local loans would be less and money would be more available for domestic purposes; Chicago and St. Louis would increase in importance as money centers, and probably New Orleans and San Francisco would become central reserve cities. In this way the annual drain of money from New York for crop movements would be lessened, and the exchanges of the country would be put on a more conservative basis.

The objection to a law which should prevent the national banks from paying interest on deposits is that State banks, not being subject to such a provision, would gain prominence at the expense of the national bank, and that there is no hope of securing restrictive legislation in the various States.

The late John Jay Knox, in the report of the Comptroller of the Currency for 1873, recognized the force of this objection and proposed that a tax be imposed on all deposits which either directly or indirectly are placed with other banks, whether national, state, or private, with the offer or expectation of receiving interest.

Such legislation—

He says—

It is rigidly enforced, would have the effect not only of reducing the rate of interest throughout the country, but of the same time would prevent the fictitious organization of savings banks, which organizations should be allowed only upon the condition that the savings of the people shall be prudently and carefully invested, and the interest arising therefrom, after deducting reasonable expenses, distributed from time to time among the depositors and not to other persons whatever.

Mr. MANDERSON. I should like to ask the Senator whether that course in savings banks has not led throughout the country to this remarkable condition: That profits have accumulated; that depositors have passed away, ceased to be depositors either by death or transfer of accounts or what not, and we have a condition such as obtains, we will say, in the saving institution or association of Cleveland, where there is an accumulation, I understand, of $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 that does not seem to belong to anybody.

Mr. McMILLAN. It is a pretty good security for depositors' any way.

Mr. MANDERSON. Exactly—

Mr. McMILLAN. I am only quoting John Jay Knox, who is an expert in banking, and who gave it as his opinion that that would be the wisest course. I understand that in New York State there is a law to the effect that the interest and profits of savings banks, after deducting reasonable expenses, shall be distributed among the depositors.

Mr. MANDERSON. There is, but it would not be better than the New York law or the suggestion of Mr. Knox to establish in this country the English system of postal savings banks?

Mr. McMILLAN. Possibly it would.

XI.

It may be that the simple prohibition of the payment of interest on deposits would not be sufficient to place the reserves on a basis of safety. If experience shall show such to be the case, the next step should be to increase the percentage of reserve to deposits. The average reserve of the New York banks is about 28 per cent. Those banks might be required to keep a reserve of 40 or even 50 per cent of the deposits of their banks. Even then the element of flexibility is absolutely wanting. The New York banks are restrained by the usury laws from adapting the rate of discount to the demands for money, and in this manner drawing cash from abroad or from the market.

In times of panic or crisis we have no method of filling the depleted reserves other than the harsh and dilatory one of forcing a fall of prices and an increase in exports of commodities in exchange for gold. The business community has great need of some means of turning securities into cash at will, and thus quickly and effectively preventing a crisis from developing into a panic. I believe that such a means would be supplied by giving to any holder of United States bonds the option of presenting them at any subtreasury of the United States as a special deposit and receiving for them legal-tender currency redeemable only in bonds.

The only objection to such a plan is to be found in the encouragement it gives to bank officers to throw off a part of this responsibility for prudence; but with proper legal safeguards to protect the reserves, the elasticity in the currency to be secured by the convertible-bond plan seems to me the best that can be devised to secure relief from the financial storm and stress that no amount of human ingenuity can at all times foresee.

There are other reforms which can be invoked to make banking more serviceable to the people; but by far the greatest part of the journey towards a sound monetary system will have been taken when Congress shall do three things:

First, provide for a currency every part of which shall always be maintained at par with the world's money;

Secondly, provide for increasing banking reserves distributed throughout the country as nearly as may be in accordance with the local business necessities; and,

Thirdly, provide a ready means of converting securities into cash and cash into securities according to the need for a more expanded or a more contracted currency.

These things accomplished, the quantity of money may well be left to natural business causes, which, in doing so, will determine the value of money in spite of all hindrances devised by man.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President—

Mr. WOLCOTT. Before my colleague proceeds with his remarks, I desire to call the attention of the Senate and the Chair to the fact that there is not a quorum present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Senator from Colorado will proceed.

Mr. TELLER. I understand that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH] desires to take a little time now, for that purpose I will allow him to go on, if it is agreeable to the Senate, instead of going on myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will suggest to the Senator from Oregon that the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE] desired to call up a matter at this time, if the Senator from Oregon will yield.

Mr. DOLPE. I promised the Senator from Indiana that I would withdraw my objection to the consideration of the census bill, and I will give way for that purpose.

ELEVENTH CENSUS.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 3607) to extend the time for completing the work of the Eleventh Census and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. HARRIS. Let the bill be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the time provided in the act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year 1893, and for the years 1894 and 1895, for the purposes, and for other purposes, of closing the work of the Eleventh Census, under the provisions of the act of March 1, 1889, entitled "An act to provide for taking the Eleventh and subsequent censuses," and that act relating to the Eleventh Census, be, and the same is hereby, extended from the 31st day of December, 1893, to and including the 30th day of June, 1894; that the President of the United States, his deputy, in his discretion, authorize and direct the Commissioner of Labor to perform the duties of Superintendent of Census, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior until the work of closing the Eleventh Census is completed at such additional compensation, payable from the appropriations for compiling the results of the Eleventh Census, as the Secretary of the Interior may determine, not exceeding one-half of the compensation now paid by law for the Superintendent of Census.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HARRIS. There is no objection so far as I am concerned. By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PURCHASE OF SILVER BULLION.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of an act, approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes."

Mr. DOLPE. Mr. President, a few days ago, when the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] was addressing the Senate on the pending measure, the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MCPHERSON] interrupted him to ask him a question, which was, If the operation of the Sherman law has not caused our present business depression and financial disturbances, what has? The Senator from Kansas [Mr. FERRIS] in an elaborate speech, recently undertaken to give a real many causes for our present business and financial troubles, some of them in my judgment having no existence except in the minds of the Senator from Kansas and others who believe with him, and all of them together not sufficient to cause our present deplorable condition.

Believing it important that the Senate and the country should not lose sight of the real cause of our present disturbances, I have ventured again to occupy the time of the Senate for a few minutes for the purpose of very briefly giving my views as to what is the cause of our present business and financial troubles.

As I have said before in the Senate during the present session, I believe that the cause of our present disturbances is the fear of tariff legislation hostile to our industries. It is the fear of the same cause that, when the colonies had secured their selves from the mother country, they sought aid and on their independence, flooded this country with foreign goods, destroyed our domestic industries, deprived labor of employment, drained the hind we will not use it; we will cut it off, and stand and walk on one financial leg." That is their idea of maintaining parity.

The United States could maintain the parity without difficulty; but now gold is worth 50 per cent more than it was twenty years ago. It will buy 50 per cent more of all the necessities of life. That fact, notwithstanding some have questioned it here, is so well established by scientists all over the world that any argument with regard to it is unnecessary.

THE AVERAGE RANGE OF PRICES

has fallen 50 per cent, and gold has appreciated. Why has this happened? Because the demand for money was thrown upon gold alone. Now, let the demand be thrown upon silver; sell your gold when you can get the most for it, as you sell your wheat and your cotton and everything else; sell your gold; let the gold go; sell it; sell it for the highest price; and put the demand on silver. Suppose we could sell six hundred millions of gold and buy six hundred millions of silver, would there be any doubt about the ability of this great country to undertake this?

How did Germany depress the price of silver and enhance the price of gold?

SHE HAD BEEN ON A SILVER STANDARD FOR AGES.

She had absolutely demonetized gold in 1857. How did she do it? She sold her silver and bought gold; and other countries did the same. They sold their silver and bought gold, and put up gold and put down silver. At the time this was done silver was recognized throughout the world as the best money metal. Chevalier and all the advocates of the demonetization of gold, when California and Australia were so productive, demonstrated that silver was more stable; that its production had been more regular; that it was the money of the people; that it was less likely to fluctuate; and they wanted to go to the silver basis as a matter of philosophy. Countries which have been the most prosperous have been on a silver basis. If you have but one basis, the silver basis is far the more stable basis.

What kind of a basis do you want? One that is stable. You want parity. What kind of a parity? You want the parity of your money with labor, with property. You know if it is not on a parity with property if it is worth 50 per cent more at one time than it is at another. We hear talk about parity of the two metals, when what we want is an honest measure of value. The country having that will prosper, and without it it can not prosper.

See how India prospered with an honest measure of value. With a parity between her rupees and labor and property her manufactures rose to be colossal. She was dominating the markets of the Orient. The manufacturers of Great Britain were excluded from India almost entirely, and they were losing the entire Asiatic trade, because India had an honest measure of value and a man could calculate with certainty upon an enterprise.

WHY IS RUSSIA TAKING OUR MARKET FROM US?

Why is she supplanting us in the European markets with her wheat? Because she has a stable measure of value. It is true it is fiat money, but by the quantity she keeps it on a par with silver. She regulates it so that her paper roubles shall be of the same value as silver, and she has not disturbed the silver of her country.

We are distressed because

OUR MEASURE OF VALUE IS CHANGING.

Gold is going up and property is going down. Will the United States do what Germany did when she desired to depress silver and advance gold for the purpose of imposing a heavier load upon France? She sold silver and bought gold. When we desire to lift the burdens off of our people and bring about the parity let this great country assert its power and buy silver and sell gold. It appears to me to be the end of the argument when we are told

THAT OUR GOLD WILL GO AWAY.

Has any country ever been any better off with gold, if they could get silver, and is not silver better? Is there anything in the history of the world that will justify a contrary conclusion? The impression that there is something peculiar in the quality of gold and that prosperity never can come by the use of silver. We do not want anybody to use it unless he wants to do so. If we sell our gold we can take the output of the silver mines for the next twenty years and not have money enough. Is not silver good money? Did not the German Empire prosper with silver? Did she not whip France with silver? She was on a silver basis at that time, and gold was not a legal tender until 1871, after the Franco-Prussian war.

Now we are told that the way to maintain the parity is

TO SELL SILVER AND BUY GOLD.

That is the way the parity has been destroyed. That is the way gold has been put up and silver put down. I have heard men on this floor propose to involve the country in debt, to increase the taxation and burden upon the people by destroying the parity between gold and silver by buying gold and selling silver. Men propose that to strengthen the reserves. The reserves are strong enough if you do not destroy them. I am opposed to destroying the $600,000,000 of silver we have and I am in favor of getting more.

I did not intend to speak at length upon this point, because I propose to discuss it in connection with my amendment with Mexico, Central and South America, when it shall be more important to advocate this proposition, but I could not help, in this connection, calling attention to the way the enemies of this country propose that we shall maintain the parity between gold and silver by buying gold and selling silver. Did you ever hear of a stockbroker who wanted to put up stock to sell it? Did you ever hear of a stock operator who wanted to bear stock to buy it? The Secretary of the Treasury has refused to execute this law in order to put down the price of silver, to destroy, not to maintain, the parity.

HE HAS REFERRED US TO FOREIGN MARKETS.

foreign markets manipulated by English speculators in paper rupees, not silver. If this should be done by an agent refusing to buy silver at 75 cents, an ounce, with the limit of $1.29, he would be liable in an action for damages. Of course the Secretary of the Treasury is acting for the Government. I can not believe that Mr. Carlisle, although his name is signed to it, could have written such a document. I think it was prepared in the Mint office by some clerk and handed to him to sign. He could not, as a lawyer, say that we must look to the market price in London when all the authorities say that the market price is the price at the place of purchase and delivery, or that the Secretary of the Treasury has the law by counter his act, which silver could be bought. Mr. Carlisle's name must have been secured to it by the Bureau of the Mint in some way. He is overwhelmed with business; he could not have read it; he could not have gone so far outside of the law.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I do not desire to occupy the time of the Senate more than a few minutes. It occurs to me, sir, that the present is a very good time to have a select committee charged with nothing else temporarily than to examine the condition of our banking system, and, in view of what has taken place within the last ninety or one hundred and twenty days, to suggest remedies, if any there be, to conceded defects existing in the system.

The Committee on Finance, very properly charged with matters of this kind, has all of the business which it can properly and carefully and deliberately attend to. This is evidenced by the fact, if there were no other considerations entering into the calculation, that a number of resolutions, very important to the nature of the business before the present extraordinary session been referred to the committee, and because of the pressure which the business attending the consideration of the pending bill imposes upon that committee, it has been unable so far to report any of the resolutions to which I have referred, and it is a fact which we will all concede, I think, that during the next six months the Committee on Finance will have still greater pressure upon it for its time and its mental energies.

If we may place reliance upon the current newspaper literature it is evident that within sixty or ninety days at the farthest there will probably be presented to this body for its consideration a bill proposing a complete revision of our tariff laws. When that bill comes to this body, if it does, the Finance Committee will have charge of it. Then there are in connection with the pending bill fifteen amendments at this time. How many more will be presented during the next two or three weeks it is impossible now even to conjecture. In any event, the time and the attention of the Committee on Finance, with all of its combined ability, will be taxed to the utmost in the consideration of matters regularly brought before the committee.

Hence it has occurred to me that this is a good time to select a committee of three Senators whose natural and political inclinations would lead them to a very careful and a very full, complete, and deliberate consideration of the whole question.

These discussions have brought to light some of the more glaring defects of the present system of banking. They have brought to light not only the defects in the system, but they have shown great dangers attending the operation of our present system of banking. The Secretaries of the Treasury during the last three or four Administrations have repeatedly called the attention of Congress to defects in the national banking system.

Perhaps the best elaborate statement and the clearest was presented by the Comptroller of the Currency in his report to the Secretary of the Treasury for 1890. I will not read it nor do more than simply refer to it as showing a number of features of the banking system which are really defects from the bankers' standpoint, and the Comptroller urges various amendments. His predecessor had urged amendments to the law, and the recommendation was repeated the next year, in 1891, and again in 1892. It has been the constant recommendation of the part of the Secretary of the Treasury and of the Comptroller of the Currency that some changes ought to be made in the national banking system.

Then upon the part of the great masses of the people, outside of the bankers, there is a growing dissatisfaction with the present banking system. The merchants, the small merchants, the men who do a limited business, complain of the extravagant and exorbitant rates of interest which they are compelled to pay for the use of money. There are a few private banks, and where they are they are governed by the rates of interest that are charged and the rates of discount that are exacted by the national banks. Upon the part of the mechanics and upon the part of the farmers, more especially on the part of the farmers, there is a growing dissatisfaction with the banking system based upon the grounds which I have just mentioned. Upon the part of the ground that it is an outrage (they so express it, and they so feel it) that men who are able to purchase fifty or one hundred thousand dollars worth of government bonds may deliver them in escrow, if I may use the term, with the Treasurer of the United States and receive banking circulation upon it, receiving interest upon the bonds and also receiving interest upon their notes which they lend to the people. These are only a few of the complaints that might be enumerated.

Hence, repeating, and with that concluding, I think this is a very good time to take up the subject carefully, deliberately, and with an earnest and sincere desire to arrive at some conclusion which will not only benefit the bankers, benefit the large manufacturers, benefit the large dealers in all lines of trade and traffic, but which will equally well contribute to the general welfare, by some means to be recommended by a committee acting under instructions from the Senate.

Mr. President, in opposing the reference of the resolution to the committee (for I can not see any good purpose to be subserved by that), I ask that the yeas and nays be called.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New Jersey, to refer the resolution of the Senator from Kansas to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. MITCHELL (when his name was called). I rise from Kansas (that there, sir, I think, two resolutions of the same character before the Committee on Finance proposing the appointment of a committee or a commission for the purpose of ascertaining somewhat the same things the Senator desires in his resolution. I think all such resolutions have gone to the Committee on Finance, and I therefore submit to him whether it would not be wise to have them all referred to that committee. The committee will certainly report something back very soon.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I should like to ask the Senator from New Jersey, if I may with propriety, whether there is any indication that there will be a speedy report upon these resolutions from the Finance Committee?

Mr. MOPHERSON. I will state that it is the practice of the Finance Committee to report back as speedily as possible everything that is submitted to that committee for consideration. As the Senator from Colorado well knows, we have been considerably hurried in this Chamber, and therefore the Committee on Finance have had very short sessions and very few of them; but I think I can say to the Senator that the Committee on Finance will take up these matters and make a report upon all of them very soon.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, there is no resolution similar in character to the present one now before the committee. This is a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee to examine and report what, if any, legislation is necessary to improve the national banking system. It is not for the collection of any facts or statistical information for the Senate, or anything of that kind, but simply for the appointment of a committee composed of three members of the Senate to be appointed by the Vice-President. That is all.

While I am on my feet I will state that the Senator from New Jersey confirms the statement I made a few minutes ago, that the time and attention of the Committee on Finance are so much taken up with other matters and the regular pending measure in this body, that it is practically impossible for the committee to give that attention to the subject which it ought to have; and it is for that reason that I oppose the reference of the resolution to the committee.

Mr. HILL. Let the resolution be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be again read. The Secretary read Mr. PEPPER's resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That a select committee of three Senators be appointed by the Vice-President, whose duty it shall be to consider and report whether any and what legislation is necessary to improve the banking system of the country, to the end that greater steadiness may be maintained in currency circulation; that there may be less interruption in the business of exchange; that depositors may have better security against loss, and that savings of the people may be more safely kept.

Committees that hold its sessions in the city of Washington, its necessary clerical work shall be performed by a person or persons then in the employ of the Government—a committee, and not then a person, as was not equipped as a person to be detailed by the Secretary of the Senate. Said committee may sit during sessions and recesses of the Senate, but shall not incur any expense for the provision for the Senate without express authority first had and obtained.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, in my opinion the resolution is simply an effort to take away from the Finance Committee the functions that properly belong to that committee. I do not think the resolution ought to be adopted. The safe way to dispose of it is to refer it to the Finance Committee.

Mr. MANDERSON. Before the resolution is referred, I desire to suggest to the Senator from Kansas the advisability of changing the language in that part where it says the committee shall be appointed by the Vice-President. The Vice-President in his relations to the Senate is the President of the Senate. It would be simply following precedent and I think a very proper construction of the constitutional position of the Vice-President that the language should read instead of "Vice-President" the "President of the Senate."

Mr. PEPPER. That modification will be made, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection the resolution will be so modified.

Mr. PEPPER. And then upon the question of reference I ask that the vote may be taken by yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BUTLER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. Not knowing how he would vote on this proposition, I will withhold my vote.

Mr. CALL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], but being absolutely certain that he would vote "yea" on this question, I vote "yea."

Mr. MAHTIN (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

Mr. DOLPH (when the name of Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon was called). My colleague [Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon] is paired with the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS]. My colleague is necessarily absent from the Senate.

Mr. DOLPH (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KYLE]. If he were here he would doubtless vote "nay" on this question, and I should vote "yea."

Mr. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. ROACH (when his name was called). I am paired generally with the Senator from New York [Mr. MURPHY], but as we agree on this question I vote "yea."

Mr. SHIOP (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote.

Mr. COMILLAN (when Mr. STOCKBRIDGE's name was called). My colleague [Mr. STOCKBRIDGE] has a general pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. MANN]. I will state that my colleague is detained from the Chamber on account of an accident that happened to him while temporarily in Chicago.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. WILSON] is absent on account of illness, and is paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT], who is also absent on account of illness.

Mr. AIDEN. I have a general pair with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW], who is not in his seat; and I will announce my pair, without voting.

Mr. CAIRY. I am paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRBY], and withhold my vote.

Mr. ALLISON [after having voted in the affirmative]. I have a general pair with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL].

I believe he has not voted. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 8; as follows:

JUDICIAL INQUIRY CONCERNING ACT OF 1837.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted on the 4th instant by Mr. MORGAN, as follows:

Resolved, That it be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary to inquire into and report what provisions, if any, of the act approved January 15, 1837, entitled "An act supplementary to the act entitled 'An act establishing a mint, and regulating the coin of the United States,' are now in force."

Mr. MORGAN. If the Senate is ready for a vote on the resolution I shall not occupy any time in discussing it. I ask for a vote on the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills received this day from the House of Representatives were severally read twice by their titles, and referred as indicated below:

The bill (H. R. 1920) to amend section 4430, Title 52, of the Revised Statutes of the United States—to the Committee on Commerce.

The bill (H. R. 2000) to amend the first paragraph of section 1, chapter 4, of the acts of the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, relating to vacancies in the offices of President and Vice-President—to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The bill (H. R. 3131) to disqualify justices, judges, and commissioners of the United States from sitting in courts and hearing certain cases—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The bill (H. R. 3203) for the relief of Mrs. Victor Thunot—to the Committee on Finance.

The bill (H. R. 356) providing for the sale of the old custom-house and lot connected therewith in the city of Louisville, Ky.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 34) providing for the disposition of certain personal property and money now in the hands of a receiver of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, appointed by the supreme court of Utah, and authorizing its application to the charitable purposes of said church—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PURCHASE OF SILVER BULLION.

Mr. VORHEES. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 1.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of the act approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes," the pending question being on the amendment proposed by Mr. PEPPER to the substitute reported from the Committee on Finance.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that on Monday morning, voice and health permitting, after the morning business is ended, I will ask the indulgence of the Senate to make a very brief statement in respect to one or two points that have been made very prominent in this discussion by the opponents of the bill.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, when I addressed the Senate on a former day I endeavored to show, not only by argument but by reference to a condition of things which had formerly existed, in which there had been a great variation between the value of the money metals of the world and by the observation of men of great wisdom and experience in those matters, that wherever there was a departure in the market value as distinguished from the monetary use of the money metals of the world the remedy was not in the cessation of the coinage of the cheaper metal, but in diminution of the coinage value of the dearer metal. This conclusion seems to be supported by reason. It is further supported by the experience of all commercial countries in the adoption of the single gold standard.

I endeavor to show that the limitation of the money use to the dearer and scarcer metal of necessity creates the use of public and private credit as a substitute for money, and that private credits are without limit, are without control; they are the property of private individuals under charters of incorporation. I endeavored to show that the money use of the world to-day is not in gold but in paper, in public and private credits; and that while the price of money and of commodities and the transactions of business are regulated upon this artificial standard, increasing always by the multiplication of money uses by law, it resulted entirely to the benefit of the individuals who acquire under this system a perfect monopoly of the money use of the world.

Mr. President, this debate, prolonged as it has been, and prolonged as it may well be, is not without great public value. This body, however indifferent we may be to these questions, represents the American people. They are listening to the Secretary energetic and thoughtful mind, with a degree of attention which surpasses anything that has existed in the history of the world; and the great public thought of the American people in every school-house and every community is considering and discussing these problems, discussing them intelligently, reading these debates with attention. We have here the great function of sitting in judgment upon their thoughts and upon the intelligent consideration of this subject throughout the world. I protest against all the criticisms which have been made upon the Secretary of the Treasury and upon Senators on both sides of the Chamber for their opinions upon this subject. I think the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Carlisle, was right, in the midst of the agitation of the public mind and the contrary opinions upon this subject of the continued purchase of silver. In not taking the responsibilities of continuing a condition which in his judgment seemed to threaten disaster.

I justify him in not purchasing and coining this money if, in his judgment, upon its continuance a great public evil impended. What the monetary powers of the world controlling this monopoly are arrayed and consolidated, threatening and insisting, as they do now, that the legislation of this country and its public policy shall submit to them, it is a serious question, and none but the constitutional power of this body properly exercised is capable of resisting it.

So, Mr. President, I say let us consider whether we are not in that condition of things in which, as Mr. Balfour said, the money power of despotic governments dictates the money policy of our country, the price of money, the price of labor, takes away from each man within the limits of the United States so much of his labor as it chooses, and determines the degree of comfort that shall belong to every family of our great country of 70,000,000 people. I say facts which can not be contradicted demonstrate that the money of this country now, and of the world, is a private monopoly in the hands of a few individuals. Upon that proposition I challenge discussion and intelligent consideration.

Let us consider the most prominent example which, if properly regarded, is conclusive upon this subject. If so, certainly we should pause in urging the passage of the pending bill without some qualifications and conditions. Let us consider the example of France. I read from MacLeod's Economical Philosophy, printed in London, page 327:

By the definite treaty of peace between Germany and France, signed at Frankfurt, May 10, 1871, France was compelled to pay to Germany five milliards of francs, which was equal very nearly to two hundred millions sterling, at the following dates: Five hundred millions thirty days after the restoration of order in Paris; one thousand millions in the course of 1871; five hundred millions on the 1st day of May, 1872; and the remaining millions on the 23rd March, 1874, together with a part of the interest on these three milliards.

For the indemnity payable by France to Germany, France had to put an indemnity of 2,000,000,000 francs in the hands of the German Government, the notes of the Bank of France, partly in gold and partly in silver, and bills on Berlin for 1,000,000,000 francs, and the remainder in 100,000,000 francs in bills upon London at six months, and the right at the expiration of 2520 francs for the point of settlement.

Let us see how this vast amount of money was paid. Let us see if it was paid in the gold which is established by law as the money of the world.

The debt was finally liquidated in the following way: By composition—

Mr. WOLCOTT. I rise to a point of order.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator will state his point of order.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The point of order is that whilst a majority of all the Senators constituting this body make a quorum, forty-five Senators are required to be present before a quorum is present in this Chamber; and I ask for a ruling of the Chair on that point.

Mr. ALDRICH. I ask for the reading of the rule.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will have the rule read.
The Secretary read the second clause of Rule III, as follows:

2. A quorum shall consist of a majority of the Senators duly chosen and sworn.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask that the constitutional provision with reference to a quorum of the two Houses of Congress may be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

Section 5. There shall be the judges of the elections, returns, and qualifications of the members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner, and under such penalties, as they may deem proper.

Mr. MANDERSON. If I may be allowed I wish to make a suggestion, for this is a question of very grave import, and I make the suggestion, not with any view of preventing a quorum, for I am greatly desirous that a quorum of this body shall be present and that we shall get to a vote upon the questions involved in the amendments to this bill and upon the bill itself.

The Senate, by the Constitution of the United States, is composed of two Senators from each State; and the provision of the Constitution which has just been read provides that a majority of the Senate shall be necessary to constitute a quorum, not a majority of those who may be qualified to be seated here or who may have been elected to seats here, but a majority of the Senate, the potential Senate, with its representatives of two Senators, representing each sovereign State.

Cushing in his Manual lays down in very decisive and emphatic language the proposition that as to each House it is necessary that the majority of the House, as it is composed in its full corporate body, shall constitute a quorum. I read from section 261 of Cushing's Manual:

When the number of which an assembly may consist at any given time is fixed by constitution, and an aliquot proportion of such assembly is required in order to constitute a quorum, the number of which such assembly may consist, and the number of which it does in fact consist at the time in question is the number of the assembly, and the number necessary to constitute a quorum is to be reckoned accordingly. Thus, in the Senate of the United States, which by the Constitution is composed of two Senators from each State, and which may consequently consist of two members of each State, the quorum is a majority of that number, whether the States have elected their constitutional right or not. So in the second branch of Congress, in which, by the Constitution, the whole number of Representatives of which the House may consist is fixed by the last apportionment, increased by the number of members to which newly admitted States may be entitled, the quorum is a majority of the whole number, including the number to which such new States may be entitled, whether they have elected members or not, and making no deduction on account of vacant districts.

This language is exceedingly plain, and it is supported by all the early decisions upon this question in the two Houses of Congress. It continued as the measure of the quorum until the rule which has been read was adopted, after considerable debate, on the 4th day of May, 1864. The circumstances of that time are recalled by the mere mention of the date. Both Houses of Congress were under great stress. Certain States had seceded from the Union; they were without representation in either House of Congress, and it was under the stress of the great necessity that the constitutional provision should receive strain that this rule was adopted. A most valuable debate was had upon that day, participated in most actively by Mr. Davis of Kentucky, on the one hand, and by Mr. Reverdy Johnson on the other; and upon that debate, it is true, that by the decisive vote of 26 to 11 the rule which has been read, and which has since obtained in this body, was adopted, and there is no question but that the rule has since that time been enforced; but if the rule of the Senate as read is in contravention of the constitutional provision, then, of course, it falls to the ground.

There is no necessity for such stress or strain to-day. There are no States now out of the Union; they are all represented here, but, unfortunately, three of the sovereign States of the Union are represented by but one Senator from each; so that there are eighty-five members who have been chosen and have been qualified to sit here; but, none the less, the Senate of the United States is composed, under the Constitution, of eighty-eight members, two from each State, and I submit that, when the Constitution says a majority of the Senate—not of those elected, not of those chosen or appointed, not of those qualified, but a majority of the Senate as a body—shall constitute a quorum, there can be no question as to what the language means.

But, I submit, Mr. President, if this rule is in contravention of the plain import of the Constitution, it falls to the ground, and that forty-five members of this body, and not forty-three, constitute its quorum.

Mr. ALDRICH. The rule which has been read in the hearing of the Senate, and which has been the rule of this body since 1864, is certainly as clear and explicit as language can possibly make it. It is true that the Constitution provides that each State shall choose two Senators to represent it upon this floor, but the Senate itself is composed of the men who are qualified and chosen, under the language of this rule, and no other persons are members of the Senate, except such persons as are qualified and sworn, and a majority of the members of the Senate by the Constitution constitute a quorum.

The Senators who discussed this question in 1874 were Mr. Fessenden of Maine, Mr. Reverdy Johnson of Maryland, and Mr. Trumbull of Illinois, on one side, and Mr. Davis of Kentucky on the other. I think upon the question of constitutional law certainly it could be said, without the slightest disrespect to our former colleague in this body, that Mr. Reverdy Johnson, Mr. Trumbull, Mr. Fessenden, and Mr. SHERMAN, and the other Senators who participated in that discussion, were all well informed in constitutional law and in parliamentary law as the Senators who took the other side.

For thirty years the Constitution has been interpreted by the plain rule of the Senate in this way, that a quorum shall consist of a majority of the members who have been qualified and sworn.

Mr. MCPHERSON. May I ask the Senator from Rhode Island a question before he sits down?

Mr. ALDRICH. Certainly.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I ask, is this a Senate in the meaning and intent of the Constitution?

Mr. ALDRICH. It seems to me very plainly it is.

Mr. MCPHERSON. If it is a Senate, will not a majority of the Senate be sufficient to pass a bill?

Mr. ALDRICH. It seems to me so.

Mr. MCPHERSON. If this is not a Senate in the contemplation of the Constitution, we had as well adjourn and go home.

Mr. HALE. I suppose there is no question as to what the rule is. It has been read here, and is as plain as language can make it; and until the Senate changes the rule it is clearly a guide for us and for the Presiding Officer, and under it we do business.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. President, after the remarks by the Senator from Maine (Mr. HALE), I feel that I am scarcely justified in occupying the attention of the Senate.

The rule which has been read is a rule of the Senate; it has been adopted by the Senate. Countervailing authority may have some persuasive value in the mind of the Senator from Nebraska or myself, but where this body has authoritatively settled the question the Presiding Officer, as a matter of course, could hardly be expected to disregard the authoritative rule of the Senate.

I understand that I am in the condition of a judge in Illinois, who listened to arguments for two or three hours as to the construction of a certain statute, and after the arguments were exhausted he said, "Gentlemen, the law was repealed several years ago." [Laughter.]

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska will suspend until the point of order is disposed of. The second clause of Rule III says:

A quorum shall consist of a majority of the Senators duly chosen and sworn.

The Senate, as at present constituted, consists of 85 members. Forty-three constitute a quorum. It is the duty of the Chair to enforce the rule of the Senate; and the Chair has no doubt that is the correct decision.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I feel it my duty to appeal from the decision of the Chair; and on that appeal I ask for the yeas and nays.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. HALE. I move to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. WOLCOTT. On that I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HIGGINS. When his name is called, I am joined with the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES]. In his absence, I withhold my vote.

Mr. HILL. When his name is called, I do not understand that this is simply a question about which a pair is to apply. I understand that this is simply a plain, naked question of parliamentary law, on which Senators are to vote according to their judgment. It seems to me it is a question where pairs do not come in. I vote "yea."

Mr. DOLPH (when the name of Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon was called. My colleague [Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon] is absent on leave of the Senate. He is paired with the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS].

Mr. PERKINS (when his name was called). I have paired for three hours with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question if present, I withhold my vote.

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. I do not understand that it extends to a question of this kind, and I shall take the liberty of voting "yes," unless I shall be advised by Senators older on the floor that a pair of that kind ought to have effect on such a vote.

Mr. DOLPH. As far as I am concerned, the Senator will have to exercise his own judgment. My colleague sent word to me by his secretary that he was paired, but whether he construed this as a case in which the pair should be observed I am not able to say. I suppose he meant the pair in reference to the pending bill or any measure which involved a party division.

Mr. VILAS. I met the Senator's colleague in Chicago only two days since, and from the conversation I had with him I feel entirely authorized to vote.

Mr. DOLPH. What I have stated is all that I know about the matter.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], and withdraw my vote.

Mr. CAMERON. I am paired with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. HARRIS. May I inquire of the Chair what the question is? I came while the roll call was proceeding.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Tennessee that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] appealed from the decision of the Chair that forty-three Senators constituted a quorum as the Senate is at present constituted. The Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] thereupon moved to lay the appeal of the Senator from Colorado on the table, and the yeas and nays are being called upon the motion of the Senator from Maine.

Mr. HARRIS. I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], who is absent. Notwithstanding that pair, being absolutely satisfied as to how that Senator would vote if here, I record my vote "yes."

Mr. MANDERSON. I am requested by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] to announce that he is necessarily absent from the session to-day by reason of a death in his family. I make this announcement now for all future votes.

Mr. HATE. I desire to say that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE] is unwell, and left the Chamber.

Mr. DOLPH (after having voted in the affirmative). I voted not remembering that I was paired with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], and not observing whether he was in the Senate Chamber. I can not ascertain how he would probably vote if present, and I therefore withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 5, as follows:

YAYS—38.

Allen,	Dixon,	Lindsay,	Smith,
Blackburn,	McMillan,	McMillan,	Squire,
Brace,	Payne,	McPherson,	Vest,
Cady,	Gallinger,	Mitchell, Wis.	Vilas,

YEAS—5.

Allen,	Martin,	Morgan,	Peffer.

NOT VOTING—42.

Allison,	George,	Lodge,	Shoup,
Butler,	Gibson,	Mills,	Stockbridge,

Daniel,	Irby,	Pugh,
Davis,	Jones, Ark.	Ransom,
Dolph,	Jones, Nev.	Roach,
Dubois,	Kyle,	Sherman,

So the motion to lay the appeal on the table was agreed to.

Mr. ALLEN resumed his speech. After having spoken some fourteen hours, with interruptions, he said:

Mr. President, I surrender the floor to my friend from Kansas [Mr. MARTIN], who I understand desires to address the Senate.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. President, does the Senator from Nebraska assume the right to farm out the floor after his occupancy of it?

Mr. ALLEN. I am somewhat unfamiliar with the usages of the Senate. The Senator from Kansas, as I understood, asked me to surrender the floor to him.

Mr. VOORHEES. I have every respect both for the Senator from Nebraska and the Senator from Kansas, but I do not understand that the Senator has that right.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I do not care anything about being ejected by the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. VOORHEES. I am not ejecting the Senator.

Mr. ALLEN. I have finished, Mr. President.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. President, I move to lay the pending amendment to the bill on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion of the Senator from Indiana to lay on the table the amendment submitted by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] to the substitute reported by the Committee on Finance.

Mr. ALDRICH. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President—

Mr. HARRIS. Let the amendment be reported in full.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read.

Mr. WOLCOTT (at 8 o'clock and 3 minutes a. m., Thursday, October 12). Mr. President, there is evidently not a quorum present in the Chamber.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll. The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Daniel,	Hill,	Perkins,
Allen,	Dixon,	Huntin,	Platt,
Bate,	Dolph,	Proctor,	Quay,
Blackburn,	Gallinger,	McMillan,	Smith,
Brace,	Payne,	McPherson,	Squire,
Cady,	Gordon,	Manderson,	Vest,
Call,	Gray,	Martin,	Vilas,
Cameron,	Hale,	Mitchell, Wis.	Voorhees,
Cole,	Harris,	Murphy,	Walthall,
Cullom,	Hawley,	Passo,	Washburn,
	Higgins,	White, La.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-eight Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present, and the question is upon the motion of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VOORHEES] to lay on the table the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] to the substitute reported by the Committee on Finance, which will be read.

The SECRETARY. At the end of line 13 of the amendment of the Committee on Finance it is proposed to insert:

That the standard for both gold and silver coins of the United States shall be of pure metal and one hundred of alloy; and the alloy of the silver coins shall be of copper; and the alloy of the gold coins shall be of copper and silver in the proportion of one-half of the whole alloy.

SEC. 2. That of the silver coins the dollar shall be of the weight of 412 grains; the half dollar of the weight of 206 grains; the quarter dollar of 103 grains. And that dollars, half dollars, and quarter dollars, and dimes shall be legal tenders of payment, according to their nominal value, for any sums whatever.

SEC. 3. That of the gold coins the weight of the eagle shall be 258 grains; that of the half eagle, 129 grains; and that of the quarter eagle, 64 grains; and that for all sums whatever the eagle shall be a legal tender of payment for $10, the half eagle for $5, and the quarter eagle for $2.50.

SEC. 4. That the silver coin certificate issued at the Mint of the United States and the gold coins issued since the 31st day of July, 1833, shall continue to be legal tenders of payment for their nominal values on the same terms as if they were of old design and provided for by this act.

SEC. 5. That gold and silver bullion brought to the mint for coinage shall be received and coined by the proper officers, for the payment of the bullion. Provided, That no bullion is to be refused at the mint, any deposits of less value than $100 and any bullion so base as to be unsuitable for the operations of the mint. And, provided also, That when gold and silver are combined, if either of these metals be in such small proportion that it can not be separated advantageously, no allowance shall be made to the depositor for the value of such metal.

SEC. 6. That when bullion is brought to the mint for coinage it shall be weighed by the treasurer, in the presence of the depositor when practicable, and a receipt given which shall contain the description and weight of the bullion being before its value can be ascertained the weight after melting shall be considered as the true weight of the bullion deposited.

SEC. 7. That all provisions of existing laws relating to coinage which are inconsistent with the provisions of this shall be construed in aid of the execution of this act.

SEC. 8. That all provisions of law in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

SEC. 9. That this act shall take effect and be in force immediately.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VOORHEES], to lay on the table the amendment just reported upon which the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate that I may make a brief statement as to the nature of the amendment.

Mr. FRYE and others. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HALE (when Mr. COCKRELL's name was called). The Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] is paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL], whose name has just been called.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], but I know how he would vote on this question, and I vote "yea."

The Secretary called the name of Mr. DUBOIS.

Mr. VILAS. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] is present in his chair. The roll requires a Senator to vote when his name is called, unless excused by the Senate. I ask for a ruling of the Chair on that point.

Mr. HARRIS. I suggest to the Senator from Wisconsin that he raise the question prematurely. It is after the roll call and before the result is announced that the question he now suggests can be raised, if raised at all.

Mr. VILAS. I withdraw my point for the present, if that is according to the regular order of proceeding.

Mr. GRAY (when his name was called). On all votes connected with this question I am at present paired with the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. FRYE. I understood an arrangement had been made with the Senator from Florida [Mr. PASCO] by which the pair of the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] was transferred to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], who is absent, and when the roll call was finished I proposed to announce that fact.

Mr. GRAY. Then I transfer the pair I announced with that Senator from California to the Senator from New Hampshire, and shall vote "yea."

Mr. DUBOIS. Mr. President, I ask if the authority of the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] to this transfer of his pair has been obtained, and I would ask if his colleague [Mr. PERKINS] knows what disposition the Senator from California desires to make of his pair?

Mr. GRAY. I have never known, in the observation of some years now, the authority to transfer a pair questioned where the parties are known to vote on different sides of a question.

Mr. PERKINS. I will state in substance the same as the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] has stated, that my colleague [Mr. WHITE] informed me that he had paired with the Senator from Delaware upon all questions relating to the bill now pending, or on the silver question. Whether my colleague has transferred his pair or authorized anyone to do so, the Senator from Delaware is, of course, the one to be the judge, not I.

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. If he were present I should vote "nay" on this question.

Mr. HIGGINS (when his name was called). On this bill and its amendments I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES]. I do not see him in the Chamber and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]. If he were present I should vote "yea" and he would vote "nay." Mr. PERKINS (when his name was called). I am paired until 9 o'clock with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. He not being present, I withhold my vote, not knowing how he would cast his vote.

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). On this and all other questions I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN].

While upon my feet I will also mention the pair of my colleague [Mr. CAMERON] with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN].

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Montana [Mr. POWER], with the understanding, however, that whenever it is necessary to make a quorum, I shall be at liberty to vote. I shall determine whether it is necessary.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. WALTHALL. I wish to state that my colleague [Mr. GEORGE] has a general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

Mr. PALMER after having voted in the affirmative, I am informed that my vote ought to be withdrawn, and I will do it on account of my pair. I am paired with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSENBERG].

Mr. QUAY. As I have stated, I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN]. The Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS] is paired with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. I suggest to the Senator from California that we transfer our pairs so that we may both vote.

Mr. PERKINS. I can not assume the authority to do so. The Senator from Massachusetts left the Senate Chamber for three hours and I gave my word that I would pair with him. I have no authority to transfer the pair.

Mr. QUAY. Very well.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. I desire to say that whenever my vote will make a quorum, I shall consider, under the agreement made with the Senator with whom I am paired, that I am at liberty to vote.

Mr. VILAS. I ask to have the rule read which relates to the obligations of a Senator when his name is called to vote; and I ask the attention of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] to the rule while it is being read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will first announce the result of the vote.

Mr. HARRIS. The question the Senator from Wisconsin proposes to raise must be raised after the roll call and before the announcement of the result.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The rule will be read as suggested by the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask whether the vote has been recapitulated by the Secretary?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has not been.

Mr. MANDERSON. It seems to me the proper time to raise the question is after the recapitulation, but before the announcement of the result of the vote by the Chair.

Mr. HARRIS. There is no question about that.

Mr. MANDERSON. The vote should certainly be recapitulated, whether it would not be known who had voted.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary was about to recapitulate the vote when the Senator from Tennessee made the point.

Mr. HARRIS. My suggestion was before the announcement of the result of the recapitulation; but I think it is wholly immaterial whether it comes before or after.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks it is not very material. The Secretary will recapitulate the vote.

Mr. DOLPH after having voted in the affirmative. Has the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE] voted on this motion? Mr. WALTHALL. I announced his pair with the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. DOLPH. Then I withdraw my vote. I voted inadvertently.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Rule XII will be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read the second paragraph of Rule XII, as follows:

2. When a Senator declines to vote on all of his name, he shall be paired to another Senator, and having assigned him, the Presiding Officer shall submit the question to the Senate: "Shall the Senator, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting?" which shall be decided without debate; and these proceedings shall be had after the roll call and before the result is announced; and any further proceedings in reference thereto shall be after such announcement.

Mr. VILAS. I should like to have the first clause of Rule XII read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The clause referred to will be read. The Secretary read as follows:

1. When the yeas and nays are ordered, the names of Senators shall be called alphabetically; and each Senator shall, without debate, declare his assent or dissent to the question, unless he is in the Senate, and no Senator shall be permitted to vote after the decision shall have been announced by the Presiding Officer, but may for sufficient reasons, with unanimous consent, change or withdraw his vote. No motion to suspend the rule shall in order, nor shall the Presiding Officer entertain any request to suspend it by unanimous consent.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. I desire that my name shall be called.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the name of the Senator from Louisiana.

The Secretary called the name of Mr. WHITE of Louisiana.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. Under the terms of my pair with the Senator from Montana [Mr. POWER] I consider that I am at liberty to vote to make a quorum; and I vote "yea."

Mr. IRBY (after having voted in the negative). I voted under a misapprehension. I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY], and therefore withdraw my vote.

Mr. HIGGINS. If the Senator from South Carolina is willing to transfer his pair, as I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES], we can transfer the pairs so that the Senator from Arkansas will be paired with the Senator from Wyoming; and the Senator from South Carolina and myself from votes.

Mr. IRBY. I do not feel authorized to transfer my pair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Upon the motion of the Senator from Indiana to lay on the table the amendment of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] to the substitute reported by the Committee on Finance, the yeas are 29 and the nays are 12.

The yeas and nays are as follows:

YEAS—23

Albright	Pay	McMillan
Brace	Clayton	Manderson
Cameron	Gray	McMillan, Wls.
Call	Hale	Murphy
Dixon	Hill	Proctor
Doyle	Lindsay	Ransom

NAYS—12

Brace	Call	Hughes	Proctor
Berry	Cameron	Martin	Pay
McMillan	Daniel	Pasco	Waltball

NOT VOTING—14

Albright	Cameron	McMillan	Shortall
Brace	Clayton	Mitchell, Oregon	Smith
Cameron	Gray	Proctor	Stewart
Call	Hale	Pay	Waltball
Cameron	Hill	Perkins	White, La.
Colewell	Pay	Proctor	White, Cal.
Colewell	James, Ark.	Proctor	Wilson
Dixon	James, Nev.	Pugh	Wolcott
Dixon	Kyle	Platt
George	Lodge	Roach

The VICE-PRESIDENT. No quorum has voted.

Mr. VOORHEES. I move that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators.

Mr. MANDERSON. There must be a call of the Senate before the first order can be made.

Mr. HARRIS. There being no quorum shown by the vote, Mr. VOORHEES. I stand corrected of course, Mr. President, but I thought the announcement by the Chair of the absence of a quorum sufficiently proved that fact; but if it has to be done by a roll call, I have no objection.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. No quorum being shown by the vote, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Albright	Faulkner	McMillan	Proctor
Bate	Few	McMillan, Wls.	Ransom
Berry	Gallinger	Manderson	Smith
Caffery	Gordon	Martin	Squire
Call	Gray	McMillan	Voorhees
Cameron	Hale	National Wls.	Waltball
Colewell	Harris	Pay	White, La.
Colewell	Hawley	Palmer	White, Cal.
Daniel	Higgins	Pasco	Wilson
Dixon	Hill	Peffer
Dixon	Huntton	Perkins
Doyle	Lindsay	Platt

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. VILAS. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will order the roll to be again called upon the motion of the Senator from Indiana to lay on the table the pending amendment to the amendment.

Mr. VILAS. I desire to call attention to the fact that if Senators who are present were voting—and no excuse or reason for not voting has been given—a voting quorum is present.

I drew the attention of the Senate to the fact that the Senator from Idaho was in his seat at the time when the vote was taken, and that the rule of the Senate, which I asked the Chair to direct to be read, and which was read, is explicit—

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I rise to a question of order. Mr. VILAS. I believe I have the floor at present.

Mr. TELLER. I rise to a question of order, and the Senator does not have the floor then.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will hear the question of order.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator from Wisconsin is out of order. The next thing is the roll call. He has no right to be heard now. After the roll call he may raise the question.

Mr. HALE. Before the announcement.

Mr. VILAS. Mr. President—

Mr. TELLER. I submit that the question is not debatable.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will decide the point of order. Upon reflection the Chair will hear the Senator from Wisconsin on the point of order.

Mr. VILAS. I only ask to make one additional observation, and it is this, that it is hardly fair to ask Senators to wait while the Sergeant-at-Arms brings in other Senators or brings in those who are temporarily absent, when Senators who are present proffer no excuse for not voting, the rule being imperative that every Senator should discharge that responsibility which is upon him by virtue of his holding a place in this Chamber.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will sustain the point of order made by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] as to the time in which the point of order may be made by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS], and will direct the roll to be called.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE]; but he would vote "yea" if present, and I therefore vote "yea."

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. Mr. HIGGINS (when his name was called). I announce again my pair with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] and withhold my vote. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. BERRY (when the name of Mr. JONES of Arkansas was called). My colleague [Mr. JONES of Arkansas] is paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]. I transfer that pair to my colleague [Mr. STOCKBRIDGE], and vote "yea."

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. If he were present, I do not know how he would vote; but I should vote "yea."

Mr. PERKINS (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote.

Mr. PROCTOR (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL], and withhold my vote.

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN]. If it meets with the approval of my colleagues [Mr. CAMERON], who is paired with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], I shall transfer the pair, and he and I can both vote.

Mr. CAMERON. That is satisfactory to me. I vote "yea."

Mr. QUAY. I vote "yea."

Mr. SQUIRE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], and not seeing him present, I withhold my vote.

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL], as I before announced.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from Montana [Mr. POWER]. Under the terms of my pair I am at liberty to vote if my vote is necessary to make a quorum.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GRAY. I intended to announce when my name was called that I am paired with the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. I again announce that I have a general pair with him upon this question, but that pair has been transferred to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER].

I have already recorded my vote, "yea."

Mr. CAMDEN (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. FETTERGREW], and I observe he is not in the Chamber. In making the pair I reserved the privilege to vote to make a quorum. I will withdraw my vote for the present, and, if necessary, shall hereafter vote to make a quorum.

Mr. HOAR (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH] and shall withdraw my vote before the result is announced unless the Senator returns to the Chamber or is paired with some one else.

Mr. BATE. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH] is not present.

Mr. HOAR. Then I withdraw my vote for the time being, unless an arrangement may be made.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's vote will be withdrawn.

Mr. CAMDEN. I ask if my vote will make a quorum.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will not, with the pairs announced.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. Under the arrangement of my pair I vote to make a quorum. I vote "yea."

Mr. CAMDEN. I shall vote to make a quorum. I vote "yea."

Mr. VILAS. I think this is the orderly time under the ruling of the Chair for calling attention to Rule XII. I desire to ask attention to the fact, to which I have already called attention, that the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUNFORD] was present in his seat and did not vote upon the call of the roll, and that his vote was necessary to make a quorum.

We have heard considerable about the lack of rules in the Senate. We have been called several times during the past night by the Senator from Idaho in order that the rule for the maintenance of a quorum should be constantly observed.

This rule of the Senate divides the Senators into two classes. In making the names of Senators shall be called alphabetically and each Senator shall, without debate, declare his assent or dissent to the question, unless excused by the Senate. That rule contains this addition:

No motion to suspend this rule shall be in order, nor shall the Presiding Officer entertain any request to suspend it by unanimous consent.

There, sir, is a rule which, if observed, would render it unnecessary for sending at all for absent Senators by the Sergeant-at-Arms in order to declare the opinion of the Senate upon the vote now depending. Is that rule to be observed? The Senate was organized in the earlier days of the Republic upon the principles which our great courts are organized. —

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I rise to a question of order. The question of order I state to the Chair is that this is not a debatable question. If the Senator from Wisconsin is to debate it, then everybody else must have the same right.

Mr. VILAS. There is no man upon this floor who will welcome a cessation of debate more heartily than I —

Mr. TELLER. The Senator will speak in order.

Mr. VILAS. Upon this or any other question ready to debate.

Mr. TELLER. I ask the Chair to rule upon the question of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will consider the question of order raised by the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. TELLER. I wish the Chair would make the Senator from Wisconsin remain in order until the Chair considers it.

Mr. VILAS. Unless the point of order made by the Senator from Colorado is correct, I am in order until ruled to be out of order. I am entitled to proceed; and, with great respect to the Senator from Colorado, I am sure he will think so.

Mr. TELLER. The Chair does not seem to have any chance to rule upon the question.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The attention of the Chair has been called to a rule which will again be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

RULE XII. VOTING, ETC.

1. When the yeas and nays are ordered, the names of Senators shall be called alphabetically; and each Senator may, without debate, declare his assent or dissent to the question, unless excused by the Senate; and no Senator shall be permitted to vote after the decision shall have been announced by the Presiding Officer, but may for special reasons, with unanimous consent, change or withdraw his vote. No motion to suspend this rule shall be in order, nor shall the Presiding Officer entertain any request to suspend it by unanimous consent.

2. When a Senator declines to vote on call of his name, he shall be required to assign his reasons therefor, and having assigned them, the Presiding Officer shall submit the question to the Senate: "Shall the Senator, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting?" which shall be decided without debate; and these proceedings shall be had after the roll call and before the result is announced; and any further proceedings in reference thereto shall be after such announcement.

Mr. VILAS. I desire to call the attention of the Chair to the fact that the second clause of that rule as read requires that the Senator declining to vote shall be required to assign his reasons for such declination. I suppose that that duty is upon the Chair.

Mr. PROCTOR. The Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL] has come in since I announced my pair, and I should like to have my name called.

The name of Mr. PROCTOR was called by the Secretary, and he voted in the affirmative.

Mr. CAMDEN (after having voted in the negative). It is not necessary for me to vote now to make a quorum. I withdraw my vote. The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW], with whom I have a general pair, has come in.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wisconsin has called attention of the Chair to the fact that a Senator present has not voted. Rule XII has been read. The Chair will direct the Secretary to call the name of the Senator from Idaho.

The Secretary called the name of Mr. DUBOIS, who failed to respond.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will read the rule.

RULE XII.

2. When a Senator declines to vote on call of his name, he shall be required to assign his reasons therefor, and having assigned them, the Presiding Officer shall submit the question to the Senate: "Shall the Senator, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting?" which shall be decided without debate; and these proceedings shall be had after the roll call and before the result is announced; and any further proceedings in reference thereto shall be after such announcement.

The Chair will hear any excuse that the Senator from Idaho desires to make.

Mr. DUBOIS. Mr. President, there are several very good excuses that I could give. I am not correctly informed (if not I shall be very glad to be corrected) the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] has not authorized definitely any pair of his. The Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] very definitely paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] in order to protect his interests on this question. I have noticed that several Senators have voted and withdrawn their votes as they thought necessary. There is another reason which is of more importance. There is a most important amendment before the Senate, one far-reaching in its consequences to this country. A motion was made to lay that amendment on the table, thus cutting off debate. The author of that amendment asked the courtesy of the Senate for a few minutes to explain his amendment, which was refused. I have refused to vote for those reasons, and I submit that they are sufficient. My duty to my constituents should and will control my vote. I shall cast or withhold my vote as their interests demand. I am to judge what their interests require. They gave me the vote to use for them and the best interests of the country.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Under the rule the Chair submits to the Senate the following—

Mr. HOAR. I ask leave to transfer my pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] to the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH], who will withdraw his vote. I will vote "yea." Mr. ALDRICH (after having voted in the affirmative). Under the arrangement suggested, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. TELLER. I rise to a question of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado will state his question of order.

Mr. TELLER. Is there a quorum present?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the vote has not yet been announced. The rule has just been read, and under the rule the Chair will submit to the Senate the following: Under the second section of Rule XII shall the Senator from Idaho, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting?

Mr. BUTLER. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], but I am satisfied how he would vote, and I vote "nay."

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]. I will transfer the pair to my colleague [Mr. STOCKBRIDGE], and vote "nay."

Mr. PERKINS (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. Not knowing how he would vote upon this question, I withhold my vote. Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I withhold my vote unless it is necessary to make a quorum. I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL].

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Montana [Mr. POWER]. Unless my vote is necessary to make a quorum, I shall not vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HIGGINS. I announce my pair with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. HALE. I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGHE].

Mr. VANCE. I am paired with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. STOCKBRIDGE] on this question. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. BUTLER. I should be very glad to inquire of the Chair or of some Senator more familiar with the parliamentary rules than I am what would be the effect of the withdrawal of my vote if I chose to do so? I should like to have that question decided.

Have I a right to withdraw my vote?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina desire an answer?

Mr. BUTLER. No, sir; I will not press it.

Upon the question, Shall Mr. DUBOIS be excused from voting?

the result was announced—yeas 21, nays 29, as follows:

YEAS—21.

Bate,	Coke,	Keto,	Squire,
Berry,	Daniel,	Lindsay,	Vest,
Butler,	Faulkner,	Mavin,	Walden,

So Mr. DUBOIS was not excused.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will announce the vote upon the motion of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VORHEES] to lay on the table the amendment of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] to the pending bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. I desire to vote before the result is announced. I vote "yea."

Mr. VILAS. I desire to call the attention of the Chair to the fact that he has announced that the Senate has refused to excuse the Senator from Idaho from voting.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has so announced.

Mr. DOLPH. The Senator from Idaho has not voted.

Mr. MANDERSON. I suggest that his name be called.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the name of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS].

The Secretary called the name of Mr. DUBOIS, who failed to respond.

Mr. MANDERSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will hear the parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MANDERSON. Before making the parliamentary inquiry of the Chair, I should like to make a suggestion. Nothing, of course, is more desirable than that every Senator present should vote, unless he has such an interest in the question as to prompt him to abstain from voting on account of his interest.

The rule has been read requiring that every member of this body shall vote unless excused by the vote of the Senate, after he has given his reasons for not voting. The question proposed by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] is one that opens up the utter uselessness of such a rule. Suppose that on the vote which has just been taken as to whether the Senator from Idaho shall be excused, some Senator present did not vote. The motion could at once be made that that Senator must vote unless excused by the Senate, and upon that vote the same thing might occur, and we might thus go around in a circle until the end of time, piling motion upon motion and order upon order in that way. It is to me, as it seems to me, that there is not in the history of the Senate a precedent where a Senator has been compelled to vote. By what process could he be compelled?

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President—

Mr. MANDERSON. How would you open his mouth if he sees fit to stand mute?

Mr. ALDRICH. I dislike to interfere with the Senator from Nebraska, but I raise the same point of order which was raised a few moments ago by the Senator from Colorado.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. What is the point of order?

Mr. ALDRICH. That pending the motion to lay upon the table (and it is pending until a final decision is made) debate of all kinds is out of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will sustain the point of order and announce the vote.

Mr. MORGAN. I desire to vote. What is the question?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question on which the roll was called is the motion of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VORHEES] to lay on the table the amendment of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] to the pending bill.

Mr. MORGAN. On that motion I vote "nay."

Mr. CAMDEN. The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KYLE] is now in the Chamber and I will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. KYLE. I vote "nay."

Mr. VILAS. The question whether the Senator from Idaho shall be excused from voting for the reasons which he stated has been submitted to the Senate and the Senate has declined to excuse him. I suppose before any announcement of the vote the Senator from Idaho should be required to obey the decision of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will call the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin to the last clause of Rule XII:

"In cases of proceedings, had he laid under the roll call and the result is announced; and any further proceedings in reference thereto shall be out of order."

It is for this reason that the Chair sustained the point of order made by the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. VORHEES. I ask that the vote be declared on the motion to lay on the table the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. VILAS. Mr. President, one moment.

Mr. BUTLER. I rise to a point of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina will state his point of order.

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator from Wisconsin is out of order

The Chair has already ruled upon the question raised by the Senator from Rhode Island that debate is not in order. I insist that the Senator from Wisconsin be required to conform to the ruling of the Chair. I make the point that he is out of order.

Mr. VILAS. I rise to a point of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. As the Senator from Wisconsin states that he rises to a point of order, the Chair will hear him before deciding on the point raised by the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. VILAS. I do not mean to dissent from what the Chair rules, but for the completion of the order of the Senate declining to excuse the Senator from Idaho it is necessary that his name shall be called, and that he shall be required to vote in obedience to the order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the name of the Senator from Idaho was called in accordance with that suggestion, and that, without the action of the Senate, that is the end of the authority of the Chair upon the point. Prior to that, under the last clause of the rule to which the Chair has called the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin, it is the duty of the Chair to announce the vote.

Mr. VILAS. Then I ask that the fact that the Senator from Idaho refuses to vote be entered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be entered, of course, in the proceedings.

The result was announced on the motion to lay Mr. PEPPER's amendment on the table—yeas 33, nays 17; as follows:

YEAS—33.

Galley,	Gallinger,	McPherson,	Sherman.
Canfield,	Gordon,	Manderson,	Smith.
Carey,	Gray,	Millis,	Squire.
Cullom,	Hale,	Mitchell, Wis.	Voorhees.
Davis,	Hawley,	Murphy,	Washburn.
Dixon,	Hill,	Platt,	White, La.
Dolph,	Hoar,	Proctor,
Faulkner,	Lindsay,	Quay,
Frye,	McMillan,	Ransom,

NAYS—17.

Bate,	Cameron,	Kelly,	Peffer.
Berry,	Cole,	Lytle,	Reid.
Blackburn,	Daniel,	Martin,	Walthall.
Butler,	Hunt,	Morgan,
Call,	Huntington,	Pasco,

NOT VOTING—31.

Aldrich,	Gorman,	Palmer,	Teller.
Allen,	Hastings,	Perkins,	Turpie.
Chandler,	Harris,	Pittenger,	Vance.
Brewer,	Hickman,	Powers,	Vilas.
Cookrell,	Jones, Ark.	Pugh,	White, Cal.
Culbuck,	Jones, Nev.	Roach,	Wilson.
Dubois,	Lodge,	Shoup,	Wolcott.
Gibbs,	Dubois, Oregon,	Stewart,
	Morrill,	Stockbridge,

So Mr. PEPPER's amendment was laid on the table.

Mr. VORHEES. I desire now to state the condition of the business before the Senate. That is the only pending amendment except the amendment which was reported to the House bill by the Committee on Finance. That is the next pending amendment, and that is debatable, and on that the Senator from Kansas [Mr. MARTIN] desires the floor, and I yield to him.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President—

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask that the pending question be stated, so that we may know the parliamentary status of the bill. Is the question on the committee's amendment?

Mr. VORHEES. Yes. I will state a little more distinctly that the amendment just laid on the table was the only pending amendment except that reported by the committee itself to the original House bill. That is still pending and will be the next in order for a vote. That being established, the Senator from Kansas takes the floor upon that amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BUTLER. Will the Senator from Kansas yield to me for a parliamentary question?

Mr. MARTIN. Certainly.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask the Senator from Indiana what became of the other amendments offered to the bill?

Mr. VORHEES. They have not been formally offered. They have been submitted as intended to be offered, and printed.

Mr. McPHERSON. Will the Chair please state what is now the pending order of business?

Mr. VORHEES. House bill No. 1.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state in response to the inquiry of the Senator from Indiana that the pending question is the amendment of the Committee on Finance to House bill No. 1. Upon that the Senator from Kansas [Mr. MARTIN] is recognized.

Mr. McPHERSON. I wished to have it stated by the Chair, that is all.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President—

Mr. VOORHEES. I object to —
Mr. PEPPER. I wish simply to give notice of an amendment to be offered hereafter.

Mr. VOORHEES. I do not want to have it offered now. I shall object to it now, but to a notice to be offered hereafter of course I shall not object.

Mr. PEPPER. I have the permission of my colleague. I desire to give notice that I shall propose the amendment at the proper time which I send to the desk. I ask that it may be printed.

Mr. MORGAN. Let it be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER].

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add to the bill the following additional sections:

SEC. 7. The silver coins of the United States shall hereafter be—the dollar, the half-dollar, the quarter-dollar, and the dime, made of standard metal as provided in section 8 of the act of Congress approved January 18, 1857.

SEC. 8. That of the silver coins the dollar shall be of the weight of 412 grains; the half-dollar of the weight of 206 grains; the quarter-dollar of the weight of 103 grains; the dime or tenth part of a dollar, of the weight of 41 grains. And that dollars, half dollars, quarter dollars, and dimes shall be legal tenders of payment, according to their nominal value, for any sums whatever. The said coins shall be made in the same form and have upon them the same devices and inscriptions as the silver coins now in circulation.

SEC. 9. The gold coins of the United States shall hereafter be—the double eagle, to contain 208 grains of standard gold, and to be of the value of $20; the half eagle, to contain 104 grains of standard gold, and to be of the value of $10. The said coins shall be made of the same form as the coins now in circulation, with like inscriptions and devices as the coins of like denominations made under the provisions of the act of Congress approved February 12, 1875, and shall be legal tenders according to their nominal value, for any sums whatever.

SEC. 10. SEC. 11. That all silver coins hereafter issued at the mint of the United States and the gold coins issued since the 31st day of July, 1834, shall continue to be legal tenders of payment for their nominal values on the same terms as if they were of the coinage provided for by this act.

SEC. 12. That gold and silver bullion brought to the mint for coinage shall be received and coined by the proper officers, for the benefit of the depositor. Provided, That it shall be lawful to refuse at the mint any deposits of less value than $100 and any bullion so base as to be unsuitable for the operations of the mint; And provided also, That when gold and silver are received, if either of these metals be in such small proportion that it cannot be separated advantageously, no allowance shall be made to the depositor for the value of such metal.

SEC. 13. That when bullion is brought to the mint for coinage it shall be weighed by the Treasurer, in the presence of the depositor, when practicable, and a receipt given which shall state the description and weight of the bullion. Provided, That when the bullion is refused at the mint as requiring melting before its value can be ascertained the weight after melting shall be considered as the true weight of the bullion deposited.

SEC. 15. That all provisions of law in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

SEC. 16. That this act shall take effect and be in force immediately.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAULKNER in the chair). The amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from Kansas will lie on the table and be printed.

Mr. McPHERSON. I move that further proceedings under the call be dispensed with.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The junior Senator from Kansas will proceed.

Mr. STEWART. Will the Senator from Kansas give way to me for a moment? I have a message here. It is one that comes from an enthusiastic gold man. It is similar to others which have been put on my desk and I sometimes like to read them. The letter is as follows:

DALTON, Oct. 11th, 1893.

MY DEAR SIR: I look in my mind that you are the leader in this great agitation that is going on in the U. S. Senate for about 8 weeks. Don't you know that these are hundreds of thousands of working men who are waiting and thousands staring for the repeal of that dastardly Sherman bill? You are now warned not to put your foot on the toiler's neck although you have him down for there might be something drop between your feet that will swing you down. Take warning.

BY ONE WHO KNOWS.

Mr. JOHNSON'S. It is a warning. I also take warning.

P. S. This is no anarchist talk: I am an American born.

He has his bomb pictured here [exhibiting].

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator from Nevada will allow me, I of course will not undertake to criticize him, except he will allow me to say in all courtesy that I do not think such things do any good to read in the Senate. I have had three or four from the far West which I treated as a mere jest. My honorable friend from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] will remember that I showed him one early in the session, which purported to come from his State, in which the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] and myself were marked out with skull and crossbones, but I supposed that it was one of those very poor jests of men who are out of employment, and who sometimes resort to such things to relieve the tedium and monotony of their existence.

Mr. STEWART. I would not have called attention to the letter if it were not almost in harmony with the language of the public press of New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Kansas [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN. I suppose that the letters received by my distinguished friend from Massachusetts from people out West of that character were from people who had recently gone West from Massachusetts.

Mr. HOAR. I assented.

Mr. MARTIN resumed his speech.

Mr. POWER (at 10 o'clock and 46 minutes p. m.). Mr. President, I suggest the lack of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana suggests the want of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allison.	Higgins.	Proctor.
Bate.	Hoar.	Ransom.
Berry.	Lindsay.	Roach.
Blackburn.	Leage.	Sherman.
Call.	Gallinger.	Smith.
Cameron.	Gordon.	Stockbridge.
Carey.	Gorman.	Mills.
Cole.	Gray.	Peffer.
Cullum.	Harris.	Perkins.
Davis.	Hawley.	Platt.
Dixon.	Hill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-eight Senators have responded to their names. A quorum of the Senate is not present. Mr. McPHERSON. I move that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to request the attendance of the absent Senators.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sergeant-at-Arms will execute the order of the Senate.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask that my colleague [Mr. GIBSON] be excused from attendance. His health is such that his attendance is impossible.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] asks that his colleague [Mr. GIBSON] be excused from the order of the Senate requiring the Sergeant-at-Arms to request the attendance of absent senators. Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none and the junior Senator from Maryland is excused.

Mr. MURPHY, Mr. PALMER, Mr. PASCO, Mr. VANCE, and Mr. VILAS entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (at 10 o'clock and 58 minutes a. m., Thursday). Forty-three Senators having answered to their names, a quorum of the Senate is present.

Mr. McPHERSON. I move that further proceedings under the call be dispensed with.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The junior Senator from Kansas will proceed.

Mr. MARTIN resumed his speech.

Mr. PEPPER (at 11 o'clock and 30 minutes a. m., Thursday, October 12). Mr. President, I suggest there is not a quorum present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas suggests the want of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allison.	Faulkner.	Huntton.	Perkins.
Bate.	Frye.	Lindsay.	Platt.
Berry.	Gallinger.	Lodge.	Proctor.
Brice.	George.	McMillan.	Ransom.
Call.	Gordon.	McPherson.	Roach.
Cameron.	Gorman.	Manderson.	Sherman.
Carey.	Gray.	Mitchell.	Smith.
Cullum.	Harris.	Mitchell, of Wis.	Stockbridge.
Daniel.	Hawley.	Murphy.	Walthall.
Dixon.	Hill.	Higgins.	Wadsworth.
Dolph.	Hoar.	Pasco.	White, of La.
		Peffer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-seven Senators have answered to their names. A quorum of the Senate is present. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. MARTIN resumed his speech.

Mr. POWER (at 12 o'clock and 8 minutes p. m., Thursday, October 12). Mr. President, I suggest the propriety of having a quorum present.

Mr. MARTIN. I should be glad to have my friend from Montana withdraw that until I can answer my friend from New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana having suggested the want of a quorum, the suggestion can not be withdrawn. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allison.	George.	McPherson.	Ransom.
Bate.	Gorman.	Manderson.	Roach.
Brice.	Gray.	Martin.	Sherman.
Blackburn.	Harris.	Murphy.	Smith.
Call.	Hawley.	Palmer.	Stockbridge.
Cameron.	Hill.	Pasco.	Vilas.
Carey.	Hobbes.	Peffer.	Walthall.
Cullum.	Hoar.	Perkins.	White, of La.
Davis.	Leage.	Proctor.
Dixon.	McMillan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-nine Senators having answered to their names, a quorum of the Senate is not present. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. McPHERSON. I move that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to request the presence of absent Senators.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sergeant-at-Arms will execute the order of the Senate.

Mr. GORDON, Mr. HILL, Mr. HOAR, and Mr. HUNTON entered the Chamber and responded to their names.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-three Senators having answered to their names, a quorum of the Senate is present.

Mr. HARRIS. I move that further proceedings under the call be dispensed with.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN resumed his speech.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada (at 12 o'clock and 21 minutes p. m., Thursday, October 12). I notice, sir, that there is not a quorum present. I ask for a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. I take it that that rule refers to proceedings in the body after it is organized, whilst I take it that the rule to which I have referred is a delegation of power for the purpose of organization and for every other purpose.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. Now, let me answer the question of the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. VILAS. Just permit me to suggest in answer to the Senator from West Virginia, that the twelfth rule, in providing that a Senator shall be required to assign his reasons for not voting, adds:

And any further proceedings in reference thereto shall be after such announcement.

The rule must take place before the announcement; but if there is a recalcitrant Senator who declines still to vote, further proceedings are to take place after the announcement of the result of the vote.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. Let me answer the question which the Senator from Nebraska asked the Senator from Florida. He asks would that bring a quorum. In my judgment it would bring a quorum, sir.

Mr. MANDEKSON. A voting quorum?

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. Yes, sir; it would bring a voting quorum. If upon the records of the Senate an entry is made that a Senator is present, but that he is contumacious and will not vote, though not excused, in my opinion that entry in the record or Journal of the Senate allows him to be counted for the purposes of a quorum, because what he is ordered to do and what he is compelled to do under the rules, he is considered as doing, and he can be counted for that purpose.

Mr. MANDEKSON. Still he does not vote.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. This is not the so-called Reed doctrine of counting a man because he is in the eye of the Speaker. That left the whole matter to the Speaker. I do not believe in it. When there is put upon the records of this body the declaration of the body that a Senator is here and that he is contumacious, he is violating his duty to this body; under these conditions I believe that the power exists in the Senate not only to count him as making a quorum, but also to open its doors and expel him if he does not perform his duty.

Sir, we have for days and days in this great body, upon which the eyes of the whole world have been turned in the past as the most exalted and the most dignified and the most responsible legislative body on the face of God's earth, witnessed scenes in it which, in my judgment, have made it an object of contempt to every civilized man and to every honest judgment. So far as I am concerned, I hope that this action to-night will initiate the first step to reach a point in which this great body, gathering its self-respect about it, will so deport itself as to save at least some of the honor and some of the character which has been its ornament for so many years. While it is sought to drag it down into the mire and dust, I hope it will so deport itself as to vindicate its duty. If gentlemen sit in this room and call attention to the absence of a quorum, and then remain silent on the roll called to ascertain whether there is a quorum, I hope there will be firmness and manhood here to visit that punishment which, in my judgment, such conduct deserves. If it be done, then, sir, those who use such methods will seek some other field for their display than this. If it be not done, the self-respect of this body is, in my judgment, gone.

Mr. MCPHERSON. It seems to me as though this proceeding and this discussion are altogether unnecessary and irregular.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey make the point that the discussion is not in order?

Mr. MCPHERSON. I have made the point that—
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I understand it is in order under Rule XX.

Mr. DOLPH. Is debate in order?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I understood the Chair to state that he would not rise on my point of order.

Mr. HARRIS. If the Senator has made the point of order that this discussion is out of order, I make the point of order that his discussion is out of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair sustains the point of order of the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I claim that the discussion here at this time of this question—

Mr. DOLPH and others. Order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from New Jersey—

Mr. MCPHERSON. Mr. President—

Mr. ALDRICH and Mr. HARRIS. Order.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I want to make an argument in addition—

Mr. HARRIS and others. Order.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair would like the attention of the Senate upon this question is determined. The discussion has taken a very wide range by unanimous consent. As soon as the point of order was made by the Senator from New Jersey that the discussion was not in order the point was sustained by the Chair. The Chair is not responsible for the rules. They have been adopted by the Senate for the government of the body. It is the duty of the Chair to interpret those rules; and he now calls attention to the second section of Rule V:

If, at any time during the daily session of the Senate, a question shall be raised by any Senator as to the presence of a quorum, the President shall forthwith direct the Secretary to call the roll and shall announce the result, and these proceedings shall be without debate.

The point has been made in the argument that upon the roll call it would be disclosed to the Senate whether a quorum had voted. The last roll call was upon the submission by the Chair to the Senate of the question whether it would permit the paper submitted by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] to be read at the desk. Upon that question there was a roll call. Before the announcement of the result the point was made by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] that the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] had not voted, upon which the Chair proceeded, under Rule XII, to submit to the Senator from Idaho whether he had any reasons to offer for not voting. His reasons were given before the Chair submitted the question whether the Senate would excuse the Senator from Idaho.

As the Chair was about to submit that question the point was made by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] that there is no quorum present. The rule to which the Chair has called attention, section 2 of Rule V, the Chair thinks clearly applies in this case, and it is the duty of the Chair to direct the Secretary to call the roll in order to ascertain whether there is a quorum present to vote upon the question, on which there has been no roll call. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Frye,	Lindsay,	Platt,
Allison,	Gallinger,	Lodge,	Quay,
Bate,	Gibson,	McMillan,	Roach,
Berry,	Gordon,	McPherson,	Smith,
Blackburn,	Gorman,	Manderson,	Squire,
Carver,	Gray,	Martin,	Vilas,
Cullom,	Harris,	McNeill, Wis.	Voorhees,
Daniel,	Hawley,	Murphy,	Walthall,
DeLoach,	Higgins,	Wagner,	Washington,
Dolph,	Hill,	Passer,	White, La.
Faulkner,	Huston,	Perkins,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. For three Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present. The pending question is, Shall the Senator from Idaho, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting?

Mr. ALLISON. Before that question is put to the Senate I desire to have my vote recorded upon the question first submitted. I reserved the right to vote if my vote should be necessary to make a quorum. If there is no objection I will record my vote.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The vote of the Senator from Iowa will be recorded, without objection.

Mr. ALLISON. I vote "yea."

Mr. GALLINGER (after having voted in the affirmative). On that same vote I will state that I voted inadvertently, being paired with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS], and I desire to withdraw my vote.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The last was simply a call to ascertain the presence of a quorum.

Mr. GALLINGER. But on the former vote I was recorded.

Mr. ALLISON. I am paired with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COKKRELL], but reserved a right to vote with a view to make a quorum, and therefore I vote, in accordance with my understanding with him.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair submits to the Senate the following question: Shall the Senator from Idaho, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting? [Putting the question.] The yeas appear to have it.

Mr. TELLER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. MANDEKSON. I ask whether one-fifth of the Senators present have seconded the demand for the yeas and nays?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks so.

Mr. TELLER. That is enough.

Mr. MANDEKSON. I ask the Chair whether in counting those who constituted the fifth he included Senators who are sent away as well as those who are present. I call attention to the constitutional provision that the yeas and nays can be demanded only on the call of one-fifth of those who are present, and I inquire whether on the last roll call which developed a quorum, gentlemen seconded the demand for the yeas and nays, who were then recorded as absent. Although they are bodily present they are not present within the meaning of the Constitution. They must be present and answer to their names as being present.

Mr. HILL. I do not think the Chair is obliged to answer that inquiry. The Senator has no right, it seems, to make an inquiry as to how or in what manner the Chair counted or estimated, or in any way he saw fit ascertained whether the sufficient number were present to second the demand for the yeas and nays.

Mr. MANDERSON. Let me interrupt the Senator to say that he misunderstands my position entirely. I am not reflecting upon the Chair; I am simply (as I think any Senator has a right to do) calling the attention of the Chair to that which was, perhaps, passed over for the moment; and that is, the constitutional provision requiring that those who second a demand for the yeas and nays must be present, and not absent, as these gentlemen declare they are.

Mr. HILL. The Chair has already decided that a sufficient number have seconded the demand for the purpose of having the roll called, and I think the only business for us to do now is to proceed with the roll call. I insist upon that, and raise the point of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair having decided that one-fifth of the Senators present seconded the demand for the yeas and nays, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALDRICH (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST]. Not being certain how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. ALLISON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. CAREY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRBY]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote.

Mr. DOLPH (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. If he were here I should vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS]. Not knowing how he would vote, I will withhold my vote.

Mr. GIBSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. STOCKBRIDGE]. Not knowing how he would vote, I feel constrained to withhold my vote.

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. I do not know how he would vote on this question if here. I should vote "nay" if the Senator from Vermont were present, but I withhold my vote.

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]. I transfer that pair to my colleague [Mr. STOCKBRIDGE], and vote "nay."

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH], but I can not think that a pair which applies to financial and monetary measures can possibly refer to a question which concerns the rights and duties of Senators. I vote "nay."

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN].

Mr. SMITH (when his name was called). As I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS], and not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. Although the pair may not extend to this question, unless necessary in order to make a quorum, I feel bound to withhold my vote.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana (when his name was called). May I inquire whether the name of the Senator from Montana [Mr. POWER] is recorded?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted, the Chair is advised.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. I have a general pair with that Senator, and would abstain from voting were it not for the fact that I see that Senator in his seat and he has declined to vote. I think, therefore, I am relieved from the obligations of my pair, and I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LODGE. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. HOAR] is paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH].

Mr. HIGGINS. I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES].

Mr. DUBOIS. Of course I do not question the right of any Senator to vote when paired if he sees fit. He must be the judge of his own pair. However, I have received this evening a telegram from the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. Perhaps the Senator from Illinois [Mr. PALMER] did not fully understand it, though I read it to him. I will read it again for his information.

Mr. PALMER. Do so, in the presence of the whole Senate. Read it.

Mr. DUBOIS. It is as follows:

ST. PAUL, MINN., October 13, 1905.

I am paired with Senator PALMER all about the lines, against a record and in favor of any reasonable compromise.

Mr. PALMER. I hope I will be allowed to make a statement. The pending question is as to the duty of the Senator from Idaho to submit to the rules of this body is not within the lines. I could not be understood to have paired with a Senator upon a question which involves the plain, palpable duty of the Senator from Idaho to submit to the rules of this body, and I take the distinct responsibility. It is not money nor financial; it is a question of obedience. I vote "nay."

The result was announced on the question whether Mr. DUBOIS shall be excused from voting—yeas 5, nays 24; as follows:

YEAS—5
Bates.	Barkins.	Rosch.	Walthall.
NAYS—24
Boyd.	Gordon.	Lindsay.	Murphy.
Callahan.	Gorman.	McMillan.	Palmer.
Daniel.	Gray.	McPherson.	Platt.
Davis.	Hawley.	Mohr.	Stewart.
Faulkner.	Hill.	Mitchell, Wis.	Washburn.
Frye.	Hunt.		White, La.

NOT VOTING—55.

Alfred.	Colquitt.	Jones, Nev.	Sherman.
Allen.	Davis.	Kyle.	Smith.
Almon.	Dolph.	McNitt.	Snigh.
Berry.	Dubois.	Mills.	Squire.
Callahan.	Gallinger.	Mitchell, Oregon.	Stewart.
Butler.	Graham.	Morgan.	Stockbridge.
Cameron.	Hale.	Morrill.	Teller.
Call.	Hale.	Peffer.	Turpie.
Campden.	Hansbrough.	Pettigrew.	Vance.
Cameron.	Harris.	Quay.	Vest.
Carey.	Hawley.	Quay.	White, Cal.
Chandler.	Hill.	Quay.	Wilson.
Cockrell.	Irby.	Quay.	Wilson.
Coke.	Jones, Ark.	Quay.	Wilson.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. No quorum has voted. Mr. GORMAN, Mr. HARRIS, and others. Let the roll be called.

The Secretary called the roll and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich.	Gallinger.	Lodge.	Rosch.
Allen.	Gray.	McPherson.	Smith.
Berry.	Gorman.	Mohr.	Squire.
Carey.	Hale.	Mitchell, Wis.	Vance.
Callahan.	Harris.	Morgan.	Voorhes.
Daniel.	Hawley.	Morrill.	Walthall.
Dixon.	Higgins.	Palmer.	Washburn.
Dubois.	Hill.	Perkins.	White, La.
Faulkner.	Hunt.	Platt.
Frye.	Lindsay.	Quay.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-one Senators have answered to their names. No quorum is present.

Mr. FAULKNER. I suggest that the names of the absentees be called.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the names of absent Senators.

Mr. HARRIS. I do not know exactly under what rule we should go through the ordeal of having the Secretary run over his list and call the names of those who fail to answer on a roll call and are absent. What object is there to be gained in running over the list to see who have failed to answer to their names?

Mr. FAULKNER. It is to furnish the evidence upon which a motion will be based to ask that the Senators whose names are requested as absent be requested by the Sergeant-at-Arms to attend. I desire to state that it has been the custom since I have been in the Senate, and I suppose it prevailed long before that time.

Mr. HARRIS. It has been very rarely done, so far as I know, in the sixteen years I have been here. The roll call shows who answered and who did not answer, and the information is wholly unnecessary so far as the question of any particular object is concerned. If motion suggested is made, the Sergeant-at-Arms will see where are absent from the roll call that has just taken place; and I do not quite approve of the idea of running over the list a second time to call the absentees.

Mr. FAULKNER. I simply desire to have what I have always considered the usage of the Senate carried out by a report of the absentees.

Mr. HARRIS. I object.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, this is not a matter of very great upon a pending bill, 10 Senators vote "yea" and 5 Senators vote "nay," and 50 Senators announce their pairs with 30 absent Senators. Would the Senator from New York think that it was proper that a bill and such circumstances should be regarded as having passed the Senate and become a law?

Mr. HILL. Upon the question as to the number of votes that the bill ought to receive I can see no reason why it should not. There is nothing in the Constitution which provides the exact number of votes a bill shall receive?

Mr. HARRIS. I have not presented a constitutional question, nor have I undertaken to discuss that phase of the matter; but certainly the case I have put might happen if the Senator's rule should be adopted. The question I put him is, if it should be adopted whether he thinks it would be wise or safe?

Mr. HILL. I do. If 30-did Senators in this body prefer to remain silent, as they do here at every single session of the Senate, and 13 Senators absolutely vote and there is no negative vote, why should not the bill be passed? I can see no reason. The Senators who are present have the right to vote; they are here; they can vote if they desire, and if no constitutional question is involved, of course 13 to nothing is the vote. I can see no reason against it.

Mr. CULLOM. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. VOOHREES. I decline to yield further in the interest of the pending business, if I am recognized by the Chair, as I understand I am. This is a profitable and a useful discussion, and I have listened to it with interest, but I conceive it to be my duty to move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 1.

Mr. DOLPH. Will the Senator not allow morning business to be presented?

Mr. VOOHREES. No.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business has not closed. The Senator from Indiana was recognized, and he has declined to yield further. The question is upon the motion of the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. VOOHREES. I thought the morning business was concluded.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business is not concluded.

Mr. VOOHREES. Then the discussion which has been proceeding was somewhat premature, I think. I yield for morning business, and for nothing else.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the discussion was by unanimous consent, a little inadvertence of the close of morning business.

Mr. VOOHREES. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, submitted by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

Mr. WOLCOTT. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I have no desire to change the order of business or in the slightest degree obstruct the orderly conduct of business which is desired by the Senator from Indiana, but I was under the impression that the resolution which has been under consideration was morning business. The Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] had given notice of a proposed amendment to the rules, and I had supposed that during the first two hours of the session of the Senate such morning business should be considered, and that the Senator from Indiana, unless by unanimous consent, could not obtrude the consideration of the measure which he has moved to take up.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Colorado that the discussion was without objection, and by unanimous consent.

Mr. BUTLER. The resolution was up by right.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Was not the resolution before the Senate by right? Was it not morning business?

Mr. BUTLER. It was morning business, and it had a perfect right to be proceeded with.

Mr. WOLCOTT. It was morning business; and I propose to read for the consideration of the President the following, under Rule VII:

Resolved, That the morning business shall have been continued, and so continued from the Chair, or until the hour of 1 o'clock has arrived, no motion to proceed to the consideration of any bill, resolution, report of a committee, or other subject upon the Calendar shall be entertained by the Presiding Officer unless by unanimous consent.

Until the hour of 2 o'clock arrives this business takes precedence of the bill which has been under consideration or anything else except by unanimous consent.

I had supposed that the resolution of the Senator from New York was legitimate morning business and that the discussion, instead of having taken place by unanimous consent, had taken place as a matter of right.

Mr. VOOHREES. I do not question the propriety of the resolution of the Senator from New York or his discussion of it. I thought myself it belonged to morning business, but I thought, on the conclusion of his remarks, that the morning business had been concluded. It seems that I was informed. I know that there is some morning business yet to be transacted, and I yield to it. I am holding the floor now and yielding to any Senator who has morning business to transact, but not to anything else. As soon as the morning business is concluded, I shall make the motion to proceed to the consideration of the regular order.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 2799) to provide for the time and place of holding the terms of the United States circuit and district courts in the State of South Dakota; and

A bill (H. R. 3545) to amend section numbered 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to mining claims.

The message also announced that the House requested the return of the joint resolution (S. R. 33) authorizing the Joint Committee on the Library to grant the privilege of drawing books from the Library to the chief justice and associate justices of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia.

USE OF LIBRARY FOR COURT OF APPEALS.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate at this time the House resolution asking for the return of a joint resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution from the House of Representatives; which will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate be requested to return to the House Senate joint resolution No. 33 authorizing the Joint Committee on the Library to grant the privilege of drawing books from the Library to the chief justice and associate justices of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask that an order be made that the joint resolution be returned to the House of Representatives, in accordance with its request.

Mr. HOAR. I inquire where that resolution is now?

Mr. HARRIS. It is in the custody of the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. I thought it had gone over to the House of Representatives.

Mr. HARRIS. No, it is here.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the order requested by the Senator from Tennessee? The Chair hears none, and the order is agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and are laid aside as indicated below:

A bill (H. R. 2799) to provide for the time and place of holding the terms of the United States circuit and district courts in the State of South Dakota; to the Committee on the Judiciary; and

A bill (H. R. 3545) to amend section numbered 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to mining claims—to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

ATTENDANCE OF ABSENT SENATORS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. DOLPH October 13, 1893, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be, and they are hereby, directed to inquire and report to the Senate, if possible at day 2 of each session, whether it is a violation of Rule V of the rules of the Senate, as amended, compliance with the requirements of section 5 of Article I of the Constitution as to the number in which the attendance of absent members may be dispensed, as authorized by the Senate, in a quorum of the Senate when such compliance is the attendance of absent members as a consequence of a direct loss to the Senate, and if not, then the attendance of absent members, as provided for in the Senate, under the provisions of Rule V, is sufficient warrant and authority to the Sergeant-at-Arms to enforce the same, if necessary, in the judgment of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, does that resolution contemplate committing that inquiry to the Judiciary Committee?

Mr. VOOHREES. I do not yield the floor for the purpose of discussing the resolution. I have already yielded the floor at all except for the transaction of morning business.

Mr. HOAR. I merely put a question for information as to what the resolution proposed.

Mr. VOOHREES. I will hear it, but I do not yield the floor.

Mr. DOLPH. The Senator yields for morning business, and this comes in as morning business as a matter of right.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Indiana that the resolution just reported is part of the morning business coming over from the previous day, and under the rules has been laid before the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. Am I entitled to have my question answered?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will hear the Senator.

Mr. HOAR. The question is, whether the resolution which has been read from the desk is a resolution committing that inquiry to the Judiciary Committee?

Mr. DOLPH. Yes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is so advised.

Mr. HALE. Let the resolution be again read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be again read.

The Secretary again read the resolution of Mr. DOLPH.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator who introduced that resolution, and I call it to the attention of the Senate, if it is the purpose to wipe out the Committee on Privileges and Elections altogether? The Judiciary Committee is crowded, loaded with business always. Is the constant complaint—not a just complaint, but one sometimes having very plausible reasons for being made—that the Judiciary Committee is the tomb of subjects committed to it, because that committee can not reach them in time.

I can speak impartially on this matter. I am the senior member of both those committees. I have been myself chairman of both those committees, and I suppose there is no impropriety in saying that the Committee on Privileges and Elections, as now constituted, is made up of as able men—I except myself—and of men as fit to deal with the great and important subjects of the privileges of the Senate and of elections as any committee of this body, the Judiciary Committee not excepted.

Mr. CULLOM. And three or four members of one committee are on the other.

Mr. HOAR. The chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary [Mr. PEPPER] is on the Committee on Privileges and Elections; the colleague of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] is on the Committee on Privileges and Elections; the colleague of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], who is absent from the body, I may say, disagreeing with him, as I do on so many points, is one of the most accomplished jurists and constitutional lawyers in this country. He is a member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections. The Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY], who was prominently spoken of at one time for the great office of Chief Justice of the United States, is on that committee. I do not see, for one, why it should be wiped out of existence by referring these subjects to any other committee.

Mr. DOLPH. I did not suppose the subject pertained to the Committee on Privileges and Elections; but I shall modify my resolution by inserting "the Committee on Privileges and Elections" in place of the words "the Senate or the Judiciary," as the Senator takes exception to it as it stands.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be so modified. The question is upon agreeing to the resolution as modified. The resolution as modified was agreed to.

PURCHASE OF SILVER BULLION.

Mr. VOORHEES. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 1.

Mr. MANDERSON. Has morning business closed?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed.

Mr. MANDERSON. I should like to ask what became of the resolution for the proposed change of the rules submitted by the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL]. I suggest that it be referred to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. VOORHEES. The resolution will go over. Perhaps somebody may want to say something about it. It can be called up again. I now renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 1.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of an act approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes," the pending question being on the substitute reported by the Committee on Finance.

Mr. PERKINS. With the permission of the Senator from Indiana, I should like to offer an amendment. I shall ask but a moment. I believe it comes under the head of motions and resolutions.

Mr. VOORHEES. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. PERKINS. A few days since I gave notice of my intention at the proper time to offer an amendment to House bill No. 1. With the permission of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN], I have taken from their proposed amendments two sections and add them to my intended amendment. I ask that the amendment may be printed for the information of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from California will be printed, in the absence of objection.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas will suspend for a moment. The Chair would like the attention of the Senate.

At the time of the adjournment last evening the Senate was dividing upon a question submitted by the Chair to the Senate. Shall the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS], for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting? Upon a roll call the fact was disclosed that no quorum was present. The Chair again submits to the Senate the question upon which there was a roll call, Shall the Senator from Idaho, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting? The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. PEPPER. Before that is done I wish to interpose a request for unanimous consent with reference to this matter. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES] wishes to submit some remarks to the Senate upon the pending bill, but on account of the poor condition of the Senator's health he is not able to endure the strain of a long-continued effort. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the proceedings pending at the hour of adjournment yesterday may be temporarily laid aside, in order that I may yield the floor to the Senator from Nevada for a short time and resume when he shall desire to suspend his remarks, if there be no objection.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. FAULKNER. I feel it to be my duty to object to the request. There will be no debate on the pending question and can be none. It will only take a few minutes to call the roll.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection, and the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. I do not know how he would vote on this question if present, and therefore I withhold my vote.

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). On the question before the Senate yesterday evening I voted "aye." There is some doubt as to whether my pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. JENNETT] agrees on this question; but to avoid all possible mistake I withhold my vote.

Mr. SMITH (when his name was called). Having changed my pair from the junior Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] to the junior Senator from Kansas [Mr. MARTIN], I feel at liberty to now vote on this question. I vote "nay."

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL], as announced last night. With my vote it is necessary in order to make a quorum, I shall withhold my vote. I should vote "nay" on this question if not paired.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DANIEL (after having voted in the affirmative). Before the result is announced I beg to state that I am paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE]. I had not observed that he was not present when I voted, and unless some Senator knows how he would vote I shall withdraw my vote.

Mr. TELLER. I am informed by Senators who sit about me—though I have not looked at the RECORD to verify it—that the Senator from Washington on a former vote precisely of the same character voted "yea."

Mr. DANIEL. Then, I think I am justified in voting, and I shall allow my vote to stand.

The result was announced—yeas 29, nays 37; as follows:

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Idaho is not excused.

The Chair will now announce the result of the vote on the question, "Shall the paper submitted by the Senator from Kansas be read at the Secretary's desk?"

Mr. GRAY. I rise to a question of order. After the announcement of the result of the vote should not the name of the Senator from Idaho be called to give him an opportunity to conform to the decision of the Senate?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The name of the Senator from Idaho will be called.

The Secretary called the name of Mr. DUBOIS, to which there was no response.

Mr. HOAR. Has the result of the vote been announced?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has not.

Mr. HOAR. I ask if I am recorded as voting?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Upon which vote?

Mr. HOAR. On the vote the Chair is about to announce.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The vote has not been announced. The Chair will state to the Senators that this is the vote upon which there was a roll call last evening.

Mr. HOAR. I desire that my name be called so that I may vote.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The name of the Senator from Massachusetts will be called.

The Secretary called the name of Mr. HOAR.

Mr. HOAR. I vote "nay."

Mr. HALE. I desire to vote.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The name of the Senator from Maine will be called.

The Secretary called the name of Mr. HALE.

Mr. HALE. I vote "nay."

Mr. ALDRICH. I ask that my name be called.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The name of the Senator from Rhode Island will be called.

The Secretary called the name of Mr. ALDRICH.

Mr. ALDRICH. I vote "nay."

Mr. VANCE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I wish to know if it is in order for Senators to be permitted to vote after the announcement of the result without unanimous consent?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has not announced the result of the vote, the Chair will state to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. VANCE. The Chair announced the vote, and said the Senator from Idaho was not excused.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair so announced. The Chair will now announce the result of the vote upon which Senators have just voted.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I merely rise to say to the Senator from North Carolina that my request was to have my name called that I might vote. I claim it was my right to vote on the main question, the result of the vote not having been declared.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has not announced the result of that vote. The Chair will—

Mr. BUTLER. What is the vote?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The vote, the Chair will announce, is upon the motion that the paper sent to the Secretary's desk by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] should be read. Upon that the yeas are 18 and the nays are 22.

The yeas and nays are as follows:

YEAS—18.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. No quorum has voted. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Faulkner,	Kyle,	Pugh,
Allen,	Frye,	Lindsay,	Quay,
Almon,	Gallinger,	Madison,	Ransom,

Dolph,	Jones, Nev.	Proctor,	Wolcott,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Seventy-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. Upon the question whether the paper sent to the desk shall be read, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Chair state whether the paper sent to the desk is a public document?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that it is a public document. The question now submitted to the Senate is whether it shall be read at the desk.

Mr. BUTLER. I was not present when the question was raised last night as to the right to read the paper at the desk, and in order to vote intelligently upon it some idea ought to be given as to the contents of the paper. It is important that that should be stated in order that we may vote intelligently.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The paper will be read by title for the information of the Senate.

Mr. BUTLER. I ask that the paper may be read, in order that we may vote intelligently on the question.

Mr. GORMAN. I suggest that under the rule it is impossible to have the paper read. That is the question the Senate is now to determine. The rule requires that when a Senator presents a paper and asks that it shall be read, if a question is raised the Senate must determine whether the paper shall be read or not, and it can not be read until after a vote of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has directed the paper to be read by its title, for the information of the Senate.

Mr. BUTLER. I should like for the Senator from Maryland to point out that rule. I do not know much about the rules, but—

Mr. FAULKNER. I rise to a point of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from West Virginia will state his point of order.

Mr. FAULKNER. My point of order is, that the question before the Senate is not debatable.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. BUTLER. I rise then to a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina will state it.

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator can not cut me off from making a parliamentary inquiry which is necessary for the intelligent action of this body.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina will state his inquiry.

Mr. BUTLER. The inquiry is, what is in the paper?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read it by title.

Mr. BUTLER. If it is not read by the Secretary I will read it from my desk. I suppose I have that right, if I am to be cut off in this way.

The Secretary read as follows:

Mr. VEST submitted the following memorial of the national convention of the representatives of the commercial bodies of the United States calling attention to the present depressed financial conditions, and the consequent depression of the cotton trade, the progress of the "barren" and the consequent perishing of the cotton trade, and the consequent perishing of the cotton trade.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair submits the question under the rule whether the document, the title of which has been read, shall be read at length at the desk. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL], and withhold my vote. I should vote "nay" if he were present.

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—YEAS 39, NAYS 30; as follows:

YEAS—39.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the paper as requested.

The Secretary proceeded to read the memorial.

Mr. PEPPER. I object to the reading may be suspended for the present that I may renew the request I made a little while ago.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. HOWARD. There is no objection.

Mr. FAULKNER. As the Secretary has started in with the reading I think it had better proceed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection. The Secretary will continue the reading.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the memorial.

[The memorial appears in Mr. PEPPER'S speech. See Appendix.]

Mr. ALLISON. I submit that it is not necessary to read the names appended to the memorial.

Mr. PEPPER. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection the names will be omitted.

Mr. PEPPER. I wish now to renew my request for unanimous consent that I may yield the floor temporarily to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES], and that I may be permitted to resume the floor whenever the Senator is ready to suspend his remarks.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, such requests have been made repeatedly of late, and I think the Senate ought to put a stop to the practice. The Senator from Kansas can yield to the Senator from Nevada with propriety whenever he chooses, but he can not retain the floor; it is against the rules and usages of the Senate. He can not hold the floor and give it to another Senator; he might in that case resume it and at once give it to some other Senator and thus hold the floor.

I therefore object. I have no objection to his yielding to the Senator from Nevada, but he must yield the floor absolutely. He can not hold the floor and yield it at the same time.

Mr. JONES of Nevada. I refuse to accept the floor on any such conditions.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to the Senator from Nevada going on.

Mr. JONES of Nevada. The Senator from Kansas has been kind enough to agree to yield me the floor, and I do not propose to deprive him of his right to resume it. He is now quite ready to go on with his speech.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not wish to be discourteous toward anyone, but I am merely speaking for the good of the Senate. I have no objection to the Senator from Kansas going on; he can resume the floor to-day, after the Senator from Nevada concludes; but he must stand on the footing of all other Senators. If he yields now, no doubt with great propriety, after the Senator from Nevada has concluded, he will resume his remarks.

Mr. JONES of Nevada. I will not take the Senator from Kansas off the floor.

Mr. TELLER. I wish to ask the Senator from Ohio a question. Will he object to the Senator from Kansas proceeding after the Senator from Nevada has concluded?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly not. I would not do that at all, if he wishes to take the floor then; and if no one else gets the floor he ought to have it; but there ought to be no parceling out of the floor in this way. I suppose the Senator from Kansas will no doubt be able to get the floor at almost any time. No one will probably compete with him for the floor.

Mr. TELLER. I think the Senator from Ohio is entirely correct. It never has been the practice here to allow a Senator to yield the floor and then resume it, except for a brief colloquy of something of that kind; that is, he has no right to retain it. If he yields for a speech he has lost his right to it; and if any other Senator chooses to take the floor when the Senator who was allowed to go on concludes he can do so upon being recognized by the Chair. I think the Senator from Kansas will have no trouble in getting the floor afterwards; and I hope he will yield now and allow the Senator from Nevada to go on.

Mr. PEPPER. It was my desire, and is now, that the Senator from Nevada shall be permitted to proceed with his remarks whenever he is ready, but I felt some anxiety to conclude my own speech to-day if it could be done conveniently. Therefore, I thought it would be well in advance, in order to save trouble in the future, to obtain the consent of the Senate. But I now withdraw the request for consent and yield the floor to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. JONES of Nevada addressed the Senate. After having spoken for nearly four hours,

Mr. VOORHEES said: Will the Senator from Nevada yield to me?

Mr. JONES of Nevada. Certainly.

Mr. VOORHEES. First, I desire to congratulate the Senator from Nevada upon his splendid contribution to the literature of this great debate to-day afternoon. The charm of what he has said has been enhanced by the personal affection all the members of this body bear to him. I desire to ask him whether it would be agreeable for him to yield at this time for a motion to adjourn?

Mr. JONES of Nevada. Perfectly. I am very tired. I would consider it a favor.

Mr. VOORHEES. I suppose the Senator is tired, for he and I are neither of us as young as we were when we met here a quarter of a century ago.

Mr. President, in the last seventy-seven hours this body has been in session fifty-eight hours and we have been discharging a great public duty. With the concurrence of, and upon consultation with, the friends of the pending measure I have a motion to make at this hour. Before I do so, however, I desire to correct any misapprehension which may prevail in some minds, and there are very eager minds in certain directions just at this time.

I remember reading once with great interest an account of the battle of the first commodore of the American Navy, John Paul Jones, off the coast of Scotland by moonlight—the Serapis and its ally. When the British commander asked him whether he surrendered he said in reply, "I have only begun to fight." Now, if there is anybody who thinks the friends and advocates of the pending bill have surrendered or have it in contemplation to surrender, I desire to answer in the language of that immortal hero of the salt seas, we have only begun to fight.

With that, Mr. President, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 6 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, October 16, 1893, at 11 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SAURDAY, October 14, 1893.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. ISAAC W. CANTER, of Washington, D. C.

THE JOURNAL.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Shall the Journal as read be approved.

Mr. MORAÉ. On that question I would like to have the decision of the Chair on the point of order should it be a public claim to public lands, or should it be simply a private bill, the private claim to public lands. There is no controversy between the gentleman who made the point of order and myself that if the bill were strictly a private bill the point of order would be good; but it is a private claim to public lands.

The SPEAKER. Of course the Journal as read should be approved, because it states correctly what was done yesterday. The Chair does not desire to go any further into the question, with the privilege of changing his ruling if he should on examination find he ought to have ruled otherwise. It is often very difficult to determine between a public and a private bill. The Chair made some examination of the matter yesterday afternoon, but was not entirely satisfied about the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-five Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The Secretary will call the roll on the motion of the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. VORHEES. I desire to ask whether it is beyond my power to withdraw that motion?

Mr. DUBOIS and Mr. TELLER. I object.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would rule that the motion can only be withdrawn by unanimous consent.

Mr. TELLER. I object.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is objection made. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. VORHEES said: Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.
Mr. VORHEES. Early in the evening I announced that I would ask the Senate to remain in session until 10 o'clock. It has done so. I now redeem my word by moving that the Senate adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana moves that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 10 o'clock p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, October 17, 1893, at 11 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, October 16, 1893.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. ISAAC W. CANTER, of Washington, D. C.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday was read and approved.

INFORMATION RELATING TO PENSIONS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to House resolution of the 11th instant, information relating to the act granting pensions to soldiers and sailors who are incapacitated for manual labor; which was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. GILLET of Massachusetts, on account of illness; To Mr. BURN, for two weeks, on account of important business. To Mr. HENDERSON of Iowa, indefinitely, on account of important business.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. BOWERS of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege, and ask to have read by the Clerk the newspaper extract which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

The statement of the following is published in the San Francisco Chronicle, and you will see by the nature of the statement, that it is a statement of the teaching of the Church of Jesus Christ, and is a statement of the treatment of those who are not in full communion with the Church.

Mr. BOWERS of California. Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to say to the House, in justice to myself, that I would not have called any attention to this misrepresentation but for the fact that I have received letters, one from New York, showing that the statement published in the Washington Post, which is generally a very fair paper, has been sent throughout the land by the Associated Press.

I do not charge that that report was made maliciously. I think of the so-called Gentry Chinese law; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Duluth, Minn., praying for the repeal of the silver-purchasing clause of the so-called Sherman law; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BATE presented resolutions adopted at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of Knoxville, Tenn., indorsing personally the Senators from that State, but differing with them as to their course on the Sherman law, as heretofore expressed when the board asked for the prompt and unconditional repeal of that law; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of citizens of Hamblen County, Tenn., remonstrating against the unconditional repeal of the so-called Sherman silver law; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. McMILLAN presented a petition of the Council of Trades and Labor Union of Detroit, Mich., praying for the enactment of legislation enabling the Government to obtain control of the telegraph system in connection with the Post-Office Department; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 655) to open certain parts of the Fort Julia military reservation in the State of Florida, to entry under the homestead laws, reported it without amendment.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 339) to authorize the Chattanooga Western Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee River near Chattanooga, reported it with amendments.

HEARINGS BEFORE WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask unanimous consent to submit a report from the Committee on Printing.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection, and the report will be received.

Mr. GORMAN. I am directed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives to print 2,000 copies of the hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means, to report it with amendments, and I ask for its present consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read and the amendments stated.

The concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Public Printer be, and he is hereby, authorized to print 2,000 copies of the hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means, for the use of the House.

The amendments of the Committee on Printing were, in line 4, before the word "thousand," to strike out "two" and insert "four"; in line 6, after the words "Ways and Means," to insert "2,000 copies," and at the end of the resolution to add "and 2,000 copies for the use of the Senate;" so as to make the concurrent resolution read:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Public Printer be, and he is hereby, authorized to print 4,000 copies of the hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means, 2,000 copies for the use of the House and 2,000 copies for the use of the Senate.

The amendments were agreed to.

The concurrent resolution as amended was agreed to.

Mr. STEWART. My colleague yields to me that I may give notice of a modified amendment with regard to the Pan-American Bimetallic Conference, which I ask to have read, printed, and laid on the table. I shall offer it to the bill at the proper time, and should like to make some remarks upon it.

The amendment was read, and ordered to lie on the table and to be printed as follows:

Amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. STEWART to the bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of an act, approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes," viz, after the following section:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from West Virginia.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock p. m., Monday, October 23) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Tuesday, October 24, 1893, at 10 o'clock and 30 minutes a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, October 23, 1893.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. ISAAC W. CANTER, of Washington, D. C.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday was read and approved.

J. H. AND J. B. ABINGTON VS. THE UNITED STATES.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a copy of the finding of the Court of Claims in the case of J. H. and J. B. Abington, administrators, vs. The United States; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims.

CERTAIN PROPERTY OF THE MORMON CHURCH.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a joint resolution (H. Res. 34) providing for the disposition of certain property and money now in the hands of a receiver of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, appointed by the supreme court of Utah, and authorizing its application to the charitable purposes of said church, with amendments of the Senate thereto.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 10 after "thereof," insert: "That is to say, for the payment of the debts for which said church is legally or equitably liable, for the relief of the poor and distressed members of said church, for the education of the children of said members, and for the building and repair of houses of worship for the use of said church, but in which the rightfulness of the practice of polygamy shall not be indicated."

Page 2, line 4 after "church," insert "as aforesaid."

Mr. RAWLINS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. SAYERS. I hope, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman will explain the nature of the amendments.

Mr. RAWLINS. The original joint resolution provided that this personal property should be restored, to be applied to the charitable purposes of the church generally. The Senate amendment simply provides that it shall be applied to certain charitable purposes, that is to say, the payment of the debts for which the church is legally or equitably liable, the relief of poor and distressed members, the education of the children of such members, and the building and repair of houses of worship, provided that the rightfulness of the practice of polygamy shall not be inculcated in such places of worship. It does not change the substance of the original joint resolution as it passed the House, and therefore of the bill as it came out of the House.

Mr. DINGLEY. The Senate amendment simply directs the distribution of this fund?

Mr. RAWLINS. That is all.

Mr. RAY. And the purposes enumerated in the amendment are the purposes contemplated by the original joint resolution?

Mr. RAWLINS. Yes, sir. It conforms to the intention of those whose labor created the money and who gave it to the church to be dispensed under the direction of the leaders of the church for charitable purposes. The amendment specifies the purposes as I have recited them, and simply carries out the original intention. This property belongs to charity and was intended for the identical charitable purposes to which it is now proposed to be applied. The joint resolution carries into effect the intent of those who gave the money, while it does not permit it to be used for any unlawful purpose. The money is now being wasted in litigation.

Mr. REED. What is the amount involved?

Mr. RAWLINS. It was $237,000 a while ago. I do not know exactly what the amount is now.

Mr. REED. A deserving profession has got some of it, I suppose. [Laughter.]

Mr. RAWLINS. Yes, sir. I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

The Mr. RAWLINS moved to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendments to the joint resolution were concurred in, and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. COOPER of Texas, for the week, on account of important business.

To Mr. COCKER, for ten days, on account of important business.

To Mr. FICKNER, for two weeks, on account of urgent business.

To Mr. MONROE, for one week, on account of important business.

To Mr. COFFEEN, indefinitely, on account of important business.

VACANCY IN THE COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES.

The SPEAKER. The Chair announces the appointment of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. FENCE] to fill a vacancy on the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I wish to know whether the first thing in order is not the bill which came over from Saturday afternoon with the previous question ordered upon it?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. HEARD. I ask the gentleman from Tennessee to withhold his demand for the regular order for a moment.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Very well.

Mr. HEARD. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the bill which I send to the desk (H. R. 913) for the relief of Louis L. Williams.

The bill was read.

Mr. HEARD. I can explain the object of this bill in two min-

By Mr. REED: Petition of 61 citizens of the district of Kennebec, Maine, for an appropriation adequate to remove the accumulation of deposit in the harbor of Cape Porpoise, Me.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. TERRY: Petition of Little Rock Typographical Union No. 32, in favor of the erection of public buildings by day labor instead of by contract—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, report of the Arkansas River Commission—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. WILSON of Washington: Petitions of 44 citizens of Spokane County; of 62 citizens of Palouse, Whitman County; of 70 citizens of Kalama; of 28 citizens of Coulee precinct, Lincoln County; of 25 citizens of Okanogan County; of 30 citizens of Garfield County; of 14 citizens of St. Paul; of 22 citizens of Dragoon; of 19 citizens of Whitman County; of 60 citizens of Clark County; of 46 citizens of Chillum, Okanogan County; and of 21 citizens of Harmony; all of the State of Washington, in opposition to the repeal of the Sherman act, unless said repeal shall provide for the continued coinage of silver on terms more favorable to silver—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, October 24, 1893.

[Continuation of legislative proceedings of Tuesday, October 17, 1893.]

The Senate met at 10 o'clock and 30 minutes, a. m., at the expiration of the recess.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate resumes its session. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, being House bill No. 1, which will be read by title.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of an act, approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes."

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I suggest the lack of a quorum. The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Fryo,	Mitchell, Wis.	Stetehilde.
Bate,	Gallinger,	Pasco,	Teller.
Berry,	George,	Petier,	Turpie.
Burnburn,	Gordon,	Perkins,	Vance.
Coke,	Iroy,	Vilas,
Cullum,	Kyle,	Ransom,	Voorhees.
Davis,	McPherson,	Sherman,	Walthall.

Mr. DIXON. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] is detained from his place here by reason of sickness in his family.

Mr. GALLINGER. I hold in my hand a telegram from the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY], stating that he is unavoidably absent from the Senate to-day, and is paired with the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRBY].

Mr. GULLOM. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] is absent from the city, and stands paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL].

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Thirty-six Senators have answered to their names. There is no quorum present. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

After a little delay, Mr. MURPHY, Mr. SMITH, Mr. BUTLER, Mr. McMILLAN, Mr. GORMAN, Mr. LINDSAY, and Mr. CALL entered the Chamber, and answered to their names.

The VICE-PRESIDENT (at 10 o'clock and 45 minutes a. m.). Forty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. BERRY. Will the Senator from Nevada yield to me to submit a report from a committee.

Mr. STEWART. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE.

Mr. BERRY, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1980) to amend section 9 of the act approved March 3, 1891, entitled "An act to repeal timber-counting laws, and for other purposes," reported it without amendment.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. DAVIS presented resolutions adopted at a mass meeting of citizens of Duluth, Minn., favoring the repeal of the silver-purchasing clause of the so-called Sherman law; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of George R. Merrill and other citizens of Minneapolis, Minn., and the petition of Cyrus Northrup and others of the faculty of the University of Minnesota, praying for the repeal of the so-called Geary Chinese law; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. CAMERON presented a memorial of citizens of Roscoe, Pa., and two memorials of sundry citizens of Pennsylvania, remonstrating against the unconditional repeal of the silver-purchasing clause of the so-called Sherman law; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BRICE presented petitions of the Cincinnati Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, assembled at Troy, Ohio, August 30, 1893; of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society of Cincinnati, Ohio; of David Morvov, of Oakland, Cal., praying for the repeal of the so-called Geary Chinese law; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented petitions of John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register Company, of Dayton, Ohio; of the Board of Trade of Massillon, Ohio; of the Commercial Club of Cincinnati, Ohio; of the Bimetallist League of Canton, Ohio, and of the Stock Exchange of Cincinnati, Ohio, praying for the speedy repeal of the so-called Sherman silver law; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of 38 citizens of Morgan County, Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the freer and more extended use of silver as money of ultimate redemption and thereby check the continued contraction of the currency, which has been, and is now, sinking the free labor of our land deeper and deeper into the mire of enforced idleness, penury, and despair; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of Mayflower Assembly, No. 469, Knights of Labor, of Zanesville, Ohio, praying for equal recognition of silver with gold in coinage at the United States mints, that the ratio of 16 to 1 be maintained, and remonstrating against the repeal of the so-called Sherman silver law unless some provision be made for the free and unlimited coinage of silver; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of the Board of Trade of Gallipolis; of the Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati; of the Ohio Association of Productive Industries; of the Manufacturers' Association of Cincinnati; of the Freight Bureau of Cincinnati; of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Cincinnati; and of the Commercial Club of Cincinnati, all in the State of Ohio, praying that their representatives in Congress use their best efforts to secure prompt action on the repeal bill now pending in the Senate; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of Hamer Grange, No. 451, Patrons of Husbandry, of Georgetown, Ohio, remonstrating against the repeal of the so-called Sherman silver law, unless coupled with a provision restoring the free coinage of both gold and silver as it existed prior to the passage of the act of 1873; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. QUAY presented a petition of citizens of Wayne, Pa., praying for the unconditional repeal of the so-called Sherman silver law; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Union League of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for the resumption of specie payments, the maintenance of a currency which, whether in gold, silver, or notes, shall be of equal purchasing power, and for the prompt repeal of the silver-purchasing clause of the so-called Sherman law; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. QUAY. I have received a letter from Henry C. Dingee, a prominent business man of the city of Philadelphia, who was a signer of a memorial of the members of the Manufacturers' Club of Philadelphia in relation to tariff and financial legislation, suggesting several practical measures. The memorial was presented by my colleague [Mr. CAMERON] in my absence, and I do not remember its contents exactly. Mr. Dingee writes saying that he desires to withdraw his signature, having since he signed the memorial come to the conclusion that the only solution of the present financial difficulty is the unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act. I know no method by which he can withdraw his signature, but perhaps the statement I make will answer his purpose.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BUTLER introduced a bill (S. 1124) for the relief of aged and infirm colored people; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. BUTLER. I desire to state that I introduced this bill as a substitute for the joint resolution I introduced some time ago on the same subject. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BRICE introduced a bill (S. 1125) to provide for the erection of a public building in the city of East Liverpool, Ohio; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

PURCHASE OF SILVER BULLION.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of an act approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes," the pending question being on the amendment proposed by Mr. PEPPER to the substitute reported by the Committee on Finance.

Mr. STEWART addressed the Senate in continuation of the speech begun by him yesterday. After having spoken for half an hour—

Mr. POWER. Mr. President, it seems to me there is no quorum here.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. STEWART. For what purpose?

Mr. POWER. For the purpose of ascertaining the presence of a quorum.

Mr. STEWART. I think we ought to have a quorum here, because I have a good many important things to say. It would please me to say them to a full Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, the rule prescribes that any member of the Senate may raise the question of the presence of a quorum, but that question is not raised by the Senator. He says "we ought to have a quorum here."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the rule.

Mr. TURPIE. It is not raised by the Senators saying "I raise the question of a quorum."

Mr. POWER. I raise the question that there is no quorum present, and will state—

Mr. TELLER. Let the rule be read.

Mr. TURPIE. The moment in raising the question of a quorum ought to contain the facts upon which the subsequent proceedings are to be based. It may lead to the arrest of a Senator. It ought to contain a statement of facts in themselves sufficient to disclose the absence of a majority of the members of the Senate and the presence of only a minority.

I have heard several times the attempt made to raise the question of the presence of a quorum on the other side of the Chamber. I have never heard it raised except once or twice in the proper manner. I have heard the phrase used, "Mr. President, I call a quorum," or "Mr. President, I call for a quorum." That certainly does not raise the question. I have heard it said there are not 43 members here. That certainly does not raise the question. There might be 80. I have heard the question of a quorum raised by persons who had the charge of public business, and whose duty it was to do it, and I have always heard it raised by a statement of facts which excluded the possibility of there being a majority present, and which in itself implied the absence of such majority. These facts were not a mere conclusion of law. They did not embody the language of the rule. It is not my purpose now to state what the language should be. There is no form requisite, but whatever the formula may be, it ought to include a statement of the facts upon which the call is founded. A request for the attendance of absentees on which a direction to compel the attendance of the absent is founded is a statement of facts giving jurisdiction to this body upon it, and clearly showing the absence of the requisite number that constitute a quorum.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the rule.

The SECRETARY. Rule V, section 2, is as follows:

If, at any time during the session of the Senate, a question shall be raised by any Senator as to the presence of a quorum, the Presiding Officer shall forthwith direct the Secretary to call the roll and shall announce the result, and these proceedings shall be without debate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will inquire of the Senator from Montana what his statement was?

Mr. POWER. I stated that there is no quorum present. I counted the Senators present and found only 27 in the Chamber; so I called for a quorum.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Race,	Frye,	McPherson,
Berry,	Gallinger,	Shoup,
Blackburn,	George,	Smith,
Frye,	Gray,	Stewart,
Hatch,	Palmer,	Stevenson,
Call,	Higgins,	Peffer,

Cole,	Boast,	Vilas,
Cullom,	Huntton,	Proctor,
Davis,	Kyle,	Walshall,
Dixon,	Lindsay,	White, La.
Faulkner,	McMillan,	Sherman,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Senator from Nevada will proceed.

Mr. KYLE. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. STEWART. I do.

Mr. KYLE. I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet to-morrow at 12 o'clock.

Mr. VOORHEES. I hope that motion—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the Senator from Nevada has yielded to the Senator from South Dakota, who moves that when the Senate adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet to-morrow at 12 o'clock.

Mr. VOORHEES. I hope that motion will not prevail.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion is not open to debate. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. KYLE. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

Mr. HIGGINS (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER. I again announce that I have received a telegram from the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY], stating that he is unavoidably detained from the Senate to-day, and is paired with the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRBY].

Mr. FRYE. The senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] is paired generally with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. MURPHY], but on House bill No. 1 and all incidental motions he is paired with the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. Mr. Hargrave [Mr. Hargrave] is paired generally with the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM], and on House bill No. 1 and incidental motions he is paired with the senior Senator from California [Mr. WHITE].

TENNESSEE RIVER BRIDGE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] is entitled to the floor on the unfinished business.

Mr. BATE. The Senator from Nevada consents that I may call up a bill which it is necessary to have passed at once. It is merely a bill for a bridge across the Tennessee River.
Mr. STEWART. I have no objection, if I do not lose my right to the floor.

Mr. CULLOM. We do not hear the Senator from Tennessee on this side.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Tennessee will please state again his request.

Mr. BATE. It is a bill where a charter has been granted by the State of Tennessee to the Chattanooga Western Railway Company to put a bridge across the Tennessee River, a navigable stream, and the company asks the consent of the Government. There is no objection to the bill, and it will not take any time, except that there are some amendments reported from the Committee on Commerce. It will involve no discussion whatever, and I ask that the bill be put on its passage.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee?

By unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 339) to authorize the Chattanooga Western Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee River near Chattanooga.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was in section 2, line 11, after the word "telegraph," to insert "and telephone;" so as to read:

And equal privileges in the use of said bridge shall be granted to all telegraph and telephone companies.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 2, line 19, after the word "and," to insert "whatever kind of bridge is constructed;" so as to read:

And whatever kind of bridge is constructed said corporation shall maintain, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 3, line 4, after the word "thereto," to strike out the following words:

Upon the payment of their proportion of maintenance, operation, and interest on investment from the date upon which said railway companies began to use the same, and over the approaches thereto, upon such basis or arrangement as may be agreed upon by and between such companies and the Chattanooga Western Railway Company.

So as to read:

That all railroad companies desiring the use of said bridge shall have, and be entitled to, equal rights and privileges relative to the passage of railway trains over the same, and over the approaches thereto, upon such basis or arrangement as may be agreed upon by and between such companies and the Chattanooga Western Railway Company.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VEST. In section 5, at the end of line 21, I move to insert the words "the location or construction of;" so as to read:

And if any litigation shall be had in regard to the location or construction of said bridge, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 9) to transfer the Morris Island life-saving station, near Charleston, S. C., to Sullivan Island; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

PURCHASE OF SILVER BULLION.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of an act approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes."

Mr. STEWART resumed the floor. After having spoken an hour and a quarter, he said: I ask unanimous consent that I may be allowed to finish my speech hereafter, and that my colleague [Mr. JONES of Nevada], who is not feeling well, may be allowed to occupy a portion of the time now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada? The Chair hears none.

Mr. JONES of Nevada addressed the Senate in continuation of the speech begun by him on the 14th instant. After having spoken over two hours and a half, he said:

Mr. President, I will now give way to my colleague [Mr. STEWART], who yielded the floor to me that I might proceed, and I shall ask the indulgence of the Senate to conclude my remarks at another time, perhaps to-morrow.

I also wish to again state that it is not the intention of any one connected with this discussion to prolong it any more than is necessary to give his views fully to the Senate and to the people of the country.

Mr. FAULKNER. Being satisfied that the remarks of the Senator from Nevada correctly state the position of those who are opposed to the pending bill, I move that the Senate now take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from West Virginia.

The motion was agreed to; and at 3 o'clock and 57 minutes p. m., Tuesday, October 24, the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Wednesday, October 25, 1893, at 11 o'clock, a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, October 24, 1893.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. ISAAC W. CANTER, of Washington, D. C.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES.

Mr. FITZHIAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries have leave to sit during the sessions of the House.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection that order will be made.

There was no objection.

D. R. McNEILL.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a communication from the Court of Claims transmitting copy of the findings of the court in the case of D. R. McNeill vs. The United States; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims.

LAND DISTRICTS, CALIFORNIA.

Mr. CAMINETTI. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution, which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The joint resolution will be read, subject to objection.

The joint resolution was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. DOCKERY. I do not see any special objection to the resolution; but is there any necessity for it? The Secretary of the Interior has now the authority to consolidate or rearrange the land districts. That resolution seems to be somewhat in the nature of a suggestion to the Secretary.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection the gentleman from California will explain the purpose of the resolution.

Mr. CAMINETTI. Mr. Speaker, I will, with the consent of the House, explain the object of the resolution.

It will be remembered that in the sundry civil appropriation bill of the last Congress a provision was inserted providing that the land districts in the United States might be reduced ten in number. It was determined that one district should be taken from California, to which we have no objection. But in consolidating two districts to give the necessary reduction of one district they paid no attention to the topography of the country, and have consolidated two districts, the bulk of the land in one of them, the Independence land district, being on the eastern side of the Sierra Nevada and the land in the Visalia district on the western side of the mountains, which for eight months of the year are impassable, and therefore settlers upon the public lands in the Independence land district, in order to go to Visalia, must make a journey of 1,300 miles, at great expense of time and money.

Now, we desire on the part of the people of those districts to be heard on this consolidation—that is, to be permitted to present the facts before the Secretary of the Interior with a view to allow the consolidation to be made somewhere else, where there will be less hardship to the settlers.

Mr. SAYERS. What is the purpose of the resolution?

Mr. CAMINETTI. It is to make provision to enable the Representatives in Congress from the State of California, or anywhere else, who desire to be heard in relation to the facts of the matter, to be heard, and that upon a full hearing the consolidation may take place in regard to two other districts, eliminating the Independence district, and letting it remain as formerly, owing to the great expense this change will entail upon the settlers there.

Mr. SAYERS. Have not you a right to be heard without this resolution?

Mr. CAMINETTI. No, sir.

Mr. SAYERS. Why?

Mr. CAMINETTI. Because the matter is a finality now. Under the act of Congress to which I have already referred the consolidation of the districts, or the order for that purpose, has already been made, and nothing can be done now except by act of Congress.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. You state that the consolidation has been made.

Mr. CAMINETTI. Yes.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Have the transcripts of the records been completed?

Mr. CAMINETTI. I do not know.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. I have it on very reliable information that it will cost more to transcribe the records of the consolidated districts than to maintain the districts.

Mr. CAMINETTI. That may be true.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. And permit me one moment more. Inasmuch as the entire expenses of the local land office and of the General Land Office are paid by the settlers in the West, why not continue an arrangement which has been for their convenience, when it involves no expense upon the Government?

Mr. CAMINETTI. That is another question, which is not before us now.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. Well, that is a fact at all events.

Mr. CAMINETTI. In this case the order has already been made by the Secretary of the Interior and signed by the President and is now in force.

I am not attempting, I will state, to prevent the reduction of the districts. I am willing to allow the reduction to take place where less harm would result. Now, to every settler in the Independence district there will be caused an expense of nearly or quite $100, just to save to the Government $1.25 a year.

Mr. DOCKERY. In regard to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. WILSON] let me say that there is nothing in what he refers to, as I understand it, which is compulsory. The whole matter was relegated to the Secretary of the Interior by an act of the last Congress, giving him the right to consolidate the districts if in his judgment the public interest would thereby be subserved.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. But they made only a certain appropriation, and required the Secretary of the Interior to bring the land offices within that appropriation.

Mr. McRAE. That is the point exactly. It has only succeeded in giving the settlers a great deal of inconvenience without any benefit whatever.

Mr. WILSON of Washington. And it is causing the Secretary of the Interior great inconvenience also without giving the settlers any benefit whatever.

Mr. CAMINETTI. Mr. Speaker, one word. This does not direct the Secretary to act, but only to investigate, and then to act upon his thorough investigation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman?

Mr. COFFEEN. I desire to have the resolution again read. The House was again read.

Mr. COFFEEN. Do I understand that this applies to the State of California alone?

Mr. CAMINETTI. Only to that one district.

Mr. COFFEEN. I wish we might have Wyoming included, for there are very important matters which need attention there in the same direction. I offer that as an amendment to the gentleman's resolution, to include the State of Wyoming.

Mr. SAYERS. Do not do that.

Mr. CAMINETTI. I would like to be kind to my fellow-members, but I think it would be better in this case to act independently.

Mr. COFFEEN. I think the gentleman will not object when I explain.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to considering this bill now?

Mr. COFFEEN. I will object until I have an opportunity to confer with the gentleman from California [Mr. CAMINETTI].

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

PRINTING OF HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a House resolution providing for the printing of hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means, with Senate amendments to the same.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The object of this amendment of the Senate is simply to give the Senate 2,000 copies of the hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means of the House in addition to the 2,000 copies which the resolution provided should be printed for the use of the House. I move to concur in the Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The committees were called for reports, when bills of the following titles were severally reported, and, with the accompanying reports, ordered to be printed and referred as hereafter stated:

CLERK OF UNITED STATES COURT, INDIAN TERRITORY.

By Mr. BAILEY: A bill (H. R. 4186) to regulate the fees of the clerk of the United States court for the Indian Territory—to the House Calendar.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

AMENDMENTS TO FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS.

The Speaker laid before the House the joint resolution, with Senate amendments (H. Res. 66), that the acknowledgments of the Government and the people of the United States be tendered to various foreign governments of the world who have participated in commemoration of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus.

The amendments of the Senate were read.

Mr. HOUK of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, this resolution passed the House a week or two ago. There is no change in its phraseology, and the amendment only provides that the information of its passage be conveyed to the different foreign governments by the President of the United States instead of by the Secretary of State. I will only say that the resolution, as originally offered and passed in the House, was drawn upon consultation with the Secretary of State as to its form, in regard to the manner in which the acknowledgment should be presented to other governments; but the Senate amendments are entirely in accordance with propriety, I think, and I move, therefore, that the amendments of the Senate be concurred in.

The motion was agreed to.

The title of the resolution was amended to conform to the body of it.

DEATH OF CHAPMAN OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I offer the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the House in heart with profound sorrow of the death of Mr. ALBERT W. HADAWAY, Captain of the House, do hereby resolve, That as a mark of respect to his memory the Speaker appoint a committee of seven to attend his funeral services.

The resolution was agreed to; and in accordance therewith the Speaker appointed as such committee Mr. COMPTON, Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee, Mr. DINGLEY, Mr. KYLE, Mr. COCKRELL, Mr. CURTIS of New York, and Mr. COBB of Alabama.

WORLD'S FAIR COMMISSIONER FROM ALASKA.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The bill was before the House a few days ago, and an explanation was asked for by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE], which explanation I now have from the Treasury Department. I desire to have that explanation read in connection with the bill.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 919) for the relief of Louis L. Williams.

Read twice. That the Secretary of the Treasury pay to Louis L. Williams, directed to pay to Louis L. Williams the sum of $395.70 due him as salary and for expenses incurred in the discharge of his duties as World's Fair Commissioner from Alaska.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I would suggest to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HEARD] that an amendment be offered after the word "cents," in line 5 of this bill, to insert the words "out of moneys heretofore appropriated for such purposes."

Mr. DINGLEY. I desire to ask the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAYERS], as there are many commissioners who may have such bills as this, whether he has sufficiently examined the matter, so that he is willing to have this established as a precedent.

Mr. HEARD. I desire to say to the gentleman from Maine that there can be no great number of these cases, as there are only two commissioners from Alaska. The point made against the payment was raised in the State Department as to whether Alaska was a Territory in the meaning of the law authorizing the appointment of commissioners to different States and Territories of the Union.

Mr. DINGLEY. Is that the only point involved?

Mr. HEARD. That is the only point involved, and the Attorney-General decided that it was a Territory in the contemplation of the law. The letter of the Treasury Department makes perfectly clear the reason why the claim has not been paid, and that it is equitably due, but can be paid only by authority of such an act as this.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will report the letter.

The letter was read, as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 25, 1898.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your request that the person designated by the Treasury to attend the World's Fair at special act be passed for payment of the expenses of Louis L. Williams as one of the commissioners to represent Alaska on the World's Columbian Commission from November 2 to December 12, 1898, in aid of allowing them from the special appropriation which has been made since December, 1897.

It appears that the governor of Alaska nominated Mr. Williams on June 10, 1897, but the State Department on November 25, 1897, referred to the Attorney-General the question whether Alaska is a Territory within the meaning of the act creating the World's Columbian Commission, on December 12, 1897. The Attorney-General declined to decide until December 7, 1897.

In the meantime it appears that Mr. Williams actually traveled in Alaska, and that the Governor of Alaska, in the meantime, had the honor to be raised in the State Department, by which the issuing of his commission was delayed, this office only allowing expenses after the date of the commission.

It appears that Mr. Williams is expected to be called to England, and that this can only be accomplished by the passage of the bill which I have the honor to transmit to you herewith a copy of the letter from the Secretary of the Treasury to Mr. Williams, in which, in accordance with the opinion of the First Comptroller, no payment is refused for the reason given above.

Respectfully,

E. P. BALDWIN, Vice Auditor.

HON. JOHN T. HEARD,
House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request for the present consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the amendment I suggested be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert after the word "cents" in line 5, the following: "out of moneys heretofore appropriated for such purposes."

Mr. HEARD. I have no objection to the amendment.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the amendment will be agreed to.

There was no objection, and the amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed, or a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HEARD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

POST-OFFICE BUILDINGS.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the correction of a reference of the bill which I send to the Clerk's desk. The title was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 340) to provide for post-office buildings.

The SPEAKER. This bill has been referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads. That committee will be discharged from the further consideration of the bill, and it will be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The committees were called for reports.

ENGROSSMENT OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a privileged report from the Joint Commission appointed to investigate the Executive Departments of the Government. It is a concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will first report the concurrent resolution submitted by the commission.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I ask that we have order, as this is a matter of some importance.

The SPEAKER. This is an important matter, as it relates to the engrossment and enactment of bills.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, by the House and Senate, That the concurrent resolution beginning with the first day of the regular session of the Fifty-third Congress, to wit: the first Monday in December, 1893, in lieu of being engrossed, the concurrent resolution on which the House of Congress has passed the bill, and the Senate has passed the bill, shall be printed in pamphlet form, and shall be sent to the printer in the same manner as printed bills and joint resolutions are dealt with at present, and shall be sent in printed form, after being passed by the House and Senate, shall be dealt with by the House, and its officers in the same manner in which engrossed bills, and joint resolutions are now dealt with.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will now read the report.

The report (by Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee) was read, as follows:

Report of the Joint Commission on the status of the law now governing the Executive Departments of the Government, etc.

The commission have conducted the House concurrent resolution in reference to the engrossment and enactment of bills and joint resolutions, and have inquired into and upon an investigation of the matters involved therein, and have found that the House of Representatives has been the victim of the commission of mistakes and errors in such engrossment and enrollment, and, secondarily, a reduction of the expenses thereof. Much complaint has arisen by reason of the errors and mistakes which occur at every session of sible. I ask the Senator from Kansas how much time he would like to have?

Mr. PEPPER. Not very much.

Mr. VOORHEES. I will state my purpose. The amendment I deal with these questions is in perfect frankness. If the amendments are to lead to prolonged debate I shall ask the Senate to consider them under Rule VIII, confining debate to five minutes, and to one speech for each Senator upon an amendment. Otherwise, I shall resort to another method to dispose of them.

Mr. PEPPER. I submit, Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me just a moment, that this is not a very good time to restore the old tactics we had ten days or two weeks ago. I merely want to occupy a short time. I do not propose to surrender; neither do my political friends.

Mr. VOORHEES. I have every disposition to yield, but there is so much misunderstanding as to what a short time is in this body that I should like to be reassured a little on that point. I have not the slightest disposition to press the Senator from Kansas or anybody else.

Mr. PEPPER. If the Senator will permit me, I will try to explain.

Mr. VOORHEES. I yield to the Senator from Kansas for that purpose. He says for a short time.

Mr. PEPPER. I understood that I had the floor.

Mr. VOORHEES. I knew I had it; whether the Senator so understood it or not.

Mr. PEPPER. I have not yielded.

Mr. VOORHEES. I was on the floor long before the Senator from Kansas. I had the floor and asked for a vote on the pending amendment. I suppose the Senator misunderstood it.

Mr. PEPPER. When the amendment was read I addressed the Chair and was recognized.

Mr. VOORHEES. Yes; I was on the floor.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will hear the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I do not desire to occupy very much time, but some things have occurred within the last few days which make it appropriate upon my part to address the Senate at least for a short time before the amendment.

It will be remembered that I offered an amendment somewhat similar to this early in the history of this discussion, and that when the Senator from Indiana moved to lay that amendment on the table I asked the poor privilege of explaining it and it was denied me. It was tabled unceremoniously. I now discover in the public prints of the day a statement to the effect that I have surrendered and that I have advised my political associates to surrender.

Mr. President, we have not surrendered, nor do we intend to do so. We intend to fight this proposition until the end; and when we are captured, if we are, it shall be with our arms in our hands and our faces to the foe.

All the free-coinage people have asked from the beginning is simply a restoration of the old law as it existed prior to the great wrong which was perpetrated in 1873. This the pending amendment proposes to effect. When the act of 1873 was proposed and passed, the demonetization of silver money had not been submitted to the people; it was not discussed in any political campaign; and while it was treated in this body and in the other branch of Congress from time to time during a period of two or three years, there was no opportunity whatever for any public judgment to be passed upon it. The evil work was done without the knowledge or consent of the voters.

Mr. President, we have reached a time which was some days ago announced by other Senators as well as myself when this discussion would probably end. We were asked repeatedly when we would be ready to vote on the passage of this bill. Our answer was uniformly (the same dropping from all lips which were called upon to utter the expression) that after we had time enough to discuss the bill and the amendments thereto in a reasonable, deliberate, cool, candid, and manly way, then we would be ready to vote.

Now, Mr. President, in concluding what I have to say, I wish to be distinctly understood here and elsewhere that my opposition to the bill is one of conscience, and based upon a principle. The passage of this bill, as I believe, will entail a wrong that can not be measured. It will start this country downward, or rather it will add to the momentum of our downward course towards a gold standard. It will depreciate the values of the products of all our labor. It will reduce farmers to tenants. It will reduce the wage-worker to virtual peonage. It will eventually put not only the money of the country, but all the great material interests, and all our intellectual forces—our politics, our legislation, and our judicial determinations, in the hands of one great overruling and overmastering power flowing from concentrated wealth. One-half of the farm lands which are now occupied in the civilized world are under mortgage for more than they would bring in cash if advertised to-morrow to be sold at thirty days' notice. Our farm renters have increased in this country in ten years from 25 per cent. to about 35 per cent. The renters in cities have increased at even a much greater ratio than that.

Those of us who are opposing the passage of this bill believe that the effect of the policy it foreshadows will be to continue this downward course, and that there will be no possible escape from it. We believe that the defeat of this bill would to that extent weaken the influences of the money-power; that it would take away one great support which is now maintaining its hold upon the people. We regard the bringing of this bill before Congress as an effort upon the part of what we call the money power to still more firmly and permanently fasten its clutches on the industries of the people.

We shall oppose it to the bitter end, Mr. President. We have no notion of surrendering, and expect to add still further opposition as the debate proceeds. However, as I said to the Senator from Indiana in the beginning, we do not intend to interpose any factious or revolutionary opposition, but we want at every stage of the proceeding, until the end comes, to interpose our determined resistance and our implacable opposition. That is all I care to say now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. PEPPER. The yeas and nays have been demanded.

Mr. TELFER. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HIGGINS (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES]. I do not see him in the Chamber, and I withhold my vote for the present.

Mr. BERRY (when the name of Mr. JONES of Arkansas was called). My colleague [Mr. JONES of Arkansas] is necessarily absent. He is paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS]. My colleague were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. PEEBLES (when his name was called). Upon this question I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN]. Were he present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SHERMAN (when his name was called). I am paired on this vote with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. He would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

Mr. FULS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. If he were present I would vote "nay."

Mr. GRAY (when the name of Mr. WHITE of California was called). When the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] left for the West I agreed to pair with him on this and all cognate questions. My pair has been transferred to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], and I have voted "nay," and I should have made this announcement when my own name was called.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. PALMER. I am paired generally with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH], and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

Mr. HUNTON. I am paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT]. He is detained from the Senate by reason of the illness of his wife. If he were here he would vote "nay," and I should vote "yea."

Mr. HIGGINS. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] to the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], and will vote "nay."

Mr. SHERMAN. I will transfer my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON] to my colleague [Mr. BRICE]. My colleague would vote "nay" and I understand the Senator from Maryland would vote "yea." I vote "nay."

Mr. PUGH. I was requested to state that the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT] is paired with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON]. If the Senator from Georgia were present he would vote "yea." I do not know how the Senator from Iowa would vote.

Mr. DANIEL (after having voted in the affirmative). I voted, but I have since ascertained that the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE] is absent. I have a general pair with him. I shall have to withhold my vote. I understand that the Senator from Washington would vote "nay" if present.

Mr. STEWART. I do not know whether he would or not. Has he so announced?

Mr. DANIEL. I do not think he has so announced.

Mr. SHERMAN. He voted for free exchange the last time.
Mr. DANIEL. I am informed that he would vote "nay" if present, and therefore I have leave to withdraw my vote.

Mr. PASCO. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON] was called away by most urgent business, and desired me to state in his absence that he is paired with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW]. If the Senator from Georgia were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. COCKRELL. I am paired with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALDRICH], who, if present, would vote "nay," and I should vote "yea."

Mr. SHERMAN. I suggest that the pairs be now called over to see whether they are correct, that there may be no misunderstanding.

Mr. DANIEL. It has been suggested to me that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] and the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE] stand paired, and that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] and myself may then vote. I beg that the pairs may be arranged in that manner.

Mr. DUBOIS. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] would vote "yea."

Mr. DANIEL. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] would vote "yea," and I am informed the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE] would vote "nay." I vote "yea."
Mr. VILAS. Under the arrangement suggested by the Senator from Virginia vote "nay."

Mr. PALMER. I understand that my pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] has been transferred to the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS]. If that is permissible, I vote "nay."

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I vote "yes."
Mr. HIGGINS [after having voted in the negative]. The presence of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES], who has just voted, makes it necessary, I presume, for me to revoke the transfer of my pair to the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY].

Mr. QUAY. With the permission of the Senate, I will transfer my pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] to the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], and I vote "nay."
Mr. HARRIS. Had not the transfer of a pair already announced to the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]? There has certainly been, but I do not remember with whom.

Mr. ALDRICH. There was a pair announced between the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], but the Senator from Arkansas has voted, so that the Senator from Connecticut stands without a pair.

Mr. HARRIS. I do not remember with whom the Senator from Connecticut was said to be paired, but I remember distinctly that there was a pair announced.

Mr. BUTLER. Did I understand the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] to announce the pair of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, he is paired with my colleague [Mr. BRICE].

Mr. CULLOM. Let the pairs be announced.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The pairs will be announced by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

Mr. PETTIGREW with Mr. GORDON.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon with Mr. SQUIRE.

Mr. CAMERON with Mr. BRICE.

Mr. HANSBROUGH with Mr. MILLS.

Mr. WHITE of California with Mr. CHANDLER.

Mr. COLQUITT with Mr. WILSON.

Mr. COCKRELL with Mr. ALDRICH.

Mr. MORGAN with Mr. HAWLEY.

Mr. HUNTON with Mr. PLATT.

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 39, as follows:

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs upon agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Finance.

Mr. VOORHEES. I desire to say that the amendment of the Committee on Finance when adopted will stand as the original bill and be open to amendment as the original bill would have been, and every amendment offered will have its fair consideration.

Mr. HARRIS. Allow me to suggest to the Senator from Indiana that the substitute reported by the Committee on Finance and the House bill are both, under the rules, original propositions and subject to amendment, but if the substitute shall be agreed to by the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, it is not then amendable as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. VOORHEES. I intended to convey the idea that so far as I am concerned, and so far as the friends of the bill are concerned, it will be treated as the original would have been treated and be subject to amendment. The ground has been discussed all over. I am not at all afraid of amendments that may come in. I am perfectly willing that they must be moved fairly. Some of them if agreed to be laid on the table; some of them may be subject to explanation under the eighth rule with five-minute speeches; but there are a great number of amendments, notice of which has been given. There are twenty-five or thirty amendments intended to be proposed, but none of them have been offered as yet. I have agreed, for instance, with the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS] that he shall have a chance to offer his amendment, but I desire first to perfect the measure before the Senate by adopting the substitute, as the Senator from Tennessee denounces it, with the understanding that it shall be treated as the original bill would have been treated.

Mr. HARRIS. I beg to suggest to the Senator that we had better follow the parliamentary rule. Both of the propositions are open to amendment as they now stand, as substantive and original propositions, so that the amendment to either is equally open. If agreed to, then under the parliamentary rule the proposition of the committee can not be amended as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that after its adoption the amendment of the committee may be treated as open to amendment, as the original bill would be.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Indiana? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. VOORHEES. Now, I ask for a vote on the substitute of the committee.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President—

Mr. VOORHEES. I hope the Senator from Nevada will oblige me by letting the amendment be adopted, with the assurance to him that it will not prejudice the right to either side. I do not intend to come in to cut off the debate, but I should like to place the measure in a little different form, so that we can go on and amendments will be in order.

Mr. STEWART. I have no objection to that course.

Mr. VOORHEES. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the question recurs upon the amendment reported by the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HARRIS. With the distinct understanding, as I understand it, that when the Senate shall agree, if it shall agree to that amendment, that the amendment shall stand as the original proposition, and is as amendable as the bill as passed by the House of Representatives would be.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That has been agreed to.

Mr. VOORHEES. I have stated that to the Senate, and the Senate has given its unanimous consent.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Unanimous consent has been given to the proposition of the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. HARRIS. I stated it simply so that there could be no misunderstanding.

Mr. VOORHEES. There could not be any.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Finance.

Mr. STEWART. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope whoever called for the yeas and nays will withdraw the demand. This is merely a formal matter. The text of the bill is still open to amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the roll call go on.
Mr. SHERMAN. I hope the demand will be withdrawn.

Sensors will see that the amendment which I have offered to the bill provides for the coinage of silver of proved American production, and anyone who has silver produced from a mine in the United States can take it to the mint and have it coined into silver denominations of such a class as he may designate, and it will all be returned to him less 20 per cent. less one-fifth cent, at the same ratio as now exists between gold and silver.

Those who believe that gold is not the only standard of value, those who believe that silver should have its place here, surely ought to favor this measure.

The product of our American mines will not average more than $40,000,000 annually. One-fifth of this amount, or 20 per cent less, leaves but $32,000,000 for distribution among the people. We are increasing in population at the rate of nearly two millions per annum; and we still require this much more money in the currency of our Government for the needs and requirements of our people.

In doing this, too, we are legislating for American industries. Let us work for our own people and their interests. The silver we are producing from our mines is the product of American industry; it is mined by American citizens, or those capable of becoming such, and the supplies to carry on those mines are furnished from our factories and our farms, and that money is distributed among our own people. Let us do this, let us legislate for Americans first, and for our sister republics and other countries afterwards.

I should, if I believed it would receive the sanction of Congress, most cheerfully give free coinage to silver the same as to gold; but I do not deem it expedient at this time to offer such an amendment.

My amendment allowing 20 per cent for seigniorage is based on the production for the last forty or fifty years. An underwriting company, a life-insurance company, does not govern its rates of risk by the losses incurred in the city of Chicago or in the city of Boston, where great conflagrations swept over and destroyed those cities, but they rather take the average of all the cities in the United States and then judiciously write their risks upon that, and in the end they may prove profitable investments to the underwriters; so those who write life-insurance policies take the average span of man's life and write accordingly. So with this product of our silver mines, it is the average production that we are speaking of, and, judging the future by the past, there surely will be no overplus of silver for our people.

The other sections of the amendment are self-explanatory. I have proposed that no gold pieces for circulation of a less denomination than $10 shall be coined, and that there shall be no more legal-tender, national, or Treasury notes of a less denomination than $5.

We have to day, Mr. President, $71,057,608 of one and two dollar bills in circulation, and $253,387,369 of five-dollar bills. We have of half eagles, $292,000,000; of quarter eagles, $28,000,000. We are coining half eagles at the rate of $11,000,000 per annum.

By withdrawing the greenbacks, the Treasury notes, and the national-bank notes from circulation a demand will be created for silver, which will go out among our people and become popular with them. In the West we have but a very limited amount of one and two dollar bills. The people prefer silver; and so would almost any people who have no money in any other condition of his family and himself. He knows that the greenbacks, after having been used a few months, stowed away in saloons and other places, may bear with them perhaps the germs of some fatal disease, which may enter the household and take away from it its brightest flower. Surely the people will welcome to their homes this bright white metal, with its honest motto, "In God we trust." Some of our Senators have spoken in derision of the proposition. If there is any country which has reason to be grateful and to trust in God, it is the American people; and I say that God's blessings have been dealt out to them from the beginning of the century, from the birth of the nation, with a most bountiful and generous hand. The white metal is emblematic of the purity of our advocacy of this measure.

Mr. President, I do not see how any one, if he will carry out by his acts that which he has declared, can do otherwise than to favor not only the first section of my amendment, but the second, the third, and the fourth sections.

I shall not, however, weary the Senate longer. My five minutes have long since expired, but by your indulgence I have been permitted to continue beyond that limit. Therefore, I shall not trespass further on the Senate at this time; but if there is any disposition to favor my amendment, or if the propositions embodied in my amendment I shall ask for a division of them, so that the Senate may vote understandingly and intelligently upon them.

Mr. PEPPER. I desire to ask the Senator a question before he takes his seat, if he will allow me.

Mr. PERKINS. Certainly.

Mr. PEPPER. I understood the Senator to assert, in making a simile, that gold is our right hand and that silver is our left hand. What I wish to ask the Senator is, why, if that be true, he is disposed to cut off one finger from the left hand?

Mr. PERKINS. It affords me great pleasure to answer my friend from Kansas. I have been greatly instructed in listening to his many able addresses before this body. I stated, in substance, that in our monetary system gold was the right hand and silver the left hand. I am not disposed to cripple either hand; but, on the contrary, I would care for it and foster it. I should also go and do unto my neighbor as I wish him to do unto me. When we have the bill for the coinage of silver, I would like 20 per cent of the silver by way of seigniorage in the Treasury, instead of giving it to the owner of the bullion.

Mr. PERKINS. I prefer to give to my friend from Kansas and other friends throughout the country this 20 per cent. It is not given. Our Government is one of the people, and every individual in this land, humble though he be, is a sovereign of this great Republic.

Mr. PEPPER. Then, why not take off 20 per cent from the gold bullion?

Mr. PERKINS. If my friend from Kansas will get his friends on the other side of the Chamber to agree to it, I shall accept the amendment.

Mr. STEWART. Before there is a vote on the pending amendment I wish to make a few remarks about my vote on the amendment, not to make a speech, but just to call attention to it.

I voted for the substitute reported by the Senator from Indiana from the Finance Committee. Of course such a vote requires an explanation. The amendment of the committee which was substituted contains for the bill as passed by the House a very muddy and involved promise, to make efforts to obtain free coinage in the future. This promise is, of course, like all other promises in this subject, liable to be broken.

If the bill is passed as amended, I wish to make the prediction that the promise will be disregarded and to be stricken out in conference between the two Houses, or, if it remains, the bill will never be signed by the President. It may become a law by nonaction of the President. It may involve a continuance of the session ten days in order that it may become a law without my signature, but the President has not the power to sign it, and I will not make it. He will not sign the bill. I voted for the substitute to give the President an opportunity to sign the promise or let the bill lie ten days and become a law without his signature. Of course, I have no respect for this promise, because such promises are made to be broken.

There is one other thing to which I wish to call attention in connection with the changes which have occurred since the last free-coinage measure was pending. I shall not refer to the attempt made last February to take up the bill, which proposed to repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman act. That would probably not be fair, as there was 19 majority against taking it up, and some very violent remarks made against such a violent proceeding as the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act.

I call attention to the vote which was taken on the 1st day of July, 1892, after both of the candidates for the Presidency were nominated and after both the party platforms were promulgated. I find that there were eight changes in the vote to-day. I have been comparing that vote with the vote in July, 1892. I call attention to the changes which have been made, and state what would have been the result if eight changes had not occurred when the vote was taken to-day. The vote taken on the free-coinage measure was a vote of the full Senate, the whole Senate, at that occasion as on this being either present and voting or paired. So it was a big vote then, and the vote to-day is a big vote of the entire Senate.

On the vote taken to-day there were 28 for free coinage, the amendment of the Senator from Kansas being a simple free-coinage amendment. It revives the law as it stood since 1834; it adopts the law which will place our finances exactly in the position, so far as coinage is concerned, where they stood before the passage of the act of 1873. It was a revival of the law as it stood since 1834; a pure and simple free-coinage amendment. The proposition voted upon on the 1st of July was also a pure and simple free-coinage bill. A change of 8 votes would have made 36 for the amendment to-day and 31 against, a majority of 1892. If there had been no changes in the vote since the last vote on the free-coinage amendment would have been adopted, and a free-coinage bill passed by 5 majority. That is the way it would have stood.

Those who have changed their views by the arguments which since then have been offered, are the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER], the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL], the and ability we could command, defended one of the greatest resources of our country, the honor and integrity of the nation, and the interests of those we have the honor to represent. Mr. President, discoveries yet made in Idaho do not leave us coal and iron fields equal to those of Colorado, hence our mining population can not turn its attention to those lines of development. Gold mining will of course continue to be a prosperous industry; but with lead-silver mining eliminated, thousands of miners will be thrown out of employment.

We do not admit that our agricultural resources are second to those of any State in the Union. But as much of our agricultural land requires irrigation, hence large investments of money, their development without national aid will necessarily be slow.

Our State debt is small—small in amount, and trifling in the light of our enormous resources. Every State obligation will be paid to the utmost cent. But there are counties in the State devoted entirely to silver-lead mining to which the passage of this bill will be a staggering blow. It will be impossible for these counties to meet their obligations until the people are restored to power and invest their great industry with new life, a life that will carry with it happiness and prosperity to every mining and agricultural hamlet in the Republic. The passage of the pending amendment would enable these people to meet their financial obligations and bring prosperity to surrounding agricultural districts.

Our farmers living adjacent to mining districts are already suffering from the lack of industrial activity in the mines. Being far inland they have relied upon the local market for the sale of their products. The Wilson bill, without the amendment proposed by the Senator from California, will destroy this market.

Thus all of our people feel most keenly the calamity which will be thrust upon them by the passage of the bill referred to without the amendment.

I feel that we have done all that men could do. Our people are brave, accustomed to privation and disappointment, and possess a courage that never falters. The first shock they may receive will welcome the contest which the appeal to the people will bring. Being deserted by their old allies, they are ready to carry on the contest, nothing appalled by the apparent odds; for they believe that they are part and parcel of the whole people and that the masses of all sections must share with them the disasters which these sad days will certainly bring, and that with them they will enjoy the prosperity which will follow a victory by and for the people.

Mr. President, my heart aches when I think of the utter desolation and distress that will follow unconditional repeal in many localities, not only in my State, but also in other Western States and Territories.

Mr. FAULKNER. I suppose we can have a vote now on the amendment of the Senator from Nevada to the amendment.

Mr. TELLER. Let the amendment to the amendment be read. I have not heard what it is.

The Secretary again read Mr. STEWART's amendment. The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] to the amendment of the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. McFEFFER. Before the vote is taken, as the Senator from Nevada is present, I should like to hear an explanation of his amendment as to how it would affect the pending amendment. I do not understand the two to be quite in harmony one with the other, and before I am ready to vote upon it I should like to have an explanation.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will state to the Senator from Kansas that the Senator from Nevada has made a full explanation of the amendment to the Senate. It is hardly fair to those of us who were here and who have staid here and listened to him to impose upon the Senator from Nevada the burden of a re-explanation of his amendment.

Mr. STEWART. What is the difficulty about my amendment?

Mr. McFEFFER. I wanted an explanation of the proposed amendment to the amendment so as to learn wherein it differs from the amendment offered by the Senator from California.

Mr. STEWART. It differs with it in the first section, where it revives the law of 1837, allowing subsidiary coin to be coined and to be full legal tender the same as the dollar. As I explained, and to great difficulty in getting subsidiary coin under the present system. If you go to any market place you will find the great difficulty in finding coin enough to make change. It has not been supplied, and I think we had better return to the old method of allowing the owners of the bullion to deposit it for coining and let them have whatever kind of coin they want. If they want dollars let them have dollars. If they want dimes let them have dimes. That is the first section.

Mr. McFEFFER. If the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada to the amendment should be adopted, how will it affect the 20 per cent reserve for seigniorage?

Mr. STEWART. It is the same.

Mr. McFEFFER. It would leave it the same?

Mr. STEWART. The same. In this amendment the 20 per cent for seigniorage is retained. Of course I am opposed to any seigniorage. If a provision to allow the owners of silver bullion to take it to the mint and have it coined on any terms at any price can be incorporated in the bill, I shall vote for it. Although I think the seigniorage is unjust, I want to eliminate from this discussion the implication that we are seeking to sell our silver bullion. We are seeking to sustain the country by furnishing metallic money.

Let the silver bullion be taxed as much as you please. Twenty per cent would reduce the price of an ounce of silver to about a dollar and three cents. As I suggested, I desire to have this proposition voted on, and I shall then try another proposition. Twenty-seven per cent would reduce the value of silver bullion to the value of silver coin in the market. It is the same as the 20 per cent, of course, would make the silver in the silver dollar worth 80 cents, and 27 per cent would make it worth 73 cents. I want to get a vote on both those propositions; I desire to have it eliminated by any further interference with the currency which is contained in the proposition of the Senator from California. That amendment proposes a very radical difference in the currency. That is a matter which can be arranged afterwards; but in this proposition before the Senate, whether our people shall be allowed to take silver bullion to the mint under any circumstances and have it coined. Although there would be such a seigniorage that probably it would close most American mines and limit the production very much, still if that should be done it would preserve the principle of coining silver for the benefit of the country.

I do not believe at all in the purchase of bullion by the Government. I never asked to have bullion purchased. It is bad in principle. If silver is to be a money metal it should be coined as a money metal. I shall vote for it with these limitations upon it. I should like to have the yeas and nays on my amendment, which is eliminated from the retirement of smaller denominations contained in the other proposition. I do not know exactly how that would affect it. I do not like a limitation on silver. I do not like anything that looks like a limitation.

The second clause looks a little like relegating it to subsidiary coin and as if you wanted to make room for silver. Silver will quickly take its place if we do not do it. It will not destroy the prosperity of this country, which does not exist and can not exist without it. To make room for silver is to make room for prosperity. To drive silver out is to make room for poverty, and degradation. I do not want to do anything in the bill that looks like an apology for using silver. I wish to test the sense of the Senate whether it will let silver go under any circumstances, if the miner is willing to be taxed to any degree, so that there shall be no excuse to sell silver bullion; and if the Senate will let it go on the bill, I shall be very thankful, I should like to have the yeas and nays on that proposition.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] to the amendment proposed by the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. STEWART. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HUNTON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT]. He is detained from the Chamber by the illness of his wife. If he were here he would vote "nay" and I should vote "yea."

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). I have no objection with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], which I transfer to the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], and vote "nay."

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] who, if present, would I suppose vote "yea" while I should vote "nay." The Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] is paired with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON]. I suggest to the Senator from Missouri that we transfer our pairs so that the Senator from Iowa and the Senator from Oregon will stand paired and he and I can both vote. I vote "nay."

The roll was concluded.

Mr. COCKRELL. I vote "yea."

Mr. GORMAN. I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CASSIDY]. If he were present he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

Mr. PALMER. I am paired with the Senator from North

Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. I would vote "nay" if he were present. How he would vote I do not know.

Mr. GRAY [after having voted in the negative]. The Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] left the city with the understanding that he is paired with the one question concerning the proposed financial legislation. I wish to announce that my pair has been transferred to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER]. I have voted.

Mr. PUGH. I desire to announce the pair of the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT] with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON]. If the senior Senator from Georgia were present he would vote "yes."

Mr. PASCO desires to announce that the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON] has been called away from the city on most urgent business and that he is paired with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW].

Mr. PALMER. I transfer my pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MCPHERSON], who is not present, and vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 29, nays 39; as follows:

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. PERKINS. I desire to have the amendment offered by me yesterday read by the Secretary for the information of the Senate, after which I desire to call for the yeas and nays upon the question.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. Strike out all after line 13 in the amendment of the committee, already agreed to, and insert:

SEC. 1.—That the mints of the United States shall be open to the coinage of silver of proved American production at the same ratio now existing between gold and silver, with a minting or seigniorage charge of 20 per cent, which shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 2.—That hereafter no gold pieces for circulation of a less denomination than $10 be coined, and no more legal tender national currency, or Treasury notes of a less denomination than $5 be issued.

SEC. 3.—That the holder of any standard silver dollars which have been or may hereafter be coined may deposit the same with the Treasurer or any assistant treasurer of the United States in any sum, and receive therefor notes of denominations of five and ten dollars only, which notes shall have the same legal-tender quality as the coin for which they are exchanged. The coin deposited for or representing the said notes shall be retained in the Treasury for the payment of the same on demand.

SEC. 4.—That in order to protect the mints against imposition no silver shall be coined under this act except such as is produced by smelters or other saving devices situated in the United States, and shall be stamped, marked, or marked directly by the Secretary of the Treasury, who is hereby authorized to appoint such officers or agents and fix their compensation and prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry the act into effect.

SEC. 5.—That there shall be appointed a commission of five monetary experts, the members whereof shall not be otherwise connected with the Government, who, until it shall be to the Congress and the Executive advised on all necessary matters relating to the currency.

Mr. PERKINS. That the question may be voted upon by the yeas and nays upon the straight proposition whether Congress will protect American silver at the average American price at which it has prevailed for the past thirty years, I desire to strike out the last section, blank number, relating to the appointment of a monetary commission, as before stated.

Mr. PRYDE (Mr. PERKINS). You have a right to modify your amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from California has a right to modify his amendment.

Mr. PERKINS. Then I desire to withdraw from my amendment the last five lines, 27 to 31, inclusive, relating to the appointment of a commission of five monetary experts.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be so modified.

Mr. PERKINS. Now, I desire to have the question taken on the amendment by yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. QUAY (when Mr. CAMERON's name was called). On this question my colleague [Mr. CAMERON] is paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN]. If my colleague were present he would vote "yes."

Mr. COCKRELL (when his name was called). As announced on the previous vote, I have been paired with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], but my pair is transferred to the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL], so that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS], and I will vote. I vote "yes."

Mr. GRAY (when his name was called). I have a general pair on this subject with the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE], which pair, as I have heretofore announced, has been transferred to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER]. I vote "nay."

Mr. HUNTON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT]. If he were here he would vote "nay" and I should vote "yes."

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. I should vote "nay" if he were present.

Mr. PETTIGREW (when his name was called). I am paired on this question with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]. If he were present I should vote "yes."

Mr. GORMAN. I want to suggest to the Senator from South Dakota that he transfer his pair with the Senator from Georgia to the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON], and he and I can both vote.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I have no objection to that arrangement. I vote "yes."

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). I again announce that my pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] has been transferred to the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]. I vote "nay."

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). Under the announcement of the transfer of my pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL], to the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], I am at liberty to vote, and vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. PASCO. Under the transfer of pairs announced, the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON] stands paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]; and at the request of the Senator from Georgia I wish to state that he would vote "nay" if present, and that he has been called away from the city upon urgent business. I shall not make the announcement again today.

The result was announced—yeas 30, nays 41; as follows:

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BERRY. I offer an amendment as a proviso to the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. Add to the amendment of the committee already agreed to the following proviso:

Provided, That the act of January 28, 1893, entitled "An act to authorize the coinage of the standard silver dollar and to restrict legal tender character," requiring the purchase monthly of not less than two million and not more than four million dollars worth of silver bullion and the coining of the same as if it was purchased into standard silver dollars, be and the same is hereby, revised and enacted into full force and effect.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, the amendment that I have proposed, if the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MCPHERSON] will give me his attention for a moment, simply provides that, when the Sherman law is repealed, or the purchasing clause of it, the Bland-Allison act of 1878, which was repealed at the time of the passage of the Sherman law, shall be revived and remain in full force and effect. That is the simple effect which the amendment would have upon the bill, if it became a part of it and was then passed.

Offering this amendment, Mr. President, I desire to say that it is not what I prefer. It is not what I would rather have. If I could have my will in the premises, I would have an amendment adopted to the bill which would provide for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, and that that should become a part and parcel of the law of this land. In that I believe. But a majority of the Senate voted against this on yesterday. If there was any hope of securing that, I would have to revive the Bland-Allison act, because it contains provisions that I do not fully approve, but I offer this amendment in the nature of a compromise. I have offered it as a proposition that, it has seemed to me from the time this session began, all the Democrats at least could stand upon until such time as we could agree upon what should be the final policy of the party in regard to the finances of this country.

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] some weeks ago in a very able and a very fair speech, made here in construing the Democratic platform which was adopted at Chicago, and about which there has been so much dispute, stated on the floor of the Senate that the Democrats are agreed that there was a declaration in that platform in favor of the repeal of the Sherman law—the Sherman law, bona fide in mind—not one section or clause of it, but the entire law. I agree with the Senator from Delaware that the platform did so declare.

He admitted very fairly that the platform declared further that the Democratic party committed itself to bimetallism and the coinage of both gold and silver upon such terms as would cause each to circulate upon terms of equality, and that each would have the same purchasing power. I agree with the Senator from Delaware in that proposition. He furthermore said that the platform provided that this might be done either by international agreement or by legislation; that he and those with whom he was acting believe in doing it by international agreement, and others on this side of the Chamber, including myself, believe in doing it by legislation; and that at this particular juncture and time we cannot settle that question.

In all of that I agree with him; but, Mr. President, while we are waiting for the time to come when that settlement shall be had, I ask him if it is fair to other Democrats that silver shall be demonetized altogether, and that no provision shall be made for the coinage of a single dollar of it.

I assert that if this law is repealed, and while we are waiting to act upon legislation, it would be fair to all Democrats that we reinstate the conditions that existed at the time this obnoxious law was passed. Let us reenact the law which this one repealed, and let it stand as a law until Democrats agree whether the two metals shall be put upon an equality by international agreement or by legislation. That, it seems to me, would be fair dealing between members of the same party, all of whom aided in the election of a Democratic President; and if you are disposed to mete out justice to us, there ought to be no objection to it on this side of the Chamber.

Mr. President, those of us who have come from Southern States, who believe in free silver, who are committed to it, who believe that our party was committed to it, have sat here from day to day and week to week, and have seen ourselves denounced by so-called Democratic papers, denounced for every conceivable crime in the calendar because we have dared to vote our honest convictions, and as our people at home behind us demand that we shall vote. We have promised them upon a hundred stump that we would stand by free coinage. We have kept our words. All weakened was that the party should carry out its party pledges, and for that we have been denounced again and again, and while we have submitted to this we have lost no opportunity to try to urge upon this side of the Chamber some measure upon which all Democrats can unite.

When we first came here we offered to go into a Democratic caucus, either of Democratic Senators or both Democratic Senators and Democratic Members of the House. That was indignantly and contemptuously refused us. When we staid here from week to week while the fight went on, remained in our seats and answered the roll call, and then twenty-two free silver Democrats on this side of the Chamber gave a written statement upon which we pledged our honor to go into a Democratic caucus of Senators and abide by and vote for whatever a majority of the Democratic Senators would say, that was refused us. Finally, in the interest of Democratic harmony, we offered to have other Democratic Senators who did not agree with us, thirty-seven of us in all, twenty-one of whom were silver Democrats, signed a proposed compromise which did not meet our views, in which we did not fully believe, in the hope that we might unite this side of the Chamber, so that we could all stand in harmony, if possible, with the Democratic Administration.

But every offer we have made has been refused; there has been no concession whatever made to us here. You seem determined that you will force this thing upon us as it is without a single letter of amendment. It may seem right to you, but I am compelled to say that it seems unfair and unjust to us. It will be a bitter lesson that goes to the people in the Southern land, men who have for twenty-five years through evil report and good report, through difficulties and dangers that no one who has not lived in that section can comprehend, stood by the Democratic party; who have supported such nominees from the East and the North as were selected for them to support, to have now faltered in their courage or in their devotion to Democratic principles. When we go back to them and we are compelled to tell them, "Your Democratic brethren from the North would make no concession, we could get nothing," it will be a bitter lesson to them.

Mr. President, I regret that it is so. I should be sorry to believe that there are any men on this side of the Chamber who take pleasure in obtaining a victory over that class of men and over us, and especially when that victory is obtained under the leadership of the Senator from Ohio, backed by an overwhelming majority of the lifelong enemies of the Democratic party. But if you will not do it; if you are determined that we shall take it this way, and will make no concession, we can only make the record in accordance with our belief and cast our votes in favor of a proposition of compromise, of every amendment friendly to silver, and if all is refused then cast our votes against the bill.

Mr. President, I regret that such is your determination; but if you will have it so, I hope and trust and believe that the Democrats throughout the South will do in the future as they have done in the past, rally around the Democratic banner and the Democratic flag and fight it out inside of the lines of the Democratic party until we gain all that we thought was promised us at Chicago.

Mr. VORHEES. Mr. President, my great respect for the Senator from Arkansas and something that I think is due to the situation here leads me to say a few words at this time.

There are many things which have been proposed, and will be again proposed on this floor in connection with the pending bill as amendments that under different circumstances would meet my approval. At this time I feel charged with a duty to have the bill passed if possible without any incumbrance at all. For ten weeks and more we have talked on that line. At this late hour, however much I might approve any amendment, I would not feel at liberty to support it in connection with this measure.

Senators seem to forget that there is a day beyond this. They seem to forget that there is a to-morrow, a next week, and a time besides the present to transact business and to lay down public policies. I do not expect financial legislation to expire with the present session. I do not expect the policy of the Government or of the present Administration to be circumscribed by one act. We undertook to repeal a bad law, a law that seemed to vitiate and taint the confidence in this country. Whether it did all that had been done I will not stop to inquire, but that it was charged with having done it, and that it was a pretext for breaking down public confidence is beyond question.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator from Indiana allow me?

Mr. VORHEES. Certainly.

Mr. HARRIS. I wish to suggest to him that he is strong to-day because of allies over-yonder; but as to those propositions which he could approve to-day but for his desire to pass this bill without amendment and without change, when he shall report or offer any one of them his allies there are gone; they are in the camp of the enemy, and he will find himself powerless then, however potent he may be to-day.

Mr. VORHEES. Mr. President, there are some men who are sufficiently wise to-day to be able to forecast the future. The Senator from Tennessee seems to know all things, not merely for now but for all time to come. He determines what will be done over yonder next week, or next month, or in December next. So far as allies or help over there is concerned I think he will be about as weak without his allies over there as anybody I know. So I need not be reminded on that subject.

The strongest man in the whole camp—I salute him—is the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER]. I see that a splendid flag of the Government has been degraded because he saluted the flag of an insurgent. I salute the flag of the Senator from Colorado, who has surrendered to an inevitable force. I salute him with all the honors of war as he passes off the field. But as the pretensions of the Senator from Tennessee it passes me for naught. It was not for that that I rose; but I desire to say in the discharge of a duty which has fallen upon me as an humble but goes out to such utterances as we listened to last evening from the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], and this morning from the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT]. Nobody who heard those utterances will feel any vain spasm of triumph in this hour.

I feel, Mr. President, and the men who have acted with me feel, that we have acted for the best interests of the country. On that point others differ from us, but we feel with them, and in the hour of triumph we have nothing but respect for those on this side of the Chamber and on the other side of the Chamber who have held different views.

As much, Mr. President, I thought it was becoming in me to say.

Mr. McPHERSON. Mr. President, I have no desire to prolong this discussion; but, unfortunately last evening, in my contention with the honorable Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES], in my desire to convert him from the error of his ways, I was almost put in the position of an obstructionist. I do not propose to repeat that experiment. There seems to be a desire on all sides of the Chamber to proceed to a vote. We have now been here for nearly three months discussing this question; and as the Senate has expressed a desire to vote, and while the spasm lasts, I do not intend to offer anything by way of delay.

I wish to say, however, in answer to the honorable Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY], who has just addressed the Senate, that I want no illusions upon this question and no deception when the vote shall have been taken. I differ with the honorable Senator that either the Democratic convention, the President, or the friends of repeal in this Chamber have ever advocated the policy of the absolute and unconditional repeal of the Sherman law in its entirety. To repeal the Sherman law in its entirety means—

Mr. BERRY. Will the Senator permit me to ask a question? Mr. McPHERSON. In a moment, when I get through with this sentence.

To repeal the Sherman law in its entirety means that one hundred and fifty millions of Treasury notes shall be left without a redeemer either in gold or silver. To do such an act as this would leave the Democratic party more in need of a redeemer than the Treasury notes themselves.

Mr. BERRY. Will the Senator now permit me to ask a question?

Mr. McPHERSON. Yes.

Mr. BERRY. The Senator said he denied that the national Democratic convention ever declared in favor of the repeal of the Sherman law. I think that the convention has been read fifty times, or at least a large number of times, on the floor of the Senate and from the desk; and there is not one word in the Democratic platform about the purchasing clause of the Sherman act.

The Senator says the repeal of the Sherman law in its entirety would leave $150,000,000 of Treasury notes unprovided for. I assert that that $150,000,000, if that law be repealed, would be as much provided for as the greenback currency is to-day. They stand precisely on the same footing. The Senator's statement that the $150,000,000 of Treasury notes would be unprovided for is, I think, not justified by the law.

I repeat that the Democratic platform declared in favor of repealing the Sherman law, and said nothing about the purchasing clause of that law. If the Senator from New Jersey does not know that he certainly ought to know it.

Mr. McPHERSON. I do not know it, and I do not think there is a man in this country who does know it. In the sense the Senator now states it, which is in effect to issue one hundred and fifty millions of new paper with no promise of redemption.

Mr. BERRY. If the Senator will read that plank in the Democratic platform he will find that I am correct.

Mr. McPHERSON. It was not the intention of the Democratic convention, or the intention of the friends of repeal upon this side of the Chamber, to imperil in any way, shape, or form the $150,000,000 of Treasury notes issued to the amount of $150,000,000, except by some other coin redemption.

Mr. BERRY. Will the Senator permit me to there?

Mr. McPHERSON. Not at present.

Mr. BERRY. Will the Senator permit me to read from the Democratic platform?

Mr. McPHERSON. I want to say, if the Senator will permit me to finish my sentence—

Mr. BERRY. All right.

Mr. McPHERSON. The Democratic platform was a general enunciation of principles. The Democratic platform certainly did not and could not declare a policy which would, after the issue of $150,000,000 of Treasury notes, leave them unprotected by any coin redemption whatever; and I do not want the Democratic party committed to any such policy. I will now hear the Senator.

Mr. BERRY. If the Senator will permit, as he has made a square issue of fact with me as to what the Democratic platform declares, and puts such a construction as he sees proper and which was never intended to be put upon the declaration made by the Democratic convention at Chicago, I shall read it:

“SEC. 7. We denounce the Republican legislation known as the Sherman act of 1890 as a cowardly underhanded, treacherous, and dishonest attempt in the future which should make null and void the authority of the author anxious for its speedy repeal.”

That is all that relates to the repeal of the Sherman law. I have heard most remarkable statements made by the Senator from New Jersey on this floor in regard to finances, and they have been usually matters of opinion. This, however, is a question of fact as to the language employed. How can the Senator assert that the Democratic platform declared in favor of the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act, when it says in plain language which can not be mistaken:

We denounce the Republican legislation known as the Sherman act of 1890.

Mr. McPHERSON. Very well. My answer to the Senator is simply this, that necessarily all platforms of political parties are general enunciations of the principles of the parties. The Democratic convention, after the Sherman law had been three years upon the statute books and after $150,000,000 of Treasury notes had been issued under that law upon deposits of silver bullion, could not, for a single moment, have believed or thought that it was proper to repeal the whole Sherman law and leave those notes entirely without any protection except a mass of silver bullion and no power even to sell it. That Democratic convention had no such idea. I have never heard such an argument made on this side of the Chamber by the friends of repeal as has been urged by the Senator from Arkansas, that that was the policy of the Democratic party.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to ask the Senator from New Jersey if it is not barely possible that the person who wrote that sentence in the Democratic platform did not know what he was writing about and did not know anything in the matter?

Mr. McPHERSON. No! I will not say that. That is no argument, let me say to the Senator, and yet it is quite as reasonable as some other statements here made.

Mr. PASCO. I should like to ask the Senator from New Jersey if the statement which he has just made is not an argument against the unconditional repeal of the Sherman act?

Mr. McPHERSON. Not at all. The unconditional repeal of the Sherman law, as we find it in the Senate to-day, is as to the purchasing clause of bullion, and the safety of the Treasury notes we have already issued on the purchases of silver. The Democratic party would be unfaithful to every pledge made to the people, and it would be unfaithful to itself, and surely the Democratic party did not mean when it made the platform it did in Chicago, that they were to imperil the parity between gold and silver in this country, and leave $150,000,000 of Treasury notes, if the Sherman law had been unconditionally and absolutely repealed, without even a provision which would provide for them a redeemer in silver coin, not to speak of gold coin.

Mr. BUTLER. May I not suggest to the Senator from New Jersey that when that provision was put in the Democratic platform the convention might have contemplated some provision of law which would have taken care of that $150,000,000 of Treasury notes?

Mr. McPHERSON. It contemplated nothing except what it said, that the party favored repeal of the Sherman law. What does that mean?

Mr. BUTLER. If that is the case, the Senator from Arkansas is right.

Mr. McPHERSON. It means that the purchases of silver bullion under the Sherman law shall be stopped.

Mr. VANCE. Will my good friend from New Jersey allow me to say a word to him?

Mr. McPHERSON. Certainly.

Mr. VANCE. The Chicago platform does not declare for the unconditional repeal of the Sherman law. It only declares that it is fraught with such possibilities of danger and such mischiefs in the future that its author ought to be ashamed of himself. [Laughter.]

Mr. McPHERSON. I think we have ocular proof that its author is ashamed of himself. It has been charged on the floor of the Senate that it was perhaps owing to a suggestion made by the Senator from Ohio, in an interview last fall in the State of Ohio, that the President of the United States had been induced to recommend the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law.

Now, I wish to say to the honorable Senator from Ohio, that if he has been the cause of this beneficent legislation, if he has fathered it, I hope when history makes up its final and impartial judgment it will exactly divide the honors between the Presi-gold, which gold shall be held in the Treasury and used only for the purpose of maintaining parity between the two metals.

Sec. 7. That in fixing or establishing the seigniorage the average price of silver sold by him the month preceding shall control, when he has sold any; otherwise the average price in the cities of London and New York. Sec. 8. That in order to protect the mints against imposition no silver shall be coined under this act except such as is produced by smelters situated in the United States, and shall be stamped, marked, and assayed as directed by the Secretary of the Treasury. No silver is hereby authorized to appoint such officers or agents and fix their compensation and prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry this act into effect. Sec. 9. That the silver bullion which is heretofore provided shall have its earmarks removed and shall, after sale, lose its privilege.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President, I shall offer this amendment, not as a substitute for that portion of the pending bill which it proposes to strike out, but to come in as additional to the bill, should it be passed. I have no objection to the bill as it is. Mr. President, during the long debate which has occurred here over this measure, I am sure the RECORD bears me out in the assertion that I have taken up but very little of the time of the Senate. For many weary weeks I have been persistently engaged in trying to get this matter to a vote, and to get it disposed of and settled. I do not intend to ask the indulgence of the Senate in the discussion of the proposed amendment. It has been printed and upon the desks of Senators for three weeks past. I only wish to say that if the right of coinage is to be given to the silver metal at all, I believe that the amendment now submitted guards the Government and its Treasury as carefully as may be done in the process of the mintage of the metal.

The one feature of the amendment to which I ask the attention of the Senate is the determination of the seigniorage, my effort being to establish a self-adjusting process. The seigniorage proposed in the amendment consists of the difference between the bullion value and the coin value of the silver metal, that difference to be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury upon the first day of each month. If the silver metal shall appreciate in value, the seigniorage, of course, depreciates in amount, but if the parity of value between the two metals is what is sought for, that is absolutely secured, because the seigniorage is not fixed arbitrarily at 10 per cent, as heretofore, nor 20 per cent, nor 25 per cent, but the seigniorage is the difference in value to be established every month by the Secretary of the Treasury between the bullion value of the metal and the value after it has been coined.

I believe that, if Senators will examine the amendment, they will find that every safeguard is thrown around the mint to protect it from imposition. The purpose and object of the amendment is to give unlimited coinage to silver metal, the product of American mines, and to fix the seigniorage on the basis indicated. To that proposition I invite the attention of the Senate. It is but one of the many features in this amendment, and that is that the seigniorage is to be sold in the open markets of the world for the highest price in gold, and that gold is to be held as a reserve fund in the Treasury for no purpose except to maintain the parity in value between these two metals.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, I am very anxious to vote upon any proposition looking to retaining silver in any form in our circulation, but I see serious objection to this amendment in this: That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to sell the bullion in open market, and that he is also authorized to fix the market price. My experience with Secretaries of the Treasury is such that I think a law of this kind would not only be futile—

Mr. BLACKBURN. If the Senator from Nevada will permit me simply to correct his statement there, I will say that the provision of the proposed amendment is, not that the Secretary of the Treasury shall fix the market price of the silver bullion, but that it shall be determined on the first day of each month by the average price paid the preceding month, and if no sale has been made during the month preceding, then the value shall be fixed from the average prices ruling in the London and New York markets for the preceding thirty days.

Mr. STEWART. The Secretary of the Treasury has too much to do with it. I know the power of the Secretary of the Treasury to abrogate laws. If the Secretary happens to be a gold man he will dump the bullion on the market and smash it. I think this would be trifling with the question. I do not wish to argue about the matter; but I am afraid of the Secretary of the Treasury since the failure of the Department to execute the Bland-Allison act and the Sherman act. The Secretary has too much power in throwing bullion upon the market. I am afraid he will be speculating with it, and fooling with it, and making a lot of money by bulling and bearing the market. I think we had better not adopt this amendment. I regret very much to vote against it, but I do not think it will do.

Mr. WASHBURN. I call for the yeas and nays on the amendment. The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. QUAY (when Mr. CAMERON's name was called). I again announce the pair of my colleague [Mr. CAMERON] with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON], and desire that this announcement shall be taken as continuing during the remainder of the session of to-day.

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CULLOM. The pair of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] has been transferred to the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. If present, the Senator from Iowa would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 42; as follows:

Mr. STEWART. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk as an additional section to the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add to the bill the following:

§ 3.—That the President of the United States be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to invite the several governments of the Republics of Mexico, Central and South America, Haiti, and Santo Domingo to join the United States in a conference to be held in Washington, in the United States, with a view to the passage of a joint act for the purpose of the adoption of a common silver coin to be issued by each government, the same to be a legal tender in all commercial transactions between the citizens of all the American States, and to be represented in a conference, in which such common coin shall have been agreed upon by the majority of the governments represented in such conference, and when the limits of the governments so invited and participating in such conference shall have been agreed to, the free and unlimited coinage of the common silver coin so agreed upon by the conference for the benefit of depositors of silver bullion, the United States will also open its mints to the free and unlimited coinage of such common silver coin.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. STEWART. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH], and therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 32, nays 41; as follows:

So the amendment was rejected.

on the subject of the national credit and the necessity that exists, in my judgment, for giving the Secretary of the Treasury authority to issue and dispose of the bonds of the United States Government. At that same time I then discussed earnestly the propriety of authorizing an extension of the national-bank circulation up to the par value of the United States bonds held by these institutions for that purpose.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I rise to ask what is before the Senate?

Mr. SQUIRE. My proposed amendment, and I wish to withdraw it. This remark is preliminary to that request. I am explaining the amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. I rise to a question of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Tennessee will state his question of order.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from Washington offered an amendment consisting of several propositions. He asked for a division. There were only two sections of his amendment voted upon. I voted for two sections. There are other features that I do not intend to be committed to. I would not have voted for his whole amendment. The rest of his amendment remains to be disposed of.

Mr. SQUIRE. Mr. President, that is what I was about to explain, that I propose now under these circumstances to withdraw the subsequent sections. I ask leave of the Senate to withdraw the remainder of the amendment for the reason that no matter what the merit may be regarding the bond proposition or that relative to authorizing the extension of the national-bank circulation to the par value of the bonds, I do not think the spirit and temper of the Senate are such at this time that the vote would be indicative of the opinion of Senators as to the merits of the real questions involved in each of those sections. Therefore, with the leave of the Senate, I shall withdraw the latter portions of my amendment. At a later date those questions will come up and be considered. I do not wish now to obstruct action upon the main question by reason of debating any question sub-adjacent to the main issue. It is not opportune.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I object.

Mr. STEWART. I object to withdrawing it after the Senate has acted on a part of the amendment. I rise to a point of order. The Senator from Washington has no right to withdraw his amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let us vote on it.

Mr. BUTLER. We can settle it very quickly by having a vote on it.

Mr. SQUIRE. Very good; if it is not in order to withdraw it. Mr. MORRILL (to Mr. SQUIRE). You have a perfect right to withdraw it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is upon agreeing to the remaining sections of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington.

Mr. SHERMAN. The Senator from Washington can withdraw it if he desires to do so. Have the yeas and nays been ordered upon it?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The yeas and nays have not been ordered.

Mr. SHERMAN. The Senator from Washington has a right to withdraw his amendment, I submit.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks the Senator has a right to withdraw the amendment. The Chair was unable to hear from the Senator from Washington his request in the matter.

Mr. SQUIRE. I endeavored to state that my object was to withdraw the remaining portion of my proposed amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. He can do that.

Mr. SQUIRE. And I do so.

Mr. BERRY. I rise to a question of order. My understanding is that the yeas and nays were ordered upon the entire amendment.

Mr. CULLOM. Not at all.

Mr. BERRY. And thereafter the Senator from Washington asked for a division of the question. If the yeas and nays were ordered upon the entire amendment he can not withdraw it without unanimous consent.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Arkansas that the yeas and nays were ordered upon the first and second sections of the amendment, and the vote was then taken upon those two sections.

Mr. BERRY. Only on the first two sections?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. BERRY. I understood that the yeas and nays had been ordered on the entire amendment, and then there was a division afterward.

Mr. HARRIS. If the Senator from Arkansas will allow me I will state that there was but one question presented to the Senate after the division was demanded, as the Senator had a right to demand a division, and that was whether the Senate would agree to the first and second sections; and the yeas and nays were ordered upon that question, and upon no other question than that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair so stated to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. BERRY. Very well; I was mistaken. The proposition, then, I understand is withdrawn. The Senator from Washington declines to bring that to a vote?

Mr. SQUIRE. Certainly; the bond proposition is withdrawn, and also the proposition relative to the increase of national-bank circulation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Washington has withdrawn the remaining sections of his amendment.

Mr. ALLEN. I desire to appeal from the ruling of the Chair in permitting the Senator from Washington to withdraw his amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. HOAR. I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BUTLER. I gave notice of an amendment to the bill—the amendment providing for the repeal of what is known as the 10 per cent tax on State bank circulation. After consultation with the Senator from Indiana and other Senators favorable to the amendment, I have concluded not to press it upon the pending bill. I am assured by the Senator from Indiana that the Finance will give it prompt consideration as a separate measure, and report it to the Senate. Inasmuch as the indications are that it would be defeated here, possibly by the votes of some Senators who are in favor of it, I shall not insist upon it at this time, and ask leave to withdraw it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. PEPPER. I move an amendment to be inserted immediately after the repealing clause.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Add after the word "repealed" in line 13 of the amendment of the committee already agreed to:

That the Secretary of the Treasury shall, and he is hereby authorized and directed to cause to be prepared immediately Treasury notes to the amount of $250,000,000 and notes to be in form, dimensions, and general appearance similar to those which have been prepared under the law of March 3, 1879, of July 1, 1890. They shall be of the denominations of $5, $2, $1, 50¢, and 25¢, one-fifth part in value of the total issue to be in each of said denominations; they shall be lawful money; they shall be received as such by the Government of the United States, and the holders thereof, for taxes and all public dues, and they shall be lawful money and legal tender; at home have value in payment of debts to any amount whatever.

Sec. 2. That said notes shall be printed on paper of the same character, style, and grade as that now used for United States notes, they shall be printed in accordance with laws, rules, and regulations now in force applicable to such work, and as fast as they are ready for delivery they shall be paid out as the same as other public moneys.

Sec. 3. That when any of said notes are received in the Treasury in the course of business, they shall be reissued and thus kept in circulation.

Sec. 4. That this act shall take effect immediately after its passage.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the Senate will see from the language of the amendment that it simply proposes the issue of $250,000,000 of Treasury notes payable in lawful money, and that the notes shall be receivable for taxes and all public dues, and shall be legal tender in the payment of all debts to whatever amount.

Mr. BATE. We can not hear a word on this side.

Mr. PEPPER. The amendment provides for the issuance of $250,000,000 of Treasury notes in the denominations mentioned in the amendment, payable in lawful money, and it provides that they shall be receivable for taxes and all public dues and be legal tender in the payment of debts to any amount whatever. Whenever they are received in the Treasury in the regular course of business the amendment provides that they shall be reissued and kept in circulation; in other words, that they shall be placed as now is possible upon the plane of the greenbacks which are now in circulation.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator a question? Do I understand him to say that when these notes are issued they will themselves be lawful money?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOAR. Then if one of these notes, say a twenty-dollar note, be presented to the Treasury it will be redeemable in other notes of the same kind?

Mr. PEPPER. In lawful money.

Mr. HOAR. A twenty-dollar note issued under this amendment would be redeemable in the Treasury in ten-dollar notes, or five-dollar notes of the same issue.

Mr. PEPPER. Or anything less than lawful money.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator understands then that these notes being a legal tender—

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senator to speak louder; we can not hear him.

Mr. HOAR. I want to understand the financial theories of the Senator from Kansas. The Senator understands then that these notes are to be lawful money, as he has said, and therefore if one of them is presented to the Treasury, say a twenty-dollar note, it may be redeemed by the Treasury in ten-dollar, or five-dollar, or one-dollar notes of the same issue, as lawful money. Is that the Senator's purpose?

Mr. PEPPER. It may be paid in lawful money, whatever kind of lawful money the Treasury has on hand, which can be used for any purpose, no matter whether it be gold, silver, or notes.

Mr. HOAR. Or paper?

Mr. PEPPER. Or paper.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read again.

Mr. BATE. On this side of the Chamber we could not hear the explanation of the Senator from Kansas, and it is impossible to understand his amendment as read at the desk. We are called upon here to vote upon a proposition to issue $250,000,000, and I demand that we shall understand it before we set upon it. It has not been printed and laid on our tables. It seems to me we are legislating in the dark. This is a very important question. It has not been submitted to us in print, and I think it ought to be discussed. I suggest that it be printed and go over until Monday so that we may understand it. I make a motion to that effect.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair was unable to hear the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. BATE. I ask permission of the Senator from Kansas, who has introduced the amendment, to let it go over until Monday, and in the meantime have it printed that we may understand it. We have not been able to hear it on this side of the Chamber. I shall not vote on a measure involving $250,000,000 unless I understand it; and we have a right to understand it.

Mr. VOORHEES. The suggestion of the Senator from Tennessee calls for a statement from me which I have been thinking of making at intervals of this afternoon.

I should like to get the amendments behind us this afternoon if we can, running on to a reasonable, not an unreasonable hour this evening, voting upon amendments and disposing of them. I should not like to have amendments go over until Monday. Though it may be that one or two may do so, I would rather not.

I desire to state, not by way of asking for an agreement, for I understand there is an agreement on the floor, but I wish to seem to be a party to any agreement as to the time to vote, that I expect and hope and shall ask for a vote at 2 o'clock on Monday upon the main bill. I give this notice so that Senators may govern themselves accordingly as to their presence here, and as to what they may want to do in regard to the measure.

But in the meantime, and until an hour or so hence, I should be glad to dispose of all the amendments we can, so that they shall not be in our way on Monday. I think we can very reasonably expect to dispose of the bill Monday afternoon, and I mention Monday at 2 o'clock as a reasonable time. It might run along until 4. I shall earnestly expect and ask for a vote on Monday afternoon upon the bill, so that we may have it behind us.

Mr. MILLS. Let us vote on the pending amendment now.

Mr. FRYE. Yes; let us vote on the amendment.

Mr. VOORHEES. I hope a vote will be taken now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. PEPPER. The request made by the Senator from Tennessee to have the amendment laid over until Monday morning and in the meantime printed I think is a very proper one. I do not believe that it will delay the proceedings at all for I think that if it is printed the Senators can have a little time to read it they will be prepared to vote upon it without a moment's discussion, and I shall have nothing whatever to say. I hope that the request of the Senator from Tennessee will be granted.

Mr. HARRIS. I want to ask the Senator if his amendment is not already in print? [Exhibiting copy of S. 595, introduced by Mr. PEPPER.] Has he modified it or changed it since it was printed?

Mr. PEPPER. No. I do not think it has been modified. Since the Senator calls my attention to it, it is in print, so that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE] can have it by asking a page to go for it. I had forgotten about it.

Mr. HOAR. I do not desire to prolong the debate, and I do not intend to do so; but I think it is important, after the part the Senator from Kansas has taken in the various discussions, that we should understand and the country should understand the financial theory which he represents.

This is a proposition to issue $250,000,000 of currency, to be legal tender for all debts, past and future, which is to be redeemable in itself. The Government is to be under no obligation to issue a $20 bill of this currency so issued be taken to the Treasury for redemption, to redeem it in anything except two $10 bills, or four $5 bills, or twenty $1 bills of the same issue, the same kind of money.

So it is irredeemable money, pure and simple. It differs from the greenbacks of the war (which it was intended to redeem which the Government had the power) by declaring on its face in substance that it is never to be redeemed, that is, unless the Government please; that there shall never be any obligation to redeem it. I think it important (as I have put the question to the Senator whether that is his meaning and he has answered that it is) that his views should be understood.

Mr. PEPPER. In answer to the Senator from Massachusetts, I will state to him and to the Senate that my views are precisely the same as those of the Secretary Chase, President Lincoln and all the great men of that time who were the fathers of the kind of currency of which I hold a sample in my hands. I read upon the face of it as follows:

The United States will pay to bearer one dollar.

Nothing more; nothing less. That is my theory; that is my argument.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator will pardon me, his proposition is in substance that the United States will not pay to bearer $1. Mr. PEPPER. Then this is a lie on the greenback, Mr. President.

Mr. DOLPH. The position of the Senator from Kansas is that the Government shall issue its promissory note, and when it is presented for payment it shall be paid by giving another promissory note of the same kind, the same tenor, issued at the same time; that it shall be paid by giving another note, paying another promise or renewing its note. But I think the Senator from Kansas is getting inconsistent with himself. If I have understood his argument during this long discussion, it has been that the stamp of the Government and the legal tender quality of money are what give it value, and it is not necessary that it shall be redeemable at all. Why he should put in here a provision for redemption if he is going to have it put in by the Government issued to serve as money I can not understand.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, this is the legitimate fruit of the destruction of one of the precious metals. It presents an issue which you can not avoid, and an issue which has been accepted by other countries. It is irredeemable paper or no money. When you destroy the money of redemption the people must have money and they are forced to accept paper money, to pay taxes, to buy irredeemable money. She circulates no gold and very little silver, but issues irredeemable paper, and has prosperity. The English Government has undertaken to have between $1,000,000,000 and $1,200,000,000 of irredeemable money in India. Everybody knows that after having destroyed silver as a value money there is nothing in which to redeem the rupee and rupee paper of India except the rupee paper money, and that is true. There is no redeemable in anything but itself; and all of the discussion in regard to the redemption of the rupee has been to the effect that it was impossible for them to get gold and put it behind the circulating medium of India.

We have agreed to dispense with silver. There is now no way of giving the people money except to create paper money of ultimate payment. In other words, paper money which is not redeemable in gold or debt, but is itself money; and that is money before the country. The people will not submit to putting out paper, which is a promise to redeem, when there is nothing with which to redeem it. In this Hall we hear to-day of buying gold to redeem both paper and silver, to enrich the few and enslave the many. That has been the song all along. That is the song of the speculator who has gold to sell or has bonds payable in gold, which are gold in substance. His object is to make money scarce and dear, but the American people will have money. You have destroyed the kind of money in which paper was redeemable; and it is idle to talk about redeeming it in something that does not exist or can not be procured.

It has been admitted by all the financiers for years that there was not gold enough. Your Secretaries of the Treasury have admitted that. Nobody ever had gold enough to redeem the debt that there is not gold enough for the purposes of redemption. Then why talk of redemption when you have no material in which to redeem? You have destroyed your material of redemption, and the only logical result is to let the paper redeem itself. We must have money.

This is the legitimate offspring of the demonetization of silver. The only use of gold and silver is limitation of quantity. We reported in the amendment reported by the Senator from Indiana, I am not in the Committee. I am sure, which has been agreed to by Mr. PEPPER. Very well, let it be repeated again, if the Senate is disposed to do it. I ask for the yeas and nays upon agreeing to the amendment.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PETTIBONE]. The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HARRIS. I believe I will ask the Secretary to read an amendment that I gave notice I would offer, but I do not think I shall ask the Senate at this late hour to vote upon it. It is an amendment that I prepared in a broad spirit of compromise, not even satisfactory to myself, but I want to put it on record.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The SECRETARY. Strike out all from line 14, page 2, to line 20, inclusive, and insert the following:

"SEC. 2. That every all the coinage as provided for in the act of March 3, 1875, shall be coined in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, and the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, shall be applied to the coinage of the United States."

"SEC. 3. That every all the coinage as provided for in the act of March 3, 1875, shall be coined in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, and the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, shall be applied to the coinage of the United States."

"SEC. 4. That every all the coinage as provided for in the act of March 3, 1875, shall be coined in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, and the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, shall be applied to the coinage of the United States."

"SEC. 5. That every all the coinage as provided for in the act of March 3, 1875, shall be coined in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, and the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, shall be applied to the coinage of the United States."

"SEC. 6. That every all the coinage as provided for in the act of March 3, 1875, shall be coined in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, and the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, shall be applied to the coinage of the United States."

"SEC. 7. That every all the coinage as provided for in the act of March 3, 1875, shall be coined in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, and the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, shall be applied to the coinage of the United States."

Mr. HARRIS. I left the blank as to the amount of silver that should be monthly purchased and coined in order that any or every Senator might test the sense of the Senate as to such amount. But knowing as I know now that the decree has been entered that no amendment of any character is to be made to the bill, I will not subject the Senate to a vote upon my amendment in any phase of it. I decline to offer it or to ask a vote upon it, but simply desire to put it upon record as an amendment suggested in a broad spirit of compromise on a question about which there are very honest differences of opinion. It is not entirely satisfactory to myself, and I suppose would not be entirely satisfactory to any other Senator.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there is no further amendment as in Committee of the Whole the bill will be reported to the Senate.

Mr. STEWART. I hope that will not be done. The Senator from Indiana does not propose to take a final vote on the bill tonight.

Mr. VOORHEES. No, but let me suggest to the Senator from Nevada that it be reported to the Senate, and it will be amendable in the Senate just as much as now. Let it be reported to the Senate, and then we will go on with it Monday morning.

Mr. STEWART. Very well.

Mr. FAULKNER. I suggest to the Senator from Nevada, that if there is no objection, it would be well to let the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole be concurred in in the Senate and then stop there, so that it will be open fully to amendment on Monday.

Mr. STEWART. And stand as the original bill?

Mr. VOORHEES. That is right.

Mr. PASCO. I have an amendment to submit which I desire to have printed, and I shall offer it on Monday morning. I have no objection to the arrangement suggested by the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. VOORHEES. Let it be printed.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be printed.

Mr. PASCO. I send the amendment to the desk and ask that it be printed.

Mr. VOORHEES. It need not be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida desire to have the amendment read?

Mr. PASCO. No; I do not ask to have it read. Let it be printed also in the RECORD.

The amendment introduced to be proposed by Mr. PASCO is as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"SECTION 1. That a commission, to be composed of three citizens of the United States, shall be appointed by the President, at, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to receive and determine by the aid of judges of law, the value of the coinage as provided for in the act of March 3, 1875, and the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, shall be applied to the coinage of the United States."

"SEC. 2. That the coinage as provided for in the act of March 3, 1875, shall be coined in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, and the provisions of the act of March 3, 1875, shall be applied to the coinage of the United States."

"SEC. 3. That any holder of the coins authorized by this act, may, after the expiration of the term of the commission, deliver the same to the Secretary of the Treasury, and receive therefor the same amount of silver dollars as the value of the coins as determined by the commission, and the said silver dollars so received shall be subject to the requirements of existing law and the regulations of the mint and coinage department for the redemption of the same into silver dollars, and the said silver dollars so received shall be subject to the requirements of existing law and the regulations of the mint and coinage department for the redemption of the same into silver dollars."

"SEC. 4. That the silver dollar deposited for coinage purposes under the provisions of this act shall be subject to the requirements of existing law and the regulations of the mint and coinage department for the redemption of the same into silver dollars, and the said silver dollars so received shall be subject to the requirements of existing law and the regulations of the mint and coinage department for the redemption of the same into silver dollars."

"SEC. 5. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall, within two years from and after the passage of this act, cause all the silver dollars of the United States heretofore minted, as well as the Treasury notes issued under the act of March 3, 1875, to be withdrawn from circulation by exchanging the same, or causing the same to be exchanged at their nominal value for silver certificates of like denominations, representing silver coins of the same weight and value as the silver dollars so withdrawn, and the said silver certificates shall be in all respects similar to those provided for in the preceding section, and shall like them be receivable for customs, taxes, and public dues, and when received may be reissued, and that on and after the expiration of the two years above mentioned all the silver dollars as well as the Treasury notes issued under the law of July 13, 1836, shall be legal tender."

"SEC. 6. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to adopt such rules and regulations, in accordance with the coinage laws of the United States, as may be necessary to enforce the provisions of this act."

"SEC. 7. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to adopt such rules and regulations, in accordance with the coinage laws of the United States, as may be necessary to enforce the provisions of this act."

"SEC. 8. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to adopt such rules and regulations, in accordance with the coinage laws of the United States, as may be necessary to enforce the provisions of this act."

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment made as in Committee of the Whole will be considered as concurred in if there be no objection.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the vote be taken upon concurring in the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the bill is in the Senate, and the question is upon concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. VOORHEES. Which was the report of the Finance Committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Which was the report of the Finance Committee.

The amendment was concurred in.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. VOORHEES. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After fifteen minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and at 5 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m., Saturday, October 28, the Senate, on motion of Mr. VOORHEES, took a recess until Monday, October 30, 1893, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate October 23, 1893.

CONSULS.

Jacob E. Dart, of Georgia, to be consul of the United States at Guadeloupe, West Indies, to fill a vacancy.

some of my colleagues. The people will yet prevail. If the fight shall be made distinctively for free coinage, an overwhelming majority will be returned to both branches of Congress, which will not dare disobey the mandates of the people, nor will any President feel justified in opposing their will. When he does, then the outlook for the Republic will be dismal indeed.

I can be a Republican, and a consistent advocate of free coinage. So one can be a Democrat or Populist and be equally true to silver. While the provocation is great to resort to the vendetta in politics, inasmuch as we have been stabbed in the house of our friends, I prefer to hold to my convictions on the other great questions while maintaining my convictions on the money question, relying on the good sense, judgment, and independence of the American people.

So long as I am honored with a seat in this Chamber I shall continue this fight. I shall not cease the struggle here until free coinage shall prevail or I am no longer a member of the Senate. If any of my colleagues think that I have been unduly aggressive or lacking in the observances of proper conventionalities, they have but a faint appreciation of the misery which this act will bring to my people. It is unjust and unmerited, and will rankle in their souls, but they will bear it with an equanimity worthy of the brave spirits who have subdued the frontier, founded States, and benefited mankind by their energy and self-denial.

What they we do temporarily I know not, nor can I bear to contemplate the near future which is in store for them. If you could imagine every manufactory in New Jersey, Connecticut, or Massachusetts closed suddenly and without warning; if you could imagine the commerce in New York City destroyed; if you could imagine the coal fields of Pennsylvania or the granite quarries of Vermont closed, without any warning being given to those who are dependent upon these great industries to prepare for the change, you would then have but a faint idea of the effect of your action upon the people of our country. You paralyze them. Yet they will continue to be manly, self-reliant, honest, patriotic, and charitable. Their difficulties will be increased, multiplied, and prolonged. Their energies and virtues will be tried to the uttermost. The weak will sink, but the strong will stand more erect and with clearer consciences than many a one who strikes this cruel and unexpected blow.

Mr. PASCO. Mr. President, I gave notice on Saturday afternoon last of an amendment that I desired to propose. If it is now in order, I should like to have it read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read.
Mr. PASCO. It is in the nature of a substitute for the bill. I am aware that until the bill shall be perfected a substitute will not be in order. Therefore, if there are any other amendments which Senators desire to propose, they can proceed. If there are none other I desire to offer my substitute at this time, and ask that it be read.

Mr. STEWART. I have another amendment which I desire to offer for the reduction of the gold in our gold coinage 25 per cent. I ask that the amendment be read at the desk, and then I shall give a word of explanation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add to the bill the following:

That the gold coins of the United States shall be a one-dollar piece, a quarter eagle or two-and-a-half-dollar piece, a three-dollar piece, a half eagle or five-dollar piece, and a ten-dollar piece, and a double eagle or twenty-dollar piece; and the weight of standard gold of the gold dollar shall be 19.35 grains; of the quarter eagle or two-and-a-half-dollar piece, 48.375 grains; of the three-dollar piece, 58.05 grains; of the half eagle or five-dollar piece, 96.75 grains; of the eagle or ten-dollar piece, 193.50 grains; of the double eagle or twenty-dollar piece, 387.00 grains, which coins shall be a legal tender in all payments at their nominal value.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, it has been demonstrated by statisticians that in Europe and America, as well as in Asia, gold has appreciated in the last twenty years at least 50 per cent; also that such appreciation is the result, to a great extent if not wholly, of the legislation against silver, legislation dispensing with the use of silver, thereby throwing an additional demand upon gold and enhancing its value.

It has been suggested in many of the arguments that improved appliances of production had occasioned a portion of the fall in the prices of commodities and of the advance in the price of gold. That, however, was seriously combated, so far as the staple articles are concerned, and I think successfully; but the statistics of China, where there has been no improved method of production, and where transportation and production are conducted in the same manner as they were a thousand years ago, we find the same appreciation of gold.

I do not propose to right the entire wrong, but an increase of 50 per cent in the obligations of all existing contracts, which amounts to an enormous sum, to many thousand millions of dollars, is manifestly unjust. I think if we now redress a part of the wrong, and, instead of reducing the amount of gold in gold coin 50 per cent, we reduce it 25 per cent, we shall grant a just relief to that extent, and a very necessary relief if justice is to be maintained in this country. No person will have a right to complain, because the obligations or bonds of the United States are payable in gold or silver coin of standard value of July 14, 1870. There is an abundance of silver coin to meet those obligations, and if there were not, there is gold enough already coined for that purpose. So far as the equity between the debtor and creditor is concerned, certainly this is a measure of justice.

I offer this amendment entirely on my own responsibility, having consulted no Senator about it. I do not know that any Senator except myself will vote for it; but I ask that the Senate allow me to have the yeas and nays so that I may record my own vote in favor of this measure of justice.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada. [Putting the question.] The yeas have it and the amendment is rejected.

Mr. STEWART. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. STEWART. I withdraw the demand for the yeas and nays upon the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no objection the order for the yeas and nays will be withdrawn.

Mr. VOORHEES. I understand the Senator from Florida [Mr. PASCO] has an amendment which he desires to offer. If there is no other amendment pending, his amendment will be in order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is no other amendment pending.

Mr. PASCO. I ask that my proposed amendment be read

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. That, a commission, to be composed of three members of the United States, shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to ascertain and determine by the 1st day of January, 1877, the relative value of the silver dollar, as compared with the silver and gold, as a basis for the future coinage of silver, as hereinafter provided, without discrimination against either metal or charge for coinage, and to report the result reached by them as soon as practicable after the date of their appointment, and that the said report shall contain the value of the intrinsic value. And the said commission shall report to the Secretary of the Treasury the result reached by them as soon as practicable after the date of their appointment, and that the said report shall contain the value of the pure and standard silver to be contained in the silver dollar, authorized to be coined by this act, according to the said report, and the said silver dollar shall be coined in conformity with the said report, and the said standard and weight thus fixed and determined by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 2. That the coins mentioned in the previous section shall have on them the devices and superscriptions provided for coins of like denomination now coined, and shall be legal tender at their nominal value for all debts and dues, public and private, except when otherwise expressly stipulated by contract; and any owner of silver bullion may deposit the same at the mints of the United States to be coined into dollars of the fineness and weight fixed in accordance with the provisions of the first section of this act.

in accordance with the provisions of the first section of this act.

SEC. 3. That any holder of the coins authorized by this act may, after the 1st day of March, 1891, take the same with the Treasurer or any assistant, and deposit the same in the United States Treasury for and to receive therefor certificates of not less than $10 each, corresponding with the denominations of the United States notes. The coin deposited or representing the certificate shall be retained in the Treasury for the payment of the same on demand. Said certificates shall be receivable for customs, taxes, and all public dues, and when received may be reissued.

SEC. 4. That the silver bullion deposited for coinage purposes under the provisions of this act shall be subject to the requirements of existing law and the regulations of the mint service governing the methods of determining the amount of pure silver contained and the amount of charges or deductions, if any, to be made.

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall, within 7 years from and after the passage of this act, cause all the silver dollars of the United States heretofore minted, as well as the Treasury notes issued under the law of July 11, 1890, to be withdrawn from circulation by exchanging the same for silver certificates of the United States, and for Treasury certificates of like denominations, representing silver coins of the weight and fineness provided by this act; and the silver certificates thus issued shall be in all respects similar to those provided for in the preceding section, and shall like them be receivable for customs, taxes, and public dues, and shall be receivable for all other purposes, and shall be as good as the same when first issued; and silver coins not on and after the expiration of the two years above mentioned, and silver certificates not on and after the expiration of the two years above mentioned, shall be legal tender for all purposes of the law of July 11, 1890, in which case the legal tender

SEC. 6. That all silver dollars coined prior to the passage of this act shall be recoined as early as practicable into coins of the same denomination of the weight and fineness authorized by section 1 of this act.

SEC. 7. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to adopt such rules and regulations, in accordance with the coinage laws of the United States, as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act.

Sec. 8. That a sum sufficient to carry out the provisions of this act is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise so appropriated

SEC. 9. That the act entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes," approved July 14, 1890, and all other acts and parts of acts authorizing the purchase of silver bullion for the purpose of coining the same into silver dollars be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PASCO. I desire the attention of the Senate for a few moments while I explain my amendment.

Mr. President, I stated in my speech on the 27th of September may not be able to agree that the question shall be taken to-morrow at 1 o'clock on the bill.

Mr. HARRIS. I have no authority to answer for anyone but myself. I have been ready for days, I am ready now, I shall be ready at all times to take a final vote upon this question, but the purpose we have adopted of taking a recess, and letting our RECORD show that every act of the Senate has been of the date of the 17th of October when not of that day, but of many other days, is utterly absurd. I am not in favor myself of presenting an obstacle to action on the bill, but I move that the Senate now adjourn until to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

Mr. VOOHREES. Mr. President—

Mr. FAULKNER. If the Senator from Tennessee will permit me, just before—

Mr. HARRIS. I will permit the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee withdraw the motion to adjourn?

Mr. HARRIS. I do not.

Mr. FAULKNER. Temporarily?

Mr. HARRIS. Oh, I withdraw it for the purpose of hearing the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. FAULKNER. I understand that the Senator withdraws his motion temporarily to let me reply to the suggestion of the Senator from Vermont. I am satisfied that no agreement can be made for a vote at any particular time.

Mr. HARRIS. There is no possibility of such an agreement. Mr. FAULKNER. I have myself so learned from individual Senators, and therefore the whole question is whether we shall complete the bill to-night. As I stated before the Senator from Indiana came in, who has charge of the measure, I know it is his desire and purpose, if he has the majority at his back, to finish the consideration of the bill before an adjournment or a recess.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I withdrew my motion in deference to the wish of the Senator from West Virginia, but—

Mr. MORRILL. I shall withdraw my suggestion entirely.

Mr. HARRIS. It is 6 o'clock and 25 minutes. I do not choose to sit here later. There is time to decide this question. There has been no disposition indicated to postpone it. I move that the Senate adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee again withdraw his motion?

Mr. HARRIS. I withdraw it in order that the Senator from New York—

Mr. ALDRICH, Mr. WASHBURN, and others. Regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Tennessee, that the Senate adjourn until to-morrow at 11 o'clock. (Putting the question.) The yeas appear to have it.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I withdrew the motion.

Mr. VOOHREES. May I say one word?

Mr. HARRIS. I withdrew the motion in order that the Senator from New York might express his opinion, but if—

Mr. VOOHREES. I wish to say one word?

Mr. HARRIS. But if the question is to be determined, it shall be determined upon the yeas and nays on the demand of one-fifth of a quorum.

Mr. VOOHREES. The Senator from Tennessee is out of order in debating a motion to adjourn.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from Tennessee is not out of order.

Mr. VOOHREES. The Senator from Tennessee is out of order in debating a motion to adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair desires to say—

Mr. HARRIS. I call the Senator from Indiana to order.

Mr. VOOHREES. Nobody knows as well as the Senator from Tennessee that he is out of order.

Mr. HARRIS. I am not out of order.

Mr. VOOHREES. He knows he is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair appeals to Senators to be in order.

Mr. HARRIS. I yielded to the Senator from West Virginia to make a suggestion and withdrew the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair desires in justice to himself to say that he did not understand the Senator from Tennessee when he withdrew his motion to adjourn. The Chair thought the motion was still pending, and therefore put the question, but if there was no motion made the Chair was in error in that respect, and of course the vote goes for naught. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. VOOHREES. I desire to say one word by unanimous consent.

Mr. HARRIS. I withdraw the motion to adjourn in order that the Senator from Indiana may be heard.

Mr. VOOHREES. We have been here a long time. It will take but a little while now to conclude our business and put this whole contest behind us—not over three-quarters of an hour at the outside. I have said all day, and I say now, not in any unreasonable spirit, but in the most natural spirit in the world, that I desire a vote on this question before we adjourn; and if a majority of the Senate will stay with me for the next hour, or until the discussion is ended, we shall end this controversy and put it behind us. I trust that nobody desires to go away under these circumstances.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, this has been a very great controversy, a controversy that affects the interests of every American citizen, upon one side of which capital and capitalistic influence have asserted and controlled power, upon the other side of which nine-tenths of the American people are opposed to capitalistic influence. This controversy will be ended in favor of capitalistic influence.

Mr. JONES of Nevada. Mr. President—

Mr. HARRIS. I shall interpose no dilatory motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada addresses the Chair. The Senator from Tennessee, the Chair understands, occupies the floor by the courtesy of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from Nevada was entitled to the floor and yielded to me. If the Senator from Nevada claims it, I yield.

Mr. JONES of Nevada. I should like to proceed. It will take me but fifteen minutes to finish what I have to say.

Mr. HARRIS. I yield, of course, because I occupied the floor by the courtesy of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. JONES of Nevada. I am very much obliged to the Senator from Tennessee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada will proceed.

[Mr. JONES of Nevada resumed and concluded his speech. See Appendix.]

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I shall occupy about fifteen minutes of the time of the Senate, and no more. I do not feel that I should have performed all of my duty in this great discussion. I did not enter in more my protest against the passage of the pending bill, which, in my humble judgment, is the crowning injury of this century.

Mr. President, I voted against most of the amendments proposed because they discriminate against silver. Had these amendments been proposed by the other side and at the beginning of the debate, I would have considered it carefully, and in case nothing better could have been secured, I might have consented to vote for them, because in that event they would have come to us in a spirit of fairness, and we could not have doubted the sincerity of their advocates.

But they did not come to us in that way. The friends of the bill are opposed to any and to all amendments. When the Democratic members of the Senate, by a majority of 37 to 7, agreed upon a compromise bill to be substituted for the committee's bill, and when everybody believed an adjustment of party differences was at hand and that the end of dispute was near, the Executive veto was published in advance, the hopes of party unity, and the gloom of despair, a majority was silenced, and the Administration was compelled to accept the aid of Republican Senators in order to avoid utter and ignominious defeat at the hands of the men who placed it in power.

I would not have voted for that proposed compromise and for much the same reason that I did not vote for these amendments. I refer to it only to show the imperious spirit in which the bill was thrust upon us and the lightness with which they attempt to compromise the case made by the President.

Mr. President, I wish to reveal a statement made in the early part of the discussion, that the movement which brought this detestable and destructive measure here is the crowning infamy of the century. Party traditions had to be ignored in order to give it introduction here, and the convictions of a lifetime had to be violated in order to give it support. Of the 44 Democratic Senators only 7 favor unconditional repeal, and at least 3 of these 7 had always until recently been free-coinage men.

Party platforms declare for bimetalism, but the Senate proposes for establishment monometallism; parties declare in favor of preserving parity between the money metals, and the Senate throws one of them overboard to find its price level in the open market with wheat and corn and cotton; parties declare in favor of preserving and maintaining the equal value and purchasing power of all the different classes of our currency circulation, but when a proposition is submitted to incorporate the party pledges with law, it has not support enough in the Senate to second a demand for yeas and nays upon it. The Senator from Indiana, chairman of the Finance Committee, who has charge of the bill, told us Saturday that he does not intend to be bound by his votes in opposition to amendments proposed to the bill. He voted against a free-coinage amendment; he voted against a limited-coinage amendment; he voted against each and all the other amendments. And he says he will not be bound by these votes.

Mr. President, he will be bound by them. He can not escape the responsibility. What the Senator has said in this debate is not lost, nor will it be dissipated by time. The record is made of it and it will remain. No recantation will ever satisfy either him or the people at large. The present course has been deliberately chosen. He marked it out for himself. The brief sketch of that Senator's life, as it appears in the Congressional Directory, shows that his great speech in favor of the free coinage of silver money, delivered in this Chamber on the 14th day of January, 1878, endeared him more than ever to the good people of Indiana, and they gave testimony of their good will by greatly increasing his party strength at the next election. That speech was a powerful philippic against the classes that he even now charges with manufacturing the panic which brought us here at this unusual time. That speech has not been excelled at any time in invective and in virulent denunciation. From the mouth of a Populist such a speech would condemn him as an Anarchist.

The speech referred to will be found on pages 331 and 338 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, under date of January 15, 1878. I shall not detain the Senate long enough to read even the two paragraphs which I have marked, but will ask permission of the Senate to incorporate them in my remarks.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kansas? The Chair hears none.

The extracts referred to are as follows:

In far distant times generations now unborn while examining the sources of the burdens that have descended to them will read the charge made in this day's history by the late Senator from Kansas. They will see that the members, as destitute of conscience as pirates, and inspired alone by greed for money, successfully thundered at these doors, and finally perpetrated robbery even more than the most stuporous act of the most hardened robber. Sir, for ever practiced upon any people since the dawn of history. Five hundred millions made by the great robbers of the world have been poured into the plow and the machine who have it all to pay.

And yet the authors, the instigators, the abettors of this crime, and the participants in it, are still in the land. They are still in the land, and they will, and point their fingers, stained with plunder, at honest men as repudiators, because they believe that a contract for the benefit of the people should be held sacred and inviolable. Sir, the bondholder, Sir, for ever practice on this point has ceased to be a virtue. Those who have at all times labored to keep the faith of the Government with its citizens and its creditors alike can not submit to the present course of the Government. The whole country added to national plunder. In some countries the habit prevails of building a cairn, a pile of stones, to mark the spot where some tragic event has happened. Let us build a cairn of stones to mark the place where, on March, 1899, is cited each east a stone upon it to mark the place in American history where reputation began, and where the rights of the people were mercilessly and treacherously slaughtered.

And in every form in which the English language can be used the American people, and especially the people of the West, have been notified, not that their consent will be asked, but that they will be compelled to submit to the legislation which results in this British system of baronial landed estates, a dependent tenantry and pauper wages for the workman. Sir, I have no word to measure to utter on this door but, in the name of every laborer, and every owner of the soil whom I represent, I warn all such as value their investments that when these doctrines of despotism are sought to be enforced, this fair land will again be convulsed in agony, and the area of misery will blaze forth again, as they did a hundred years ago, in defense of the natural rights of man. May the God of our fathers, who has blessed our country, and avert such a crisis, but if it all come, if infatuation has misled our councils, the result will only add one more instance to the long catalogue of human crime and agony, and the people will be left to place their life, and in its untimely attempt to rob others of their possessions losses its own.

Mr. PEPPER. No, Mr. President, the men to whom the people justly looked for help in this great struggle with the most powerful and dangerous influence among men, will be held to a strict accountability for the part they have taken here.

Mr. President, we all listened with profound sympathy to the pathetic words of the senior Senator from Colorado Friday, and to the forceful eloquence of his colleague the next day. They described pictures which were coming in his vision, and he painted the future. My heart goes out to them in this hour of darkness. But brave men as they are, strong and full of courage, they know that all is not lost. They are big enough to see beyond the horizon of their own State. They look far enough to see the fertile fields of Kansas, of Nebraska, the Dakotas, and of all the great country, and they know that the vast armies of toilers in every department of industry are suffering with the millions of the world which follow the legislation of this session of Congress. Silver mining is but part, and a small part, even of the mining industry; and miners can soon adjust themselves to changed conditions.

But farmers are tied to the soil. They must stay in and take what comes. Their homes are at stake.

Agricultural communities will suffer more than what of evil is in store for the country. They will let me say to miners, to farmers, and to all the rest of our toiling millions, we need not long endure the burdens which this legislation places on our shoulders.

We have within ourselves every element of the power needed to throw off the yoke. We need only to husband our resources and organize our voters. This sixty days' debate has unmasked the power which oppresses. We now see the hand that smites us. Money is king!

Money alone of all things has a value set upon it and maintained by law. Its owners are permitted to lend it at rates of interest many times higher than the average net profits on labor. It is usury, in one form or another, that is transferring wealth from the people who produce it to those who own nothing.

This debate has disclosed the falsehoods of old party platforms and the hollowness of old party promises, and it has brought to light the secret forces of party patronage.

The great manufacturers, the great railroad managers, the great bankers, the stockjobbers, the brokers, the usurers, and all classes that feed and fatten on the profits of other men's toil—these are for the passage of this bill.

The senior Senator from New Jersey Saturday said that the honor of this victory of the money power over the people will be shared jointly by the President of the United States and the senior Senator from Ohio. Who will want to deny the correctness of the prediction? Who is there to dispute the fitness of these two distinguished men to enjoy this inheritance? If they can extend any consolation out to the industrious and the malcontents of an outraged people, in the name of God let them have it.

We have seen that all the great industries which have been encouraged and protected by the Government, and all the great agencies for extracting profits that have been permitted to grow up among us, have taken sides against the people. We have seen that wherever the Government has been most lavish in its expenditures, wherever it has done the most to foster and develop industry and commerce there the most powerful combination against every demand of the people whose labor is constantly pouring trade through the channels of commerce. What are called the "business interests" have all the care of Congress, and these "business interests" are the personal interests of a few hundred speculators on the commercial exchanges. We have uncovered the banking system and shown its defects, its evils, and its dangerous tendencies.

We have seen that the Government is in partnership with the banks; that the Treasury Department is a member of the New York bank clearing house; that public moneys have been deposited by millions in national bank depositories when there was no need of it. We have seen that high premium has been paid by the Government for its own bonds; that interest has been advanced on bonds not due, and that these premiums have amounted to hundreds of millions of dollars. We have seen that banks have been conducted in open violation of law, with the knowledge of all men, with the sanction and approval of the Administration, and with the open indorsement of the Senate. We have seen that these "business interests" are to be protected at all hazards, and that no appeal from the wealth producers is to be heard.

Mr. President, we insist on the use of both gold and silver as money, and demand both coined freely and on equal terms, without discrimination in favor of or against either metal, just as the laws provided before the rule of the money-managers began. To assent to some form of compromise, if proposed by the friends of the bill, might not be inappropriate, for it would be a concession on both sides and might result in good. But to propose and urge a proposition less than that are entitled to when we know that the great evil of the country is to place ourselves in the attitude of suppliants at the feet of power.

Mr. President, I represent a constituency that is not craven, and they would despise their representative if he were such. Kansas was born in the dawn of the last revolution; she stands in the vanguard of this. Her beautiful prairies are populated by an industrious and heroic people. Within the lifetime of our generation they have come and a wide empire has planted the seeds of the highest form of civilization there. They have done more than any equal number of men in the same length of time anywhere on earth. Their achievements have no parallel in the history of settlement. Misfortunes do not discourage them; they are ready for any emergency. They are brave men; they hate cowards and loathe traitors. They have not yet bartered their birthright, and they do not now propose to compromise with the forces of evil.

Kansas will take care of herself, sir. With her sisters, North, South, East, and West, in the valleys of the greatest rivers of the continent, we furnish the larger part of our foreign commerce—and it matters not to us where our customers for this surplus dwell.

If our trade is of no consequence to our Eastern neighbors, we have the great element to the south of us. We can shorten the distance to foreign markets and cheapen the cost of transportation by shipping our surplus products through ports on the Gulf of Mexico. We now have vast areas of fertile lands under cultivation, with a rapidly increasing population; and year by year we are increasing the amount of our contributions to the commerce of the world. The great interstate railway from North Dakota to Galveston Bay would drain a great region that now sends its trade across the Mississippi River eastward on its way to Liverpool and London. We shall soon be able to reclaim the semiarid lands west of us and populate them with small farmers whose labor will add to our output.

Our lands produce cotton and flax and other fibrous plants, useful in the manufacture of cloth and cordage. There is no better region for the growth of sheep and wool. We have timber, iron, coal, lead, zinc, copper, tin, silver, and gold. Southern iron and cotton cloth are produced as cheaply as anywhere; and lumber can be made without the aid of duties on the foreign product. Surely if our trade is not wanted East we can manage in a few years to accommodate ourselves to that state of fact. We have votes enough to change the financial policy of the Government and get rid of the usurer and extortioner, when money will be abundant and ready on call to move the crops and meet our pecuniary obligations.

We shall always be able to take care of ourselves, and now that we have notice served upon us that the interests of the money centers of the East are more important than the commerce of the West and South, we need not further trouble ourselves about protective tariffs nor tariffs for revenue. If rich men have determined that this Government was established for their benefit, let them bear the burdens of national taxation. Let tariff duties be levied only on luxuries, the rest of the needed revenue for Government uses be raised by taxes on large landed estates and on incomes above the line of a fair living.

Yes, Mr. President, God reigns and the Republic will live to encourage and to bless mankind. The law of progress will impel us forward and we shall rise as we go. But we must contend with all the powers of evil. Evolution comes through storms and wreckage. A great struggle now approaches—it is at hand even now. His horizon is narrow, indeed, who does not see a free and happy people rising.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, the die is cast. The surreptitious and fraudulent act of 1873 demonetizing silver is ratified and confirmed. The gold kings are victorious. The labors of their champion, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], at the Paris conference in 1871 and in the Halls of Congress in 1873, to destroy the people's money are crowned with success. The repeal of an act already nullified by Executive usurpation is decreed to exonerate the Secretary of the Treasury from the consequences of an unconstitutional law in relation to the demonetization of 16 million ounces of silver per month commanded by the act of 1873.

The interest on Gladstone's growing fabric of bonded debt heretofore "unknown in the history of the world" may now absorb the wealth of America. The allied power of bonds and national banks has won a great victory.

The Trojan horse of the gold kings, bedecked with flaming banners upon which were inscribed, "Democracy," "Bimetallism," "Local Self-Government," "Reduction of Taxation," and "Civil-Service Reform," to conceal the monometallic guns of concentrated money and bonds, made a triumphal entrance into the nation's capital. The people opened wide the gates, and millions sang hosanna to "Greeks bearing gifts."

And all the people came up after him, and the people piped with pipes and rejoiced with great joy, so that the earth rent with the sound of them.

A day of jubilee was proclaimed and a Democratic national love feast prepared. The new recruits and the scar-worn veterans of the Democracy from every State and Territory in this broad land made haste to reach the festive board of Federal patronage.

Armed Greeks from out the Trojan horse blocked every avenue of approach to all who bore true allegiance to the people's cause. Jeffersonian and Jacksonian Democrats retired with shame, while the Hessians, recruited for plunder and spoils, feasted and made merry at the national banquet and swore allegiance to the prophet of Wall street.

The veteran Greeks, reinforced by camp-followers, office-seekers, national banks, a venal press, and other agents of the gold trust, rallied under the banner of the prophet of false pretense and hypocrisy, and gave battle for concentrated capital against labor and production.

They have captured the fort and dispersed the defenders of the people. But, unlike ancient Troy, Washington is not the only stronghold of the American people. The betrayal and capture of the White House and the two Houses of Congress is not the end of the war. There are other citadels and other strongholds in this country besides those who rule in Wall street and at the capital of the nation. The honeyed words, the false promises, and the glittering banners of the gold aristocracy have lost their power of deception. The experiment of the Trojan horse which was successful in 1892 will fail in 1894 and 1896. The people will "beware of Greeks bearing gifts."

The next campaign will be fought in the open field, with no traitors in the army that will do battle for justice and equal rights. Secret foes will be discovered, exposed, and drummed out of camp. If the tentacles of the national banks have extended into the two Houses of Congress they will be cut loose, and freedom of action secured for the representatives of the people. No Wall street general will lead the conquering hosts.

The race of Jackson and Lincoln is not extinct, and a man of the people will be found. The independence of the coordinate departments of the Government will be restored. The representatives of the people in both Houses of Congress will pass laws to secure justice and equal rights without Executive interference. No command will come from the other end of the Avenue to destroy the people's money and subject the masses to the rule of an alien gold trust. Financial independence of Great Britain and all other foreign powers will be declared and maintained at any sacrifice and at all hazards.

The temporary victory of avarice and fraud is an object lesson which will not be forgotten. The people of the United States have met and overcome all opposition and removed all obstruction to their grand march to freedom and a higher civilization. They must now grapple with the most dangerous, the most insidious, and the most relentless foe with which humanity is compelled to contend—the power of concentrated capital. It is the most dangerous, because its weapons are cunning; the most insidious, because its methods are secret; and the most relentless, because it is ruthless and deaf to the groans of its victims.

Concentrated capital must be dethroned. The lifeblood of civilization must cease to slake the thirst of avarice. The normal circulation must be restored. The British pump must cease to drain the circulating medium of the United States into the reservoir of a London syndicate. An independent financial policy must be established.

The schemes of the enemy will be exposed, and the paths to freedom and prosperity made plain. Concentrated capital must take warning. The luxury of revolution and extortion will be expensive. When justice is denied, the wrongdoers must take the consequences. This victory for injustice and wrong is only temporary. If capital repudiates contracts by contraction, the people will restore justice by expansion. If in the conflict the aggressor is despoiled, it will be his own fault, and not the fault of the victims he has forced to fight for self-preservation.

The motto in the next campaign will be not the preservation of disgraced party names, but the eternal principle of justice: not the preservation of the dollar, but an equalizing measure of value for the rich to monopolize, but an honest measure of value which will do justice to all; not to multiply parasites, but to increase wealth for producers; not to maintain a false standard of governmental credit by opening the vaults of the Treasury to speculators, but to maintain the honor of the Government by the payment of debts according to contract, and meting out equal justice to all; not by taxing the masses to make donations to the classes, but by compelling the rich as well as the poor to submit to the government of laws; not to violate the obligation of contracts, but to maintain equity between debtor and creditor.

Justice and equality before the law is the full measure of the demands of the people. No oligarchy of foreign or domestic money-changers must rob them of their most sacred rights. The people must and will resist and strike until the last armed foe expires. Let the vote be taken; let the deed be done; let the object lesson be given. We will abide the result. [Manifestations of approval and applause.]

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no further amendment to the bill, the question is, Shall the amendment be engrossed and the bill read a third time?

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the bill pass? Mr. STEWART and Mr. TELLER called for the yeas and nays; and they were ordered.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, October 31, 1893.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Journal of the proceedings of the last legislative day will be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of the legislative day Tuesday, October 17, 1893.

Mr. SHERMAN. As the Journal covers many days, I think it would be hardly worth while to read it. Most of it is merely formal matter. I move, therefore, to dispense with the reading of the Journal.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Ohio? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The Journal will stand approved.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a statement from the Acting Director of the Mint in relation to an appropriation of $15,000 for freight on bullion and coin between mints and assay offices for the current fiscal year; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. McMILLAN presented a petition of Typographical Union, No. 72, of Lansing, Mich., praying for the immediate construction, by day labor, of a building for the Government Printing Office; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. VEST presented a petition of the Commercial Club of Kansas City, Mo., praying for such modification of the duties on imports from Mexico as will encourage trade between that country and the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. VOORHEES, from the Committee on the Library, to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill (S. 1137) to provide for the printing of the report of the Joint Committee of Congress and proceedings at the centennial celebration of the laying of the corner stone of the Capitol; which was read twice by its title, and, on motion of Mr. VOORHEES, referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill (S. 1138) to repeal so much of a proviso of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for other purposes," approved March 1, 1893, as relates to the payment of pensions to nonresidents who are not citizens of the United States; which was read twice by its title.

COURTS IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

Mr. FUGHE. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2799) to provide for the time and place of holding the terms of the United States circuit and district courts in the State of South Dakota, to report it with amendments. The Senators from South Dakota are very anxious for the passage of the bill, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on the Judiciary was in section 2, line 7, after the word "Todd," to insert, "Beadle, Kingsbury, Crow Creek and Lower Brule;" and in line 11, to strike out the words "Beadle, Kingsbury."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 2, line 13, to insert "McPherson, Edmunds, Campbell, Walworth;" in line 16, to strike out "McPherson, Edmunds;" and in line 17 to strike out "Campbell, Walworth."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 2, line 20, after the words "Standing Rock," to insert "and;" and in line 21, to strike out the words "Lower Brule, and Crow Creek."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add at the end of section 6:

Any agent and petit jurors for the circuit and district courts shall be drawn by the clerk of the court, and the date when the same shall be drawn for service in each division shall be residents of such division.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

SETTLERS UNDER DESERT-LAND ACT.

Mr. WALTHALL. I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands to report back favorably, with an amendment, the bill (S. 592) to extend the time for making final payments on entries under the desert-land act, and to ask for its immediate consideration. It is a very short bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The amendment of the Committee on Public Lands was, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the time of making final payments on entries under the desert-land act is hereby extended to the date when the same become due in all cases where desert-land entrymen are unable to make final payment from causes which they cannot control, evidence of such inability to be subject to the regulations of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. HOAR. I do not wish to interfere with anything which the Senator from Mississippi thinks desirable, unless some question of principle is at stake, but it seems to me that this is an important legislation and should come in the ordinary way, unless there be some good reason for haste.

Mr. WALTHALL. I will state the reason why immediate action is desired. The bill is intended to afford some slight relief to the desert-land entrymen. Most of the desert-land entries are located in what are called the mining States. The people of those States, for reasons which have been fully discussed here of late, are in a condition of considerable financial distress. The bill as originally introduced proposed to extend the time to make final payment on entries under the desert-land act for three years. The amendment of the committee proposes to extend the time not for three years, but for one year, and to limit the benefits of the extension to persons who deserve it and ought to have it. It is very apparent that the bill ought to pass at once if it passes at all.

Mr. POWER. I hope the Senator from Massachusetts will not object to the consideration of the bill. I introduced the bill at the request of settlers of Montana and other mining States, and it is important that the time should be extended one year. It is reported favorably by the committee on the recommendation of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Mr. WALTHALL. I will state further for the information of the Senator from Massachusetts that a bill even more liberal than this has passed the Senate and passed the other House at the present session for the benefit of homestead settlers in Oklahoma.

Mr. HOAR. I interposed the objection without knowing what bill was before the Senate, and of course without knowing what were its particular provisions. I merely wanted to call attention to the fact that it is not a wise method of legislation to pass important general bills in this way, out of order and in the morning hour. But on the statement which has been made by the Senator from Mississippi, and especially by the Senator from Montana who introduced the bill, I shall not press objection to this measure.

Mr. WALTHALL. I wish to state further, for the benefit of the Senator from Massachusetts, that the bill is unanimously reported by the Committee on Public Lands. It has met the approval of the Commissioner of the General Land Office. There seems to be no possible objection that can be urged to it. Otherwise I should not have asked that it be taken up at this time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. COKE introduced a bill (S. 1139) to amend an act of Congress approved May 19, 1890, granting to the Aransas Pass Harbor the right to improve the Aransas Pass; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. HUNTON introduced a bill (S. 1140) for the relief of William Bushby; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. McILLAN introduced a bill (S. 1141) for the relief of S. Brock and A. P. Bauman, of the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. POWER introduced a bill (S. 1142) directing the parting and relining of bullion to be carried on at the United States assay office at Helena, Mont.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HOAR introduced a bill (S. 1143) for the speedy determination of questions touching the jurisdiction of circuit courts; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. BLACKBURN submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rules be instructed to inquire and report to the Senate what revision of or amendments to the rules, if any, should be adopted to secure a more efficient and satisfactory disposition of the business of the Senate.

Mr. GORMAN subsequently said: I ask unanimous consent that the various amendments proposed to the rules which are lying on the table be referred to the Committee on Rules.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAULKNER in the chair). The Senator from Maryland asks unanimous consent that pending amendments to the rules of the Senate be referred to the Committee on Rules. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maryland? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

HOUSE OF MEETING.

On motion of Mr. JONES of Arkansas, it was ordered, That the hour of the daily meeting of the Senate be 12 o'clock meridian, until otherwise ordered.

COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE AND FORESTRY.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I ask leave to introduce a resolution to continue the powers and duties of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry as defined by resolutions heretofore passed by the Senate. Owing to the extra session the duties which were imposed by the Senate upon that committee could not be performed, and it is the purpose of the committee to go on now and perform the duties. The money for this purpose has already been provided and set apart by the Senate upon the report of the Committee on Contingent Expenses. It is necessary now to pass another resolution continuing the powers and duties of the committee during the recess and the next session of Congress. I therefore introduce and ask for the present consideration of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the powers conferred and duties imposed on the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and all the provisions of the resolutions of April 19, 1892, and March 3, 1893, be continued during the recess after the expiration of the present session and during the next session of the Senate.

I ask for the consideration of the resolution at this time.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. I ask the Senator from Mississippi if the resolution does not provide for the expenditure of money from the contingent fund of the Senate?

Mr. GEORGE. The matter has already been referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses and the sum necessary for the investigation allotted by the Senate on the report of the committee.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. I understand, then, that the purpose of the resolution is simply to cover the allotment of funds already made.

Mr. GEORGE. It is an allotment already made, and the money remains unexpended because the committee were unable, owing to the present extra session of Congress, to perform the duties imposed on them.

Mr. WHITE. I wish to inquire of the Senator from Mississippi if he can inform this side of the Chamber what he understands, so far as the purposes of the majority are concerned, by the re-

Second Session.

Prosper them in all their ways. Let Thy heavenly benediction abide upon our land, upon all our people. May intelligence, virtue, patriotism, and piety increase among our families and throughout all the land, that God's smile may be upon our country and Thy grace be the portion of our descendants to the latest generation. We humbly pray, through Jesus Christ, our Saviour. Amen.

PRESIDENT'S ANNUAL MESSAGE.

At 1 o'clock and 33 minutes p. m. Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of the secretaries of the President of the United States, appeared below the bar, and said:

Mr. President, I am directed by the President of the United States to deliver to the Senate a message in writing.

The message was received from the secretary, and handed to the Vice-President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the message of the President of the United States, which the Secretary will read.

The Secretary (Mr. WILLIAM R. COX) read the message, as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

The constitutional duty which requires the President from time to time to give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient, is fittingly entered upon by commending to the Congress a careful examination of the detailed statements and well-supported recommendations contained in the reports of the heads of Departments, who are chiefly charged with the executive work of the Government. In addition to the reports of the heads of Departments, and in order to aid the Congress in its consideration of the measures proposed by its purpose, I shall supplement a brief reference to the contents of these departmental reports by the mention of such executive business and incidents as are not embraced therein, and by such recommendations as appear to be at this particular time appropriate.

While our foreign relations have not at all times during the year been entirely free from perplexity, no extraordinary situation remains that will not yield to the spirit of fairness and love of justice, which, joined with consistent firmness, characterize a truly American foreign policy.

My predecessor having accepted the office of arbitrator of the long-standing missions boundary dispute tendered to the President by the Argentine Republic and Brazil, it has been my agreeable duty to receive the special envoys commissioned by those states to lay before the evidence and arguments in behalf of their respective governments.

The outbreak of domestic hostilities in the Republic of Brazil found the United States alert to watch the interests of our citizens in that country, with which we carry on important commerce. Several vessels of our new Navy are now, and for some time have been, stationed at Rio de Janeiro. The struggle between the established government, which controls the machinery of administration and with which we maintain friendly relations, and certain officers of the navy employing the vessels of their command in an attack upon the national capital and chief seaport, and lacking, as it does, the elements of divided administration, I have failed to see that the insurgents can reasonably claim recognition as belligerents.

Thus far the policy of the Government has been that of an attentive but impartial observer of the unfortunate conflict. Emphasizing our fixed policy of impartial neutrality in such a condition of affairs as now exists, I deemed it necessary to disavow, in a manner not to be misunderstood, the unauthorized action of our late naval commander in those waters in saluting the revolted Brazilian admiral, being indisposed to countenance an articulated to give gratuitous sanction to the local insurrection.

The convention between our Government and Chile, having for its object the settlement and adjustment of the demands of the two countries against each other, has been made effective by the organization of the claims commission provided for. The two Governments failing to agree upon the third member of the commission, the good offices of the president of the Swiss Republic were invoked, as provided in the treaty, and the selection of the Swiss representative in this country to complete the organization was gratifyingly alike to the United States and Chile. The vexatious question of so-called legation asylum for offenders against the state and its laws was presented anew in Chile by the unauthorized action of the late United States minister in receiving into his official residence two persons who had just failed in an attempt at revolution and against whom criminal charges were pending growing out of a former abortive disturbance. The doctrine of asylum as applied to this case is not sanctioned by the precedents and, when allowed, tends to encourage sedition and strife. Under no circumstances can the representatives of this Government be permitted, under the ill-defined fiction of extraterritoriality, to interrupt the administration of criminal justice in the countries to which they are accredited. A temperate demand having been made by the Chilean Government for the correction of this conduct in the instance mentioned, the minister was instructed no longer to harbor the offenders.

The legislation of last year, known as the Geary law, requiring the registration of all Chinese laborers entitled to residence in the United States, and the deportation of all not complying with the provisions of the act within the time prescribed, met with much opposition from Chinamen in this country. Acting upon the advice of eminent counsel that the law was unconstitutional, the great mass of Chinese laborers, pending judicial inquiry as to its validity, in good faith declined to apply for the certificates required by its provisions. A test case was accordingly by habeas corpus was brought before the Supreme Court, and on May 15, 1893, a decision was made by that tribunal sustaining the law.

It is believed that under the recent amendment of the act extending the time for registration, the Chinese laborers thereto entitled, who desire to reside in this country, will now avail themselves of the renewed privilege thus afforded of establishing by lawful procedure their status in the land, and of avoiding the necessity of enforced deportation may to a great degree be avoided.

It has devolved upon the United States minister at Peking, as dean of the diplomatic body, and in the absence of a representative of Sweden and Norway, to press upon the Chinese Government reparation for the recent murder of Swedish missionaries at Chungking, and the question is also presented of the countries whose citizens engage in missionary work in the interior.

By Article XII of the General Act of Brussels, signed July 2, 1890, for the suppression of the slave trade and the restriction of certain injurious commerce in the Independent State of the Congo and in the adjacent zone of central Africa, the United States and the other signatory powers agreed to adopt appropriate means for the punishment of persons selling arms and ammunition to the natives and for the confiscation of the prohibited articles, and the plain duty of this Government to aid in suppressing the nefarious traffic, impairing as it does the praiseworthy and civilizing efforts now in progress in that region, I recommend that an act be passed prohibiting the sale of arms and intoxicants to natives in the regulated zone by our citizens.

Costa Rica has lately testified its friendliness by surrendering to the United States, in the absence of a representative of extradition, but upon duly submitted evidence of criminality, a noted fugitive from justice. It is trusted that the negotiation of a treaty with that country to meet recurring cases of this kind will soon be accomplished. In my opinion treaties for reciprocal extradition should be concluded with all those countries with which the United States has not already conventional arrangements of this character.

I have deemed it fitting to express to the Governments of Costa Rica and Colombia the kindly desire of the United States to see their pending boundary dispute finally closed by arbitration in conformity with the spirit of the treaty concluded between them some years ago.

Our relations with the French Republic continue to be intimate and cordial. I sincerely hope that the extradition treaty with that country, as amended by the Senate, will soon be operative.

While occasional questions affecting our naturalized citizens returning to the land of their birth have arisen in our intercourse with Germany, our relations with that country continue satisfactory.

The questions affecting our relations with Great Britain have been treated in the spirit of friendship.

Negotiations are in progress between the two Governments with a view to such concurrent action as will make the award and regulations agreed upon by the Bering Sea Tribunal of Arbitration practically effective; and it is not doubted that Great Britain will cooperate freely with this country for the accomplishment of that purpose.

The dispute growing out of the discriminating tolls imposed in the Welland Canal, upon cargoes of cereals bound to and from

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce in the absence of objection.

Mr. CULLOM. I think some other committee has had charge of a portion of the subject-matter involved in the bill. I presume it should properly be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be so referred.

He also introduced a bill (S. 1181) for the relief of Thomas Moonlight; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PEPPER. I introduce (by request) a bill to regulate the importation and sale of intoxicating liquors in the United States, to which I wish to call attention, as it is one of a somewhat peculiar character. It has been sent to me by a very intelligent citizen of the State of Kansas, a very earnest temperance worker. While the bill is not drawn in such form as a lawyer would prepare it, and while there may be some objections to its phraseology, yet my correspondent asks that it be submitted to the Senate without any change whatever. So I introduce the bill and ask that it may be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The bill (S. 1182) to regulate the importation and sale of intoxicating liquors in the United States was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary in the absence of objection.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. It should be referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. HOAR. I think the bill should be referred to that committee.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be so referred in the absence of objection.

Mr. KANSBROUGH introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 41) relative to the erection of a penitentiary in the State of North Dakota, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Territories.

COL. ANSON MILLS.

Mr. MILLS. I introduce a joint resolution, and ask unanimous consent that it may be now considered.

The joint resolution (S. R. 42) permitting Anson Mills, colonel of Third Regiment United States Cavalry, to accept and exercise the functions of boundary commissioner on the part of the United States was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That Anson Mills, colonel Third Regiment United States Cavalry, having been by the President and confirmed by the Senate and with the assent of the United States under the convention between the United States of America and the United States of Mexico, concluded and signed by the plenipotentiaries at the city of Washington, March 1, 1851, is hereby permitted to accept and exercise the functions of said officer of commissioner. Provided, Said officer shall continue to receive his emoluments in pay and allowances as colonel in the Army while holding said office, and until such time as he should receive any other emoluments such duty in military orders, and no other additional pay or emoluments for his services as said commissioner.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. PALMER. I should like to inquire what is the necessity for the passage of the joint resolution?

Mr. MILLS. I will state. Col. Anson Mills is now colonel of the Third Regiment of Cavalry of the United States. He is a very skilled officer, familiar with the boundaries of the Rio Grande, where he served for a number of years. Under an agreement between the Republic of Mexico and that of the United States a joint commission has been raised to survey and fix the boundary between the two countries. Col. Mills has been selected by the President on account of his skill and his acquaintance with that country to represent the Government of the United States as the engineer on that commission; but there is a provision of law which prevents him from accepting a position of that sort without vacating his place in the Army. The joint resolution simply provides for giving the consent of Congress that he, as an officer of the Army of the United States, drawing his pay as an officer of the Army, and with no other emoluments, may perform this duty for the Government of the United States. That is all.

Mr. PALMER. I should like to ask the Senator from Texas whether the resolution gives the officer the same compensation he now receives?

Mr. MILLS. The joint resolution does not change his pay, but leaves him an officer of the United States Army, detailed to do this business, which the law now in existence forbids him to do without the consent of Congress.

Mr. PALMER. Without additional pay?

Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator from Texas kindly state a little more distinctly the precise function this officer is to perform as a commissioner, notwithstanding he is an officer of the Army? I should like to hear, as I did not quite catch the Senator's statement.

Mr. MILLS. The officer is to act as engineer, as I understand, and under the treaty one is to be appointed by each government. He has been selected by the Government of the United States.

Mr. CHANDLER. Of the boundary commission?

Mr. MILLS. Of the boundary commission.

Mr. CHANDLER. Is the commission authorized to settle the boundary or only to report on it to the Executive?

Mr. MILLS. It is authorized to survey and fix the boundary line between the United States and Mexico on the Rio Grande River.

Mr. CHANDLER. How many commissioners are there?

Mr. MILLS. I have the convention and will read the provision relating to this matter.

Mr. CHANDLER. Is this officer the sole United States commissioner?

Mr. MILLS. Oh, no; there are others. The convention provides that—

The International Boundary Commission shall be composed of a commissioner appointed by the President of the United States of America, and another appointed by the President of the United States of Mexico, in accordance with the terms of the convention of each country, of a consulting engineer, appointed in like manner by each government, and of such secretaries and clerks, the number, appointment, and removal to be determined by the respective governments, and by the respective members of the commission.

Mr. CHANDLER. If I understand, there are three commissioners on the part of the United States, and this military officer is only one of the three?

Mr. MILLS. He is one of those appointed by this Government.

Mr. CHANDLER. He is the engineer member of the commission.

Mr. MILLS. Yes, sir; so I understand.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Texas read from the document in his hand something which I understand is inconsistent with his verbal answer. Of course he did not wish to be misunderstood, but he probably was. I understood the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] inquired whether there were three commissioners on the part of the United States, and I understood the Senator from Texas to say there was one commissioner on the part of each Government.

Mr. MILLS. I have read the exact language of the convention to the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from New Hampshire asked if there were three commissioners.

Mr. MILLS. The Senator from New Hampshire said "three," but I did not make any answer in reply, if I recollect. I read the clause in the document.

Mr. HOAR. The resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

I present a petition of Chicago artists and engravers in reference to the revenue bill now under consideration at the other end of the Capitol, praying that the duty on lithographic work be changed from an ad valorem to a specific duty—that the duty on lithographic plates be increased from 25 to 50 per cent ad valorem. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. I also present a petition signed by the pastors of a pretty large number of churches in Chicago, praying Congress to make an appropriation (I understand from outside sources that the sum required will not be over $10,000) for a small chapel in connection with the marine hospital located at Chicago, and on the ground which belongs to the Government, and is in part occupied by the marine hospital. The proposed chapel is to be for the accommodation of sick persons who are in the hospital, so that they may have an opportunity to attend church. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The motion was agreed to.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1005) to prevent the recording of the subdivisions of land in the District of Columbia in the office of the recorder of deeds reported, it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. FAULKNER, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 443) to provide for the sale of new tickets by the street-railway companies of the District of Columbia, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 445) supplementary to an act entitled "An act to provide government for the District of Columbia," approved February 21, 1871, and also an act entitled "An act to provide for the government of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1874, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 891) authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to accept payment without interest of certain special assessments, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. HUNTON, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 354) relating to acknowledgments of instruments affecting real estate within the District of Columbia, reported it without amendment.

SETTLERS ON MILLE LAC INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. BERRY. I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands to report back favorably, without amendment, the joint resolution (H. Res. 31) for the protection of those parties who have heretofore been allowed to make entries for lands within the former Mille Lac Indian Reservation in Minnesota.

Mr. WASHBURN. I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be considered at the present time.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read for information.

Mr. CULLOM. I should like to hear it read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be read for information, subject to objection.

The Secretary read the joint resolution; and by unanimous consent of the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment.

Mr. PALMER. I should like to be informed as to the effect of the joint resolution. I understand that it proposes to establish entries within an Indian reservation. I inquire whether that would not defeat laws of the objects of the reservation by introducing white settlers, with title of property within the reservation. I should be sorry to see a measure adopted that would, to some extent, break up an Indian reservation by introducing white settlers with title to land among them.

Mr. WASHBURN. I will state that the joint resolution affects only some three hundred settlers who filed their claims during the last four or five years and have made improvements. The Mille Lac Reservation is really no longer an Indian reservation.

The Indians are remaining there only through sufferance. Under the act of January 14, 1889, there was an arrangement made whereby those Indians are to be entirely removed to the White Earth Reservation. So the joint resolution does not in any way affect the rights of Indians, or anybody else, so far as that is concerned.

Mr. IRBY. I should like to ask the Senator from Minnesota if there is any contest on the part of the Indians against being removed from the reservation.

Mr. WASHBURN. None whatever. There is no contest that I know of anywhere.

The joint resolution was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRINTING OF PAMPHLETS ON NEBRASKA.

Mr. MANDERSON, from the Committee on Printing, reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the usual number of the pamphlets known as the Discovery of Nebraska and A Visit to Nebraska in 1891 be communicated by Hon. James W. Savage to the Historical Society, to be printed for the use of the Senate.

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATION IN HAWAII.

Mr. HOAR. I submit a resolution, for which I ask present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the President be requested to inform the Senate, if in his opinion it is not inconsistent with the public interest, whether any person who has been admitted to the Hawaiian Islands for the purpose of trade, and who is a person, has been appointed since the 4th day of March, 1893, to represent the United States in the Hawaiian Islands; and whether any person has been appointed as the President of the Executive, or Minister, or Consul of the Hawaiian Islands; and

Who has or who has not been appointed to the head of the Government of the Hawaiian Islands; and whether any, and if so what authority has been given to such person to bring the relations of this Government to the then existing or other government of the Hawaiian Islands and the protection of American citizens therein; and

Whether any disposition of power has been committed to such person to determine the legal forces of the United States should be issued therefor within said territory; and

Whether any authority has been committed to such person to use physical force in the territory of said Government, or to maintain armed force therein; and

Whether such person has been authorized to, or has in fact corresponded in respect to the public affairs of the Government of the Hawaiian Islands with any private person, newspaper, or other person; or has been authorized to, or has in fact, intervened to preserve said Hawaiian Islands, the territory, or the people thereof, or to, or has requested or received communication from any private person in regard to the law and existing Government there, or the circumstances under which said existing Government was established, or any other matter relating to the public affairs thereof; and

If any such appointment or authority has been given, further to inform the Senate what authority was given, and even at a time when the Senate was in session, or has intervened in force during any session of the Senate, or of Congress, or of any party, faction, or further.

Whether such appointment or authority was communicated to the Senate during any session thereof, or further.

Whether any person has accepted, or undertaken to accept, the office of a commissioner or public minister with the Government of Hawaii, or has undertaken in any correspondence with the Government of Hawaii, or with any private person, to describe himself as commissioner of the United States.

Mr. GRAY. I hope —
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent that the resolution be considered at this time. Is there objection?

Mr. GRAY. Let it go over.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President —
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution being objected to —

Mr. HOAR. I should like, before the resolution goes over —
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Delaware withdraw his objection?

Mr. HOAR. I should like to make some remarks to announce the purpose of the resolution if the Senator from Delaware has no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Delaware withdraw his objection?

Mr. GRAY. I think the resolution, so far as I can gather from imperfectly hearing it stand at the desk, is of sufficient importance to go over, and any discussion that is to arise, as naturally it may, had better go over with it.

Mr. HOAR. I suppose the custom of the Senate is without an exception that whenever a Senator introduces either a resolution or a bill and desires to make some remarks explanatory of its purpose he is allowed to do so without waiting for the time when the bill or resolution comes up under the rule. I never knew in my long experience where an objection raised to such an explanation. I wish it understood that I merely desire to make a few remarks pointing out the purpose of the resolution to accompany it.

Mr. GRAY. The resolution is upon a matter of very great public interest, in which the people are much concerned, and it will naturally provoke discussion, because, if we may judge from the remarks made by the Senator from Massachusetts, he has set the other day, upon a similar resolution, he had a great deal to say in a very emphatic way, which will naturally provoke some discussion, interlunations, and what not. I think the resolution had better go over until to-morrow. I am always very glad, as the Senator from Massachusetts knows, to hear him on any public question, and if I thought it would interfere with hearing him I would not wish to interpose an objection. But I know we shall hear him.

Mr. HOAR. I wish simply to have the question understood, Mr. President. The Senator from Delaware, whether —

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Delaware withdraw his objection?

Mr. GRAY. I withdraw my objection for the purpose of allowing the Senator from Massachusetts to explain his resolution.

Mr. HOAR. Very well, it is all I wish to do.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts will proceed.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, if the Secretary will send me the resolution which is before the Senate I desire to make some brief observations in explanation of it.

I suppose every Senator understands that certain allegations in regard to public facts have been extensively made in the press of this country and of foreign countries. They have been the subject of comment by members of this body and by persons addressing the people on public questions in the recent campaign, both members of this body and others, and have been assumed to be true. They have met with no denial or question from any quarter; and yet they have not been communicated to this body or to the public from any official source.

If there has been any communication made to the members of this body as individuals that communication has been marked "confidential," and I am informed beyond question, while that communication marked "confidential" was in the possession of Senators, without any withdrawal of the confidence, a high officer of the Department of State communicated the same information to the representatives of four newspapers, not being marked "confidential," so far as they were concerned, and on being applied to by the representatives of other newspapers declined, on the alleged ground that the newspaper applying would not make good use of the information. Those four newspapers were zealous, thoroughgoing, and I had almost said unscrupulous supporters of the Administration.

Mr. President, one of those allegations is that the President of the United States, on the 17th day of March, 1893, the Senate then being in session, commissioned a person to proceed to the island of the Hawaiian group in which Honolulu is situated, and accredited him by letter as a commissioner of this Government to that Government; that he gave the officer instructions to represent the purposes and opinions of this Government to that Government; authorized him to have full access to the archives; said in the letter of instruction that he was to be the personal representative of the United States in that island, and directed the ordinary minister of the United States there to that effect.

If that allegation be true, it seems to me as gross a violation of the Constitution of the United States as was ever charged upon or imputed to any public official.

The Constitution of the United States expressly enumerates "ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls" among the persons who must be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. If anybody be a public minister within the meaning of the Constitution, it is certainly a person whose authority is paramount in representing the United States over other public functionaries in the kingdom or power to which he is accredited. A person accredited to a foreign friendly power, with authority to command the Navy of the United States to preserve order, to protect the rights of the citizens of the United States, there to be presented to that government, and who the ordinary representatives, both consular and ambassador, are ordered to treat as paramount to them, would seem to be a public minister.

But that is not left to this inference, plain and clear though it is, because the Legislature of the United States has expressly dealt with that question. Section 1674 of the Revised Statutes, after enumerating the powers of consuls and commercial agents and consular officers, goes on to say:

"Diplomatic officer" shall be deemed to include ambassadors, envoys extraordinary, ministers plenipotentiary, ministers resident, commissioners, chargés d'affaires, and secretaries of legation, and none others.

So by the express legislative enactment of the Revised Statutes, copied from an earlier statute, this commissioner was a diplomatic officer of the United States, and no other, unless one of the persons otherwise enumerated in that section should be such officer.

Mr. President, it is not necessary to say here nor to say to the American people that in an attempt to usurp the power of appointing and commissioning such officers, without the Secretary to this body, is an attempt to usurp a power of all the diplomatic relations of this Government, which otherwise would require the assent of this body or the assent of the two legislative departments of the Government.

That, too, is not left to any inference of mine. When the convention which framed the Constitution of the United States established the provision for the appointment of foreign ministers, it was an attempt to usurp a power of all the diplomatic relations of this Government, which otherwise would require the assent of this body or the assent of the two legislative departments of the Government.

Mr. President, what, if these statements which unchallenged and unquestioned have passed current in the country for the past three months to be true, has been the purpose for which that diplomatic officer has been sent to the Hawaiian Islands, and which has been his conduct there? I wish the Secretary to read in the Constitution of the United States, and in the Revised Statutes of the United States, in regard to the powers of these officers. I call attention to section 1751 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which I ask the Secretary to be kind enough to read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

SEC. 1751. No diplomatic or consular officer shall correspond in regard to the public affairs of any foreign government with any person, newspaper, or other periodical, or otherwise than with the proper officers of the United States.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, if the statements which have been taken for granted on both sides of this Chamber be true, this diplomatic officer, unofficially appointed by a gross usurper, and without any official authority, was on the 17th day of March, 1893, proceeded to Hawaii, and proceeded to open correspondence with private persons there in regard to the public affairs of that country. He called before him certain citizens, he addressed letters to other citizens, he took their replies orally, requested them to reduce their oral communications to writing, and transmitted that private correspondence to the President.

If there can be conceived a case which this legislation was intended to prohibit, it would be the entry upon the territory of a foreign government and the corresponding with private persons or taking their testimony in regard to the lawfulness of the establishment of that government.

Does anybody suppose that the United States of America would submit for a moment to the presence of a British minister or other minister of any other power, who should establish headquarters and invite correspondence with disaffected private persons in re-residing in Utah would have about fifteen times as much power in making laws for the balance of the country as he would have if he lived in Ohio.

Mr. BOEN. May I ask who is to be endangered by it?

Mr. HARTER. The whole country. Gentlemen of the extreme West, surely you may have a representation ample to the fullest extent. You have indeed a representation so far in excess of any other section of the country in the making of laws and in the election of the President, that it seems to me instead of asking more, you should, with proper modesty and with a reasonable respect for the rights of the people who are not fortunate enough to live in these far Western Territories, of your own accord say to you are content to wait for a more fitting time, and until you have gained larger proportions in population, proportions which will reasonably entitle you to membership in the sisterhood of States.

He also presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of St. Paul, Minn., praying for the passage of the Torrey Bankruptcy bill, and remonstrating against the division of the St. Paul customs district as proposed by a measure now pending before Congress; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of Typographical Union, No. 42, of Minneapolis, Minn., praying that all labor employed upon the new Government Printing Office shall be by day's work, under the control of the Supervising Architect; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the concurrent resolution submitted by Mr. BRICE, December 12, 1893, providing for the appointment of twelve additional Capitol policemen, reported it without amendment.

Mr. WALTHALL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 898) for the creation of a "reserved list" of the Army of the United States submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 407) making an appropriation for the improvement of the road to the national cemetery near Pensacola, Fla., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

SUFFERERS IN FORD'S THEATER DISASTER.

Mr. WALTHALL. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 43) relieving the employees of the Record and Pension Office who were injured in the Ford's Theater disaster from the operation of the law restricting the amount of sick leave with pay that may be granted by heads of Departments, to report it without amendment, and to submit a written report thereon. I am also directed to ask for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. MANDERSON. I suggest to my colleagues on the committee, the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, the advisability of either having read at the desk or printed in the RECORD the letter from the chief of the Bureau.

Mr. WALTHALL. I will let the report be read.

Mr. MANDERSON. Yes; let the report be read. It shows the advisability of this action.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. 1444) relieving the employees of the Record and Pension Office who were injured in the Ford's Theatre disaster from the operation of the law restricting the payment of salaries and wages that may be granted by heads of Departments, have considered the same and report as follows:

The Secretary of War in his annual report for the year 1893, referring to the clerks in the Record and Pension Office who were injured in the Ford's Theatre calamity on the 9th of June last, says:

"The Department has extended to the employees who were injured the most liberal consideration, and the law permits, but under the present opinion of the Attorney-General sick leave with pay can not be granted for a longer period than sixty days in any one year."

It is recommended that Congress authorize payment to them of the full amount of their salaries during such periods as they may be unable, by reason of their injuries, to return to duty, unless it shall in the meantime make specific provision for the payment of the same and reports as follows:

"The Secretary of War in his annual report for the year 1893, referring to the clerks in the Record and Pension Office who were injured in the Ford's Theatre calamity on the 9th of June last, says:

"The Department has extended to the employees who were injured the most liberal consideration, and the law permits, but under the present opinion of the Attorney-General sick leave with pay can not be granted for a longer period than sixty days in any one year is contained in a proviso in the act of March 2, 1893, mentioned in the joint resolution, and is as follows:

Indigent and disabled. That if the head of any Department may grant thirty days' annual and thirty days' sick leave, with pay, in any one year to each clerk or employee the sick leave to be allowed in cases of personal illness only, or where some member of the immediate family is afflicted with a contagious disease and requires the care and attendance of such employee, or where his or her absence from the head of the Department, with pay, not follow clerks: And be it further provided, That in exceptional and meritorious cases, where to limit such sick leave would work peculiar hardship, it may be extended, in the discretion of the head of the Department, with pay, not exceeding sixty days in any one case or in any one calendar year." (37 Stats., 715.)

In the absence of some such specific provision for the employees referred to as that to which the Secretary alludes, it is manifestly just, and your committee therefore recommend the passage of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REPEAL OF ELECTION LAWS.

Mr. VANCE, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2331) to repeal the statutes relating to supervisors of elections and for special deputy marshals and other purposes, reported it without amendment, and submitted the following report; which was read:

The Committee on Privileges and Elections, to whom was referred House bill No. 2331, being an act to repeal the statutes relating to supervisors of elections and for special deputy marshals and other purposes, have considered the same and report it back to the Senate with the recommendation that it be passed without amendment, and for a further report thereon the committee advise the Senate to concur in the action of the President and Vice-President and Representatives in Congress, of the House of Representatives, on the same bill and makes it its own.

Mr. CHANDLER. The report upon this bill was not unanimous, and I desire an order of the Senate for leave to the minority to file the views of the minority adverse to the passage of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire? The Chair hears none, and leave is granted.

Mr. HOAR. I ask the Senator from New Hampshire to state the names of the dissenting Senators.

Mr. CHANDLER. The dissenting Senators are the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. HOAR), the Senator from Oregon (Mr. MITCHELL), the Senator from Delaware (Mr. HIGGINS), and myself, in whose behalf the minority report will be submitted.

SUPREME COURT OF OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.

Mr. VILAS. I am instructed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 238) to provide for two additional associate justices of the supreme court of the Territory of Oklahoma, and for other purposes, to report it favorably with amendments, and to ask for the present consideration of the bill on account of the needs of the court in that Territory.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider.

The first amendment of the Committee on the Judiciary was to add at the end of section 1 the words "reversing a judgment or other determination of the district court;" so as to make thesection read:

"That hereafter the supreme court of the Territory of Oklahoma shall consist of a chief justice and four associate justices, any three of whom shall constitute a quorum; but three judges must concur to render an opinion reversing a judgment or other determination of the district court."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after the word "President" in the first line of section 2, the words "to nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate," so as to read:

"That it shall be the duty of the President to nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint two additional associate justices of said supreme court, etc."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, line 2, after the word "trial" to insert "or hearing," so as to make the section read: "That no justice of the supreme court of said Territory shall sit as a member of said court in the trial or hearing of any case decided by him in the district court, or wherein he has any interest."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I am opposed to so much of the bill as provides that a judge who has sat at the trial whose ruling there is excepted to shall not sit at the appellate hearing. I think the interests of justice to parties require that the judge who tried the case below should be present; that it is quite essential, and that any need for it for the judicial function may be trusted to sit where his rulings are reconsidered. But the Senate has so often expressed its judgment the other way that I shall not make any question upon the bill at this time. I wish merely to record my own dissent.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I concur entirely with the view expressed by the Senator from Massachusetts, and for the same reason, that the Senate has made a rule, which, as I regard it, will be now part from, a acquiescence in the passage of the bill as it now stands.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole will be concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. VILAS. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. VILAS, Mr. LINDSAY, and Mr. PLATT were appointed.

REPRINT OF DOCUMENTS RELATING TO HAWAII.

Mr. GORMAN. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to report a resolution, and to submit a report thereon. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That there be printed and bound in cloth in one volume, for the use of the Senate, 1,500 copies each of Senate Executive Document No. 45, "Report on the trial of the King with Hawaii," Senate Executive Document No. 57, "Correspondence between the Governments of the United States and Great Britain relative to the Sandwich Islands," Senate Executive Document No. 78, "A treaty of amity and commerce concluded on the 14th day of February, 1853, between the United States and the Provisional Government of the Hawaiian Islands," and Senate Executive Document No. 77, "Correspondence respecting relations between the United States and the Hawaiian Islands from September, 1820, to January, 1823," all of the second session, Fifty-second Congress.

Mr. COKERELL. As I understand the reading of the resolution, it includes all the documents which have been submitted to Congress up to the 4th of March, 1893.

Mr. GORMAN. I was informed by the superintendent of the Document Room—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? The Chair hears none, and the question is on agreeing to the same.

Mr. DOLPH. I do not understand that the resolution includes all previous communications, but simply the communications made during the second session of the last Congress.

Mr. GORMAN. So I understand.

Mr. DOLPH. I was on the point of making a suggestion, but I thought I would let it go. It was that previous communications which have been made public or might be made public concerning this matter be included in the volume, which would be very convenient and valuable publication.

Mr. GORMAN. The documents specified will make a very large volume. I have introduced the resolution in this form to cover all the documents, the copies of which have been exhausted, and to keep the cost within the limit of $500.

Mr. DOLPH. Very well.

The resolution was agreed to.

SENATE ELECTION CASES.

Mr. GORMAN. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to report back the concurrent resolution providing for printing a new edition of the Senate Election Cases, and to submit a report thereon. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The concurrent resolution (submitted by Mr. HOAR August 14, 1893) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate Executive Document No. 1, "The Senate Election Cases," 1,500 copies to be for the use of members of the Senate and 2,500 copies for the use of the members of the House of Representatives, the same to be printed on the back as follows:

Senate Privileges and Elections.

Volume I.
Election Cases.

Taft.

just because these people were great sufferers and because the public think it ought to be done and Senators sympathize with them, but we will not make any precedent. But here comes the Senator from West Virginia and he wants an elaborate report in which the legal or equitable obligation of the Government shall be so ascertained that it will carry a bill through both Houses and make a precedent for all time. So I can not please all.

Mr. FAULKNER. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. DOLPH. Certainly.

Mr. FAULKNER. I wish to say to the Senator that his motion to amend is essentially antagonistic to the resolution. I ask him frankly how can any Senator who does not know anything in reference to the facts of the disaster vote in favor of his amendment? If he should succeed in accomplishing his purpose and have the amendment adopted, I, for one, should be compelled to vote against the resolution, because I should then be compelled to vote to pay these parties according to their disability without knowing whether there is any legal or equitable obligation whatever resting upon the Government. Therefore I say that his amendment is entirely antagonistic to the purposes the mover of the resolution necessarily had in view.

Mr. DOLPH. I think not. Here comes the Senator from Ohio and says that the public have made up their minds about this matter; that the public have determined that these people should be paid and that justice should be done them, and four-fifths of the Senators have determined that question. I do not suppose that we shall know absolutely any more about the facts of the case when we get through with it than we know now. We may have it in the shape of a report; we may have it placed on our files; but we shall know no more about the merits of the case than we know to-day; that is to say, whether the money should be paid.

Mr. FAULKNER. What is the use of a report, then?

Mr. DOLPH. The only question to be determined by the committee is as to the liability of the Government for the negligence or wrongful act of a subordinate officer of the Government. That is a simple question; it is a question which any lawyer can determine in his own mind in ten minutes.

Mr. FAULKNER. But I ask the Senator whether that question does not depend upon the facts in a particular case, and if I am not cognizant of those facts how can I pass upon the legal question?

Mr. DOLPH. I say the facts of this case are not in dispute.

Mr. FAULKNER. I do not know them. Does the Senator?

Mr. DOLPH. Does not the Senator know about the liability belonging to the Government; about the improvements which were going on; about the foundations which were being undermined? Does anybody doubt those facts? Are those in issue? Can there be any controversy about them? Certainly not. Now, then, the Government was conducting that work, whether it was through the Secretary of War, or Col. Ainsworth, or some subordinate under him whose duty it was to see that the work was properly and safely conducted. There was negligence; and according to the theory of the people who press these claims, the liability of the Government is just the same whether the Secretary of War was responsible, or Col. Ainsworth, or some subordinate officer under him.

So I say that there can be and there is no dispute as to the real facts in this case, and the only legal question is whether the Government is equitably liable to these people, and ought the Government to assume to be responsible for the wronging of the negligence of every officer of the Government charged with a duty.

That is all the legal question there is, and I submit that is a question we can determine on a vote this morning just as well as we can determine it hereafter. I think the mind of the Senator from West Virginia is made up on that proposition, but if we are not to determine it this morning I think it would be more orderly and would save expense and save great trouble and labor to the committee if we should determine it in advance of the investigation.

I agree with the Senator from Tennessee that the Senate must finally determine whether it will pay this damage, and how much it will pay, and therefore must adopt the full report of the committee, but what I have been complaining about is making five Senators the judges, in the first instance, as to whether there is any law in it. So I am willing to let it go to the committee and let the Senate this morning determine whether we will pay these people, and let the committee determine how much we shall pay them.

Mr. WHITE of Louisiana. I hope the amendment of the Senator from Oregon will be voted down, now that he has declared its purpose. Unquestionably under the general rule of law under which I understand the Committee on Claims has proceeded from its foundation, prima facie there would be no legal liability on the part of the Government; but there are classes of cases which have come before that committee (one of them was called to my attention this morning connected with an elevator run in this building) where growing out of peculiar and exceptional conditions surrounding the employment, compensation was made and the legal rule not violated, because there was a line of demarcation drawn between the general principle and the particular case to which the appropriation applied.

All that the remarks I made a while ago were intended to apply to ward against the opening of the flood gates here to a violation of the general principle to which I referred. If this case comes under an exceptional condition, if this case is accompanied by facts which take it out of the general rule, then it seems to me it is a great deal safer for this body to have the report of a committee stating those exceptional grounds and make up a record so as to prevent the application of the precedent in the future.

There was the case of a vessel before the Committee on Claims at the last session of the last Congress. It was elaborately and carefully argued. The conclusion reached was that, growing out of the peculiar authority exercised by the master of the vessel and the application of the laws of commerce to that vessel, the damage caused in that particular instance was an exceptional case, and there was a liability.

Now, there may be something in the facts of this case which would bring it in the grasp of that exception, and it might be so stated as to enable every gentleman to vote for it and accomplish what he considered an equitable obligation without any violation of the legal principle. Therefore, I think it very important that the committee should have power to look into the whole matter, study all the circumstances, and evolve the application of the legal principles which apply, so that we may vote discriminatingly when we come to vote on the report.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. President, this is a question of very grave importance, and it may lead to bringing about very numerous claims against the Government. The Government might suggest that it would be better to refer the resolution to a committee before it is acted upon. It seems to me it would be best to refer the resolution to the Judiciary Committee. It has been decided over and over again that the Government of the United States is not liable in such cases; and we have had the principle before Congress and before committees in a great variety of cases. In cases of loss by the mails, for instance, it has never been held that the Government was liable for mail matter, not even when the letter is registered. It does not occupy the relation to the citizen that a private person does whose relations are those of contract or social duty. If we shall hold that the Government is liable we shall reverse a principle of common law, the practice of the Government from its foundation, and it would probably give rise to many claims resting on that doctrine.

It seems to me, sir, the best disposition of this question would be to allow each person to make his own case before the Government, and then if the Government should choose, on account of the peculiar hardship, to give a gratuity to the person who has suffered, let the question appear in that light and let it be done upon that ground. As at present advised, I shall vote against the resolution. I think it best to let each individual case stand on its own merits and be discussed according to its peculiar circumstances.

Mr. BATE. I see the object of those who have discussed this question seems to be to get at the legal liability of the Government and that the committee may make a report upon the legality of the obligation of the Government in law as well as in equity and justice. By reference to the resolution I find the language to be—

That a select committee of five Senators be appointed by the Chair to investigate the Ford Theater disaster, and report to the Senate whether in equity and justice the Government should compensate, etc.

Leaving out the word "law" altogether, the inquiry merely being whether it is equitable and just. As we want to cover the whole case and get a complete report, I wish to move to the proper time to insert the word "law."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is in order now to move to perfect the text of the resolution.

Mr. BATE. I move, then, under the decision of the Chair, that the word "law" be inserted just preceding the word "equity," so that we may get from the committee a report as to the law as well as to the equity and the justice of compensating the sufferers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Tennessee will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 3, after the word "in," insert "law," so as to read—whether in law, equity, and justice.

The amendment was agreed to.
THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].
Mr. DANIEL. I ask that the amendment be stated.
THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the pending amendment.

THE SECRETARY. In line 2, after the word "investigate," strike out the following words:

and, if justice the Government should compensate the persons injured or killed by that disaster, or their representatives; and if it shall be decided that they should be compensated, then the committee will investigate each individual case.

And insert:
the case of each individual sufferer by the Ford Theater disaster.

So as to read:
Resolved, That a select committee of five Senators be appointed by the Chair to investigate the case of each individual sufferer by the Ford Theater disaster, and to report the amount of compensation that should be allowed in each case.

The amendment was rejected.
THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on agreeing to the resolution as it has been amended.

Mr. CHANDLER. Let it be read.
THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution as amended will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:
Resolved, That a select committee of five Senators be appointed by the Chair to investigate the Ford Theater disaster and report to the Senate whether in law, equity, and justice the Government should compensate the persons injured or killed by that disaster, or their representatives; and if it shall be decided that they should be compensated, then the committee will investigate each individual case and report the amount of compensation that should be allowed in each case.

Resolved further, That the committee may employ a clerk who is a stenographer and who shall be the stenographic word of the committee as to do, and that the committee shall have power to send for persons and papers, and the chairman of the committee or of any subcommittee may administer oath.

Resolved further, That the expenses of said investigation shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Resolved further, That the committee may report by bill or otherwise.
Mr. DOLPH. I suggest to the Senator from Tennessee whether the word "and" in line 3, after the word "equity," should not be stricken out and "or" inserted. I suppose the object is to determine whether legally or equitably compensation should be allowed.

Mr. HARRIS. The word "and" should be stricken out and "or" inserted.

Mr. DOLPH. This word "and" would couple all together and probably require a legal as well as an equitable obligation before we could give any relief.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The modification will be stated.
THE SECRETARY. In line 3 it is proposed to strike out "and" and insert "or," so as to read "whether in law, equity, or justice the Government should compensate," etc.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be so modified.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I have not been able to listen to the whole debate and I do not quite apprehend the force of the words in the resolution "if it shall be decided." Do those words refer to a decision by the committee, or a decision by the Senate, or a decision by Congress? "If it shall be decided" that there is such a liability, then the details shall be investigated. Is it the intention of Senators to commit to the committee the final decision of the question whether the United States ought in law, equity, or justice to pay these amounts so that it will be binding upon the Senate in case a favorable report is made?

Mr. HARRIS. The intention of the resolution is to raise a committee to investigate and develop the facts and report them to the Senate, with such recommendation as the committee may make, and invoke the judgment of the Senate upon the merit of that report.

Mr. CHANDLER. Upon the whole question, the question of justice as well as law?

Mr. HARRIS. Every question involved will be submitted to the Senate.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.
THE VICE-PRESIDENT subsequently announced as the special committee under the resolution, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. FAULKNER, Mr. WHITE of California, Mr. ANDERSON, and Mr. McMILLAN.

ACCOUNTS OF POSTMASTERS.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask unanimous consent to call up for consideration House bill 4340. Yesterday that bill was reported to the House of Representatives by the joint commission to inquire into the status of the laws regulating the Departments and was passed there. I now submit a report on the part of the Senate members of the commission recommending the passage of an exactly similar bill. I submit the report in support of the House bill and ask that the House bill may be taken up and passed. It will only take a few moments and it is of some importance to the Post-Office Department that the bill should be passed today.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PLATT in the chair). If there be no objection, the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom the bill was formally referred this morning, will be discharged from the further consideration of the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. The House bill is on the table.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read.

The Secretary read the bill (H. R. 4340) to amend section 407 of the Revised Statutes so as to require original receipts for deposits of postmasters to be sent to the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri asks for the present consideration of the bill. Is there objection?

Mr. CALL. Before consent is given for the consideration of the bill I wish to say that I think there are some questions connected with the manner in which it comes before this body, whatever may be the merits of the bill, that deserve consideration, and very careful consideration. I do not know that it is important, and I will not object to the present consideration of the bill; but I merely wish to say that I think some attention will have to be given to the manner in which the bill comes before the Senate.

By unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read.

The Secretary read the report, as follows:

The Joint Commission of Congress to Inquire into the status of Laws Organizing the Executive Departments, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4340) containing section 407 of the Revised Statutes, has considered the same, report it back herewith and recommend that it do pass, with the title amended so as to read as follows:

Section 407 of the Revised Statutes so as to require original receipts for deposits of postmasters to be sent to the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department.

The bill of the Revised Statutes now requires that the certificates of deposits by postmasters shall be sent by the depositories, through the office making the deposit, to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, and from that office to the Auditor.

The accompanying bill changes the law so as to require the certificate to be sent directly to the Auditor's Office, obviating the delay now experienced, which is no purpose, since the work in the Third Assistant's Office is merely entering the amount of the certificates of deposit in books arranged by quarters, to avoid which the alphabetical arrangement of the certificates is necessary. It also requires that the certificates be checked against anything else, and which necessarily affords an imperfect guide to the status of certificates not sent herewith, and for money only, and does not include credits from other sources or any of the kind.

The certificates are needed to make a complete and final check by the Auditor, and to avoid delay in the adjustment of postal accounts should go direct to that office.

The proposed change will facilitate the settlement of postmasters' accounts by at least one month.

F. M. COCKRELL,

JAMES N. JONES,

S. V. CULLON.

Members on the part of the Senate.

ALEXANDER M. DOCKERY,

JAMES D. RICHARDSON,

NELSON DINGLEY JR.

Members on the part of the House of Representatives.

Mr. COCKRELL. In connection with the report of the joint commission, I desire to read the following letter from the Postmaster-General, which appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of December 13:

Hon. A. M. DOCKERY,

Chairman and Chairman of Committee, Washington, D. C.

Sir: I have examined the bill (H. R. 4340) to amend section 407 of the Revised Statutes so as to require original receipts for deposits of postmasters to be sent direct to the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, and desire to say that its passage will greatly facilitate the settlement of accounts of postmasters, and I therefore earnestly recommend its passage by Congress.

Very respectfully,

W. S. BISSELL,

Postmaster-General.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I understand this is a House bill which was reported in regular form in the other House, and as it now stands on its passage here has not been referred to any committee of this body. It is recommended by the Senators upon what is called a joint commission, composed of members of the Senate and House of Representatives. What place is in the proceedings of this body, and under the rules of this body, a joint commission has a question for consideration. If it be a committee of this body it must have been created by this body and not by any outside authority.

The Constitution gives to this Senate, not to a preceding Senate, the right to designate the members of this body who shall constitute its committees. This commission, not a committee of this body, was not created by the Senate. It was created by the President of the United States and by the two Houses of the last Congress. Senators and Members of the present House to allow the President of the Senate to lay before the Senate a communication from the President. If those words do not mean the reading of the matter or the presentation of the substance of it, then they are idle, they mean nothing. There is no sense in laying papers before the Senate in such form that the Senate can not understand the matter; and the rule makes that a question of privilege. The message has been laid before the Senate by the President of the Senate under that clause.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Iowa? The Chair hears none. The papers indicated will be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

MR. GRESHAM TO MR. WILLIS.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, October 19, 1893.

[No. 4.—Confidential.]

Sir: Supplementing the general instructions which you have received with regard to your official duties, it is necessary to communicate to you, in confidence, special instructions for your guidance in so far as concerns the policy of the Government of the United States towards the de facto Government of the Hawaiian Islands.

The President deems it his duty to withdraw from the Senate the treaty of annexation which has been signed by the Secretary of State and the agents of the Provisional Government, and to dispatch a trusted representative to Hawaii to impartially investigate the causes of the so-called revolution and ascertain and report the true situation in those islands. It was considered that it was needed the better to enable the President to discharge a delicate and important public duty.

The instructions given to Mr. Blount, of which you are furnished with a copy, point out a line of conduct to be observed by him in his official and personal relations on the islands by which you will be guided so far as they are applicable and not inconsistent with the course hereinafter contained.

It remains to acquaint you with the President's conclusions upon the facts embodied in Mr. Blount's reports and to direct your course in accordance therewith.

The Provisional Government was not established by the Hawaiian people, or with their consent or acquiescence, but has since existed with their connivance. The Queen refused to surrender her powers to the Provisional Government until convinced that the minister of the United States has recognized it as the de facto authority, and would support and defend it with the military force of the United States. She was advised and assured by her ministers and by the leaders of the movement for the overthrow of her Government that if she surrendered under protest her power would be restored fairly considered by the President of the United States. The Queen finally wisely yielded to the armed forces of the United States, then quartered in Honolulu, relying upon their declared intention to restore her to the throne and of what had occurred, to undo the action of the minister and reinstate her and the authority which she claimed as the constitutional sovereign of the Hawaiian Islands.

After a partial examination of Mr. Blount's report, the President is satisfied that the movement against the Queen if not instigated was encouraged and supported by a representative of this Government, as hereinafter will be promulgated in advance to aid her enemies in an effort to overthrow the Hawaiian Government and set up by force a new government in its place, and that he kept this promise by calling for the assistance of troops to be landed from the Boston on the 16th of January and by recognizing the Provisional Government the next day, when it was too feeble to defend itself, and the Provisional Government was able to maintain its position and to resist against any threatening force other than that of the United States already laid.

The President has therefore determined that he will not send back to the Senate for its action thereon, the treaty which he withdrew from that body for further consideration on the 9th day of March last.

On your arrival at Honolulu you will take advantage of an early opportunity to inform the Queen of this determination, making known to her the President's sincere regret that the reprehensible conduct of the American Minister and the unauthorized presence on land of a military force of the United States obliged her to surrender her sovereignty for the time being, and release of this Government to us to the flagrant wrong.

You will, however, at the same time, inform her that the President has determined the President expects that you will pursue a magnanimous course by releasing all aid and sympathy to all who participated in the movement against her, including persons who are or have been in official or military connection with the Provisional Government, depriving them of no right or privilege which they may be entitled to by the so-called revolution. All obligations created by the Provisional Government in the course of its administration shall be assumed.

Having secured the Queen's agreement to pursue this wise and humane policy, which it is believed you will speedily obtain, you will then advise the Executive of the Provisional Government of the determination of the President's determination of the question which their action and that of the Queen her constitutional authority.

Should the Queen decline to pursue the liberal course suggested, or should the Provisional Government refuse to assent to the President's decision, you will report the facts and await further directions.

In carrying out these general instructions, you will be guided largely by your good judgment in dealing with the delicate situation.

I am, sir, your obedient servant.

W. G. GRESHAM.

Enclosure: Mr. Gresham to Mr. Blount, confidential instructions, March 11, 1893.

MR. GRESHAM TO MR. WILLIS.

[Telegram sent through dispatch agent at San Francisco.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, November 24, 1893.

The brevity and consistency of your telegrams are embarrassing. You will insist upon amnesty and recognition of obedience of the Provisional Government as essential conditions of restoration. All interests will be promoted by prompt action.

MR. GRESHAM TO MR. WILLIS.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, December 3, 1893.

Your dispatch which was answered by steamer on the 25th of November for additional instructions is received. Should the Queen refuse assent to the written conditions, you will at once inform her that the President will cease interposition in her behalf and that while he deems it his duty to endeavor to restore to the Government the constitutional government of the islands, his further efforts in that direction will depend upon the Queen's or the Provisional Government's attitude. He will be assured and upon such pledge as he will present themselves, as measures of protection or punishment, or which may be done in the future, he will be permitted to proceed in a peaceful and amicable manner, as a part of his duty to the United States.

Should the Queen refuse assent to the written conditions, his further efforts will be taken by the United States to effect the restoration of the constitutional government of the islands, and to the President's duty to the United States.

Should the Queen accept conditions and the Provisional Government assent, the same will be governed by previous instructions. If the Provisional Government assents, her the United States instructions. If the Provisional Government refuses, you will say that the President, acting under duty and duty in confidence, will be permitted to proceed in a peaceful and amicable manner, as a part of his duty to the United States.

GRESHAM.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection the message of the President, with the accompanying documents, will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. HAWLEY. And printed.

PROPOSED DEPARTMENT OF ROADS.

Mr. HOAR. I present the petition of about 150,000 citizens of the United States, praying for the establishment of a department of roads as a department of executive administration of the National Government.

I desire to state that these petitioners have caused a very thorough investigation to be made, and they have ascertained that most enormous savings may be realized in the transaction of our domestic and interstate commerce, and in the transaction of almost every business by an improvement in the character of our roads, which in many parts of the country, indeed, in all parts of the country, are very far behind the roads which exist in foreign countries, especially on the continent of Europe and in England.

This matter has from a small beginning grown in the public estimation so that now this request is made by nearly 150,000, among them the best and most intelligent citizens of the country. The petition is indorsed by about a thousand newspapers. Attached to the petition are the names of seventeen governors of American States, many State officers, many judges of State courts, and, speaking now for my own State, it has the indorsement of the State Legislature and the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

I respectfully request that the petition be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, which seems to me to be the most appropriate committee for its consideration, and that the petition, without the signatures, be printed as a document.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. President, a word only supplemental to the statement of the Senator from Massachusetts, with the consent of the Senate.

I am somewhat familiar with the petition. Copies were scattered throughout the country for signature I think early in the last Congress. The reading of the petitions will evidence the fact that certainly from a year to a year and a half ago they were started on their mission to obtain signatures. The prayer is for the establishment of a department of roads, similar to the Department of Agriculture. I doubt very much whether the petitioners have weighed fully exactly the full import and extent of that prayer. While the subject of good roads is one that commands itself to everyone, while that cause has no greater or firmer friend than myself, I certainly would not favor the establishment of another Cabinet officer and a department akin to that of the Department of Agriculture for the purpose of taking charge of this question.

Largely because of the action and work of the newspapers in this direction there was appropriated in the last Congress, my recollection is, $10,000, for the purpose of establishing in the Department of Agriculture a bureau or division that should investigate the subject and give to the public such information concerning the practical making of roads as would be advisable. I think that perhaps answers to a very large extent the desire of these petitioners. I doubt very much whether, when they come to fully consider the matter, they would desire to go further except to maintain that bureau, which is now doing very effective work under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. HOAR. The petition which has been presented asks the Senate to consider this question and to hear the views of the petitioners, and it comes from persons whose words do not fall to the ground and who are not accustomed lightly or without reflection to make such a request. I am a little surprised that my honored and intelligent friend from Nebraska takes the attitude of saying that he would never do such a thing before he has heard the petitioners; but I am inclined to think that when he has heard the petition and the petitioners he will do what takes place in other like cases.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, a single observation on this subject. While I am quite as anxious as the Senator who has presented the petition to do anything that Congress can consistently do to improve the roads of the country, I wish to call attention to the fact that the promoter of this matter, as it has come to my knowledge, is the leading manufacturer of bicycles in the United States, and I venture to suggest that I trust if Congress does not favorably in any direction upon the question presented in the petition, the gentleman who has sent out the petitions and spent a great deal of money to produce what is now before the Senate may be influenced in some way to take into consideration the propriety of reducing the exorbitant prices that he asks for his bicycles, in the interests of the small boys of the country.

Mr. COCKRELL. The suggestion of the Senator from New Hampshire is exceedingly pertinent.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask unanimous consent, as the petition is very short, that it be either read or printed in the RECORD.

Mr. HALE. Not the names?

Mr. MANDERSON. Not the names, simply the body of the petition. It is very short. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. COCKRELL. Does the Senator mean a picture of the whole thing, and the contents? [Laughter.]

Mr. MANDERSON. Oh, not the body of the petition.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection, and the petition will be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. HOAR. As the extraordinary course is pursued of undertaking to discuss a respectful petition before it is heard, I wish to say that I do not know who has promoted this petition or what the business is of anyone who has promoted it, but if it be true that the representative of the interests of the bicycle has an interest in it, and has promoted it, I do not think that is any cause either for taunt, or for condemnation, or for sneers.

The bicycle is the poor man's chariot. Its invention and perfection within the last twenty or twenty-five years have made it possible for poor men to live at a distance from their places of work instead of living in the crowded and unhealthy parts of cities. Poor men who can not afford to keep a carriage get innocent, healthy, and harmless recreation and enjoyment, and consequently come with very ill grace from Senators who peer out of their luxurious carriage windows drawn by elegant spans of horses to sneer at the man who finds his recreation in the bicycle.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, a single further observation in reply to the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts. I think he entirely misapprehended what I said. I certainly want the boys and poor men of the country to have a better chance to use this carriage than they have at the present time. It is a fact well known to everybody who has made the slightest investigation of the matter that the boys who to-day are selling for $150 apiece do not cost 25 per cent of the money that is charged to the poor men the Senator alludes to who are using them. My contention is that if the prayer of this petition is to be granted some concession should be made by the chief petitioner in the direction of a proper reduction in price of the article he manufactures.

Mr. President, I know from knowledge who has promoted this scheme, and while it may be meretricious in itself, I do not think that the Senator from Massachusetts ought to take offense at the suggestion I made in behalf of the poor men and poor boys of the country. I did not sneer at the matter at all. I believe in good roads as sincerely as the Senator from Massachusetts does, or as Mr. Albert A. Pope, of Boston, does, whose name appears on the petition as the promoter of this scheme. If the hearing to the petition is read it will appear that I stated the exact truth when I said this matter had been promoted and a great deal of money had been spent in securing the petitions by the leading manufacturers of bicycles in the United States. That is all I care to say about it.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, one word further. My honorable friend, if I mistake not, is a doctor by profession, and as he has stated, without I think knowing much about it, what is the motive of the gentleman who makes bicycles, I suppose it is equally proper for me to suggest that perhaps unconsciously to himself he may have a professional desire to have men cease to purchase the health-giving bicycle and save up their money to buy his pills. [Laughter.]

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the Senator is right in the suggestion that I at one time was a doctor. I will simply add the suggestion that if I could persuade myself that by any professional prescription I could bring the Senator from Massachusetts to permit other Senators, without unjust criticism on his part, the privileges of the Senate to the extent that he himself claims them, I should be very glad to give him a gratuitous prescription for that purpose. [Laughter.]

The petition was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, and ordered to be printed as a document, and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

We, the undersigned, citizens of the United States, hereby most respectfully petition that there be founded in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, a road department, similar to the Agricultural Department, for the purpose of promoting knowledge in the art of constructing and maintaining roads; and we ask that in such department provision be made for teaching students so that they may become skilled road engineers.

In connection with this road department, we request that there be established a permanent exhibit in which shall be shown sections of roads illustrating various methods of construction and also the best road materials and machinery.

We further petition that Congress appropriate funds sufficient to erect a building at the World's Columbian Exposition for the purpose of a comprehensive road exhibit.

NOTE.—When this sheet is filled with names please attach other sheets and secure as many signatures as possible. When this is done please forward it before January 1, 1893, to the address given below. Copies of this petition have been sent to various parts of the country, and it is hoped that at least a million signatures will be secured.

All petitions sent in before January 1 will be united in one great petition, which will be presented to Congress and the result will be, no doubt, the establishment of road department, an institute of road engineering, and a permanent road exhibit in the city of Washington, and a comprehensive exhibit of the construction and maintenance of roads at the World's Columbian Exposition.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE introduced a bill (S. 1354) granting a pension to Marilla Parsons, of Detroit, Mich.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

TREASURY ACCOUNTS.

Mr. HALE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, requested to cause the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to reexamine the following amounts and suffering to the Treasury for the year 1892, and to report to Congress for appropriation, and numbers 1,238, 132, 175, 700, of the year 1892, and $463, 346, of the year 1893, amounting in all to the sum of $387,916.67; and to submit the reasons for said certificate and a detailed statement of the facts upon which said claims originated.

TARIFF POLICY.

Mr. GALLINGER. I submit a resolution and ask that it lie on the table. I desire to give notice that at an early day after the holiday recess I shall call up the resolution for the purpose of submitting some remarks on the general subject of the tariff.

The resolution was read, and ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

Resolved, That in view of the widespread industrial depression existing in our land, bringing disaster to the manufacturing interest and loss of employment and suffering to the wage-earning classes, it is the sense of the Senate of the United States that it is unwise to attempt any change in the tariff laws on the subject of protecting the present Administration, believing as we do that the announcement that the protection to American industries and American labor secured by the McKinley tariff law is to be continued will reopen the factories and workshops of the country, giving remunerative employment to the hundreds of thousands of operatives now in enforced idleness, thus doing away with the suffering and destitution now prevailing to a greater extent than ever before in the history of the United States.

LAND IN PORTLAND, OREGON.

Mr. DOLPH submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the Senate copies of all papers and correspondence relating to the claim of the city of Portland, Oregon, for a special assessment against

WILLIAM A. STARKWEATHER.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I ask the Senate to take up the bill (S. 121) for the relief of William A. Starkweather, of Oregon.

By unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay to William A. Starkweather, of Oregon, $2,170, being the amount paid out by him to Owen Wade for clerk hire in the United States land office at Oregon City while register of the land office.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDNANCE STORES FOR NEBRASKA.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that it now consider the bill (S. 464) for the issue of ordnance stores and supplies to the State of Nebraska to replace similar stores destroyed by fire.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEN. NAPOLEON J. T. DANA.

Mr. DAVIS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 104) for the relief of Gen. Napoleon J. T. Dana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BERRY in the chair). The bill will be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be enacted, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint Gen. Napoleon J. T. Dana, late assistant quartermaster of the United States Army, to the position of assistant quartermaster, with the rank of captain of cavalry, and to place him on the retired list of the Army with that rank and pay, the retired list being thereby increased in number to that extent, and all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are suspended for this purpose only: Provided, That from and after the passage of this act no pension shall be paid to the said Napoleon J. T. Dana.

Mr. FRYE. Is there a report?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read, if there be one.

Mr. DAVIS. The bill was favorably reported at a previous Congress and passed by the Senate. The services were most meritorious.

Mr. HARRIS. We can not hear the Senator from Minnesota on this side.

Mr. FRYE. I do not care to have the report read. I understand from the Senator from Minnesota that the bill was reported favorably at a former Congress, and the report was read, and the bill passed without any objection.

Mr. HARRIS. The bill seems from the reading at the desk to increase the number of retired officers. Is that the object and purpose of it?

Mr. DAVIS. It is not the object and purpose of it, but in all these cases, except those which are peculiar in their character, where provision is made for cases of this kind, the list is necessarily increased for that purpose, and no further.

Mr. TELLER. It is increased to the amount of one.

Mr. DAVIS. Yes, to the amount of one. It is done very often.

Mr. HARRIS. I shall not interfere with the passage of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FORT JUPITER MILITARY RESERVATION LANDS.

Mr. PASCO. I ask unanimous consent that the bill (S. 653) to open certain parts of Fort Jupiter military reservation, in the State of Florida, to entry under the homestead laws, be taken up for present action.

The bill was read.

Mr. CALL. I should like to inquire of my colleague if adequate protection is given in the bill to persons who have gone upon the reservation and made improvements, but who are not entitled under the homestead laws, either because of having entered at some former time or for any other reason? I understand there are a large number of persons upon that reservation who have gone upon it and made valuable improvements, and that some provision for their relief should be contained in the bill.

Mr. PASCO. I will state that, in accordance with the suggestions from the General Land Office, the privilege is confined to those who are entitled to homesteads under the general homestead laws, and it is not extended beyond that.

Mr. CALL. It is my purpose to move an amendment; and it should not be done hastily, so that those persons who have gone upon the reservation and made valuable improvements there may be protected. I ask my colleague to allow the bill to go over and to add an amendment of that kind to it.

Mr. PASCO. I will state that the bill as originally framed, introduced in the last Congress by my colleague, did contain such a provision, but in accordance with the recommendation of the Interior Department that feature of the bill was stricken out and the bill presented in its present shape. If my colleague objects now to the consideration of the bill it can be passed over.

Mr. CALL. Let it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over without prejudice.

EXTENSION OF NORTH CAPITOL STREET.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill 146.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 146) to extend North Capitol Street to the Soldiers' Home.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. MORGAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After thirty minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire to make a statement in connection with a request to be submitted to the Senate.

House bill 4763, making appropriations to supply further urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for prior years, and for other purposes, has been sent to the Senate and has been referred to the Committee on Appropriations. The committee have given it consideration.

It is generally quite well understood that as soon as this bill is passed, the order to adjourn for the holiday recess will be fixed for to-morrow, and will be sent to us from the other House. It is well known to most Senators that in some other legislative body, which may have to act upon this bill in the event of any amendment being made to it, it would probably be impossible to secure a quorum for the consideration of such amendment. Many Senators desire to know exactly when the time of adjournment will take place, so that they can make their arrangements accordingly.

The Committee on Appropriations have, therefore, instructed me to report the bill back without amendment, to recommend its passage, and to request the Senate to give it immediate consideration. We do this not because all the provisions of the bill are satisfactory to or are approved by the committee. There are changes which might be made, additions which might be made, and subtractions which might be made, but there are appropriations in the bill which are absolutely necessary for carrying on the Public Printing Office and other branches of the public service, and great injury and loss will occur if the bill is not passed before our holiday recess, and we shall suffer the inconvenience of it. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the Senate now consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CULLOM in the chair). Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4763) making appropriations to supply further urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. GEORGE. I should like to inquire whether, during the first reading, it would be proper to offer an amendment, or to wait until the reading of the bill is completed?

Mr. HARRIS. The bill should be first read.

Mr. GEORGE. Very well, let the bill be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is now being read as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HALE. For amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be open to amendment after it shall have been read.

The reading of the bill was read and concluded.

Mr. FEEFER. I move to strike out all of the items referring to the mileage of Senators and Members of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the items which the Senator from Kansas moves to strike out.

The Secretary. On page 9, it is proposed to strike out from line 15 to line 19, inclusive, as follows:

For mileage of Members of the House of Representatives and Delegates from Territories, $330,000, for the second session of the Fifty-third Congress.

For mileage of Senators for the second session of the Fifty-third Congress, $45,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, at the last session of Congress—I refer to the extraordinary session—a joint resolution was presented to this body proposing to make available the funds which had already been appropriated for the mileage of Senators and Members of the House of Representatives for the regular session of this year.

It was my understanding then, as it is now, that the law allows to Senators and Members of the House of Representatives mileage but once a year. When the joint resolution was before the Senate at that time I objected to it on several grounds, one of which was that we were not entitled at that time to the use of funds which had been appropriated for use at another time. Another ground of objection was that we did not deserve it, that in the then condition of the country, with industries depressed, with the energies of a large portion of our people paralyzed, with thousands upon thousands of our fellow-citizens out of employment and clamoring for the bare necessities of life, that we as members of their National Legislature ought not to propose to take to ourselves money which at least doubtfully belonged to us; and now, Mr. President, I submit that the conditions are a hundredfold, yes a thousandfold worse than they were at that time.

I submit, further, that it is out of order—using the word "order" in that relation—for us to take any additional compensation, for that is what this provision means.

Our mileage is twice as much as it ought to be. The intention of the law doubtless was that actual expenses, and nothing else, should be allowed. The mileage that we are now allowed, 50 cents each day, is more than twice as much as all the expenses which the most fastidious person ought to incur in traveling here.

While I do not wish to detain the Senate, I do, in all candor and frankness, submit that in the face of the existing condition of affairs among the people, it is with bad grace, to say the least, that this proposition is submitted to us, and I hope the Senate will agree to the amendment as it stands.

Mr. DOLPH. This is the first time that my attention has been directed to the provision in the pending bill in regard to mileage. I wish to remind the Senator from Kansas of something which probably has escaped his attention, and that is, that no one is obliged to take the mileage. If this bill should be passed, and he or any other Senator has any compunctions of conscience about it, he can simply leave the money in the Treasury.

Mr. PEPPER. I understand very well, Mr. President, that no one is obliged to take the money. I do not wish, however, to put before the members of Congress the temptation to take it. Composed of honorable men, as this body is—I dare say I am the poorest man here—I do not like to see us going before the country at this time asking money to which the law of the land does not entitle us.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I think the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas ought to prevail. As the law now stands, we are not entitled to the proposed mileage. So the effect of this vote, if mileage is allowed, is to put into our pockets out of the public Treasury a sum which represents our mileage.

Mr. HARRIS. I wish to ask the Senator from Mississippi if he has scrutinized the question. I have not very carefully looked at it, but my understanding of the exact state of the question now is that by a joint resolution passed during the extra session mileage was paid for that session, leaving the law as it now stands, entitling every Representative and every Senator to mileage for the regular session.

Mr. WILKES of California. That is undoubtedly correct.

Mr. HARRIS. If that is true, it is not very exact, with which the Senator from Mississippi starts out in an inaccurate statement, and I beg that he correct it if I am right about it.

Mr. GEORGE. The Senator from Tennessee is not correct about it. The resolution which was passed at the extra session, as I understood it as read from the desk, was simply to make available for that time the mileage which was due at the regular session. I have no question you will get the statute and see if I am correct. I know without having made any particular examination on this subject—

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator shall have the benefit of the statute before we come to a vote.

Mr. GEORGE. Very well, I want the benefit of it and I want the country to have the benefit of it.

Mr. HARRIS. They shall have it.

Mr. GEORGE. I have never made any particular investigation into this matter. I am very apt, however, as most men are, to claim all the legal rights to which I am entitled, and I remember to have attended sessions of the Senate three times before I was entitled to mileage once. I attended the extra session of the Senate on the 10th of March, 1881, and I was informed that I was not entitled to mileage, and I acquiesced. I attended the extra session of the Senate in October, 1881. I was also informed that I was not entitled to mileage then, and I acquiesced. I drew my mileage for the first time in December, 1881. So I am pretty well satisfied that the law is the way I have stated it. If I am not correct about it, I think it is due to the people of this country that the statute be produced and the right to mileage shown, for I regard this as a gratuity voted by members of Congress to themselves out of the public Treasury.

I shall read, for I have it before me now, the resolution which was passed at the extra session. I shall read it for the benefit of the Senator from Tennessee and other Senators who desire to be enlightened on this subject:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc. That the appropriate committees, Members of the House of Representatives, and Delegates from the Territories make in the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act for the fiscal year 1884 approved March 3, 1883, be and the same are hereby made immediately available and authorized to be paid to Senators, Members of the House of Representatives, and Delegates from the Territories, for attendance on the first session of the Fifty-third Congress.

So it appears I was right about it. The resolution merely had the effect to anticipate, to hasten, the payment of the mileage, of what would be paid to us at this regular session.

One more remark, and then I shall take my seat. This is a gratuity which we vote to ourselves out of the public Treasury without having any lawful warrant or claim to it. I do not think that the condition of the Treasury, it being threatened with a deficit, and that the condition of the taxpayers of this country, it being threatened with a demand for a warrant us in making this gratuitous donation to ourselves.

For that reason I shall vote for the proposition to strike out so much of the bill as makes an appropriation for mileage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER].

Mr. GEORGE. I call for the yeas and nays on that question. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HOAR. What is the form of the question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas, striking out certain provisions of the bill relating to mileage.

Mr. HARRIS. Before the roll call proceeds—I was out for a moment—I wish to ask, has the explanation been made that the original resolution contained the language that the mileage allowed for the extra session should be in lieu of regular mileage, and that upon motion that language was stricken out by a vote of the House of Representatives? I want the Senate to understand that fact, which, if it means anything, means that it was intended to leave the statute as it stood with regard to regular mileage exactly as the statute provided.

Mr. COCKRELL. And this is only to comply with existing law.

Mr. HARRIS. Absolutely.

Mr. GORMAN. I shall vote against the amendment of the Senator from Kansas proposing to strike out the provision for mileage which comes here in the bill. My colleague and myself are probably the only members of this body who have no equity in the question. With the exception, with the exception, probably, of the Senators from West Virginia, the Senators from Virginia, and perhaps the Senators from one or two other States.

Unquestionably the intention in framing the law in regard to mileage by a coordinate branch of the Government was to provide only for two mileages for one Congress, beginning at each regular session. It was undoubtedly framed, and as I think unjust, in order to provide for mileage to Senators who are called together in extra session.

I do not agree that the measure of compensation for Senators and Members of the House of Representatives, fixed, as it is, at $3,000 per annum with mileage, is a just, proper, or adequate compensation for the service rendered.

The matter of mileage operates unjustly in giving a larger compensation to some than to others who perform the same service, except in so far as the amount of travel may be a factor, which is not now inconvenient to any extent. Such is the law.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.
The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.
W. L. HARDY AND OTHERS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States: which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

To the Senate of the United States:

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION.

Washington, January 4, 1894.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, recommending an amendment to the bill (H. R. 4292) regarding the purchase of supplies for the Departments in Washington; which, with the accompanying papers, was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. GALLINGER. I present the memorial of a large number of employes of the A. P. Olzendam Hosiery Company, of Manchester, N. H., remonstrating against the enactment of the so-called Wilson tariff bill. The memorialists state that if the "bill should become a law it would have a most disastrous effect upon the industry which gives them employment. Those among us who have worked in Europe know that the prices paid for labor in Europe are so much lower than the prices paid for the same labor in this country, that if foreign-made goods were admitted to this country at such a rate of duty as the Wilson bill would give them, it would have the effect of either throwing us out of work entirely, or else of cutting down our wages to about the same rate as is paid in Europe."

The memorialists further desire to inform Congress "that if we are thus deprived of our means of earning a livelihood, or if we are obliged to work for reduced wages, we will hold those responsible who vote for the bill; and we hereby assert most positively that, irrespective of former party affiliations, we will vote and work against the election of any member who will favor a bill that will cause such distress to the laboring classes."

I move that the memorial be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. MC MILLAN. Some days ago I gave notice that on Friday of last week I should call up the resolutions of the House of Representatives in regard to the death of Hon. The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

ALLEGED VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL-SERVICE LAW.

Mr. LODGE. I submit a resolution of inquiry, and ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the United States Civil Service Commission is hereby instructed to report with as little delay as possible to the Senate the number and character of the cases which it has considered since March 4, 1889, or which it has now under consideration, in which it is alleged that the civil-service law, or regulations, or orders thereunder approved by the President, have been violated by the head of any one of the Executive Departments or branches thereof, or by any officer of the United States whose appointment is subject to the confirmation of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. Before the resolution is adopted, as I presume it will be, and I do not object to it, I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts why he has designated a certain date in 1889 as the time to which this information shall apply and beyond which it shall not go?

Mr. LODGE. Because I desire to cover both Administrations. I do not wish to make it apply merely to one; I wish it to apply to both Administrations.

Mr. BERRY. I ask that the resolution go over. I object to its consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over under the rule.

Mr. CALL. Will the Senator from Arkansas permit me to suggest to the mover of the resolution the propriety of its reference to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment, through whom I suppose his object can be accomplished?

Mr. LODGE. The resolution goes over under the rule, I presume. I hope it will not be referred. It is merely a resolution to obtain information.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution goes over under the rule.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to communicate to the Senate the facts known to his Department tending to show the necessity of additional safeguards for the approach of vessels to Boston Harbor in the nighttime or stormy weather, and especially whether, in the judgment of his Department, it is desirable that a light-ship should be anchored easterly of the Boston light, with foghorn or siren; and whether there be any need of range lights or beacons to enable vessels to come up the harbor at night.

And further to communicate to the Senate all recommendations on the subject made by the Light-House Board in recent years, together with the probable cost of such securities.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts asks for the present consideration of the resolution. Is there objection?

Mr. HARRIS. Let the resolution be read again.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be again read.

Mr. HOAR. I will say to my friend from Tennessee that the resolution merely directs the Secretary of the Treasury to inform Congress as to the necessity of a light in Boston Harbor.

Mr. HARRIS. Then I do not care to have the resolution again read.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

HANDBOOK OF EXPERIMENTAL STATION WORK.

Mr. McVILLAN submitted the following concurrent resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Resolved, That the Director of the Agricultural Department establish a Handbook of Experimental Station Work, 10,000 copies, of which 5,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 4,000 for the House, and 1,000 for the use of the Department of Agriculture.

CONDITION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT: The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution offered by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER], coming over from a previous day. The Secretary will read the resolution.

Mr. BERRY. There was a resolution of the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL] which, when it was up for consideration on a previous day, it was agreed should stand over until this morning.

Mr. CALL. On the last day of the session of the Senate last week a resolution submitted by me relating to the civil service of the Government was up for consideration, and at the conclusion of the morning hour it was proposed, and by unanimous consent it was agreed to, that it should come up for consideration to-day. That is the resolution to which the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] refers. I ask that it may be now considered. I presume that it will not interfere with the Senator from Kansas for any length of time.

Mr. HARRIS. When the resolution went over the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] was on the floor.

Mr. PEPPER. I did not hear the concluding remarks of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. CALL. I stated that on the last day of the session of the Senate last week the resolution relating to the civil service was under consideration, and at the close of the morning hour, the Senator from Missouri being upon the floor, it was unanimously agreed that it should come up for consideration this morning after the close of the routine business. I ask, therefore, that the resolution may be now taken up.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida?

Mr. PEPPER. I shall not object to the resolution being taken up, provided the resolution submitted by me, coming over from a previous day, be not displaced.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator that his resolution will be in order after the disposition of the resolution to which the Senator from Florida has called the attention of the Senate. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution of the Senator from Florida, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. CALL January 16, 1894, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment be required to examine into the condition of the civil service of the United States and the expediency of its retention or increase, and to report to the Senate by bill or otherwise.

Mr. BERRY. I offer an amendment to the resolution, which I ask may be read. At the close of the resolution I move to add as an amendment what I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add to the resolution the following:

Such committees shall also report to the Senate the number of persons employed in the classified service, and with State and Territory and so far as they can ascertain, the number belonging to each political party; and whether the public service would be improved by the repeal or modification of the present civil-service law.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, I only desire to add a few words at this time in regard to the amendment.

I wish the committee to report specifically to the Senate, so far as it may be possible to do so, the number of employes that each State now has in the classified service and the number belonging to each political party, and also to report if the public service would not be improved by the repeal or modification of the present civil-service law. I want to get all the facts before the Senate and the country.

The civil-service law has been called a nonpartisan law, but there is a growing belief throughout the country that it is a regular partisan machine, and that it is used to keep in office those of one political party—I mean the Republican party. It is alleged that first of all every six of those now employed in the classified service belong to the Republican party. It seems to me that this is unjust and unfair.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] said the other day that the law did not keep anyone in office, but that it only related to the manner of putting persons in office. While that may be true as to the letter of the law, the facts contradict it so far as the present practice is concerned, or as it has been since the law has been in operation, because it has succeeded in keeping in office the same men, the great majority belonging to one political party.

As I said the other day, I believe that this law ought to be repealed. I do not know whether it be possible to repeal it or not; but if not, I believe that it ought to be modified and restricted in its operation at least to appointments in the Departments here in this city, and ought not to be continually extended from year to year. It is notorious that this law has not improved the service in any way whatever. I, for one, with my personal knowledge of the operation, should be willing to vote for repealing it, but if that can not be done, I want to modify and restrict the law, and not be continually extending its operations to objects and purposes which were never intended by the framers of the original law.

Mr. COCKRELL. I wish to ask the Senator from Arkansas a question. The Senator stated what I said the other day, that the civil-service law did not appertain to the exit from office, but only to the entrance to office; but it did not, by its terms or its meaning, intend to retain anyone in office against the will and pleasure of the executive Administration. Is the civil-service law to blame for the retention of three-fourths of the employes of the Government as Republicans, or is the executive Administration responsible for the retention of Republicans in preference to their removal and the appointment of Democrats?

Mr. BERRY. I do not know where the responsibility lies, but I do know, as the Senator knows, that the effect of the law as it has been executed, is that Republicans have been kept in office; that this disproportion has continued for all these years; that that service is not represented in any nonpartisan way, and that some of the most extreme Republican partisans who are in office are holding their offices under a Democratic Administration.

I repeat what I said the other day, that I believe the head of this Government, the Democratic President, ought to be surrounded by personal friends and not by political enemies. They are continually doing everything in their power to make his Administration a failure. That is my objection to the law. Whatever may be the letter of the law, the execution of it results in keeping in office partisan Republicans under a Democratic Administration.

I want a full report in regard to all the facts. I want to know what these appointments are distributed among the several States and everything connected with it by a report of the committee. When the committee have laid before us all the facts as to the law and the manner of its execution, we can debate the question.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I ask that the original resolution and the pending amendment may be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution of Mr. CALL, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment be required to examine into the condition of the civil service of the United States and the expediency of its retention or increase, and to report to the Senate by bill or otherwise.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] will now be read:

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add to the resolution:

Such committees shall also report to the Senate the number of persons employed in the classified service, and with State and Territory, and so far as they can ascertain, the number belonging to each political party; and whether the public service would be improved by the repeal or modification of the present civil-service law.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President, if I am not mistaken we had from the Civil Service Commission a report within the last few weeks, certainly within the last few months, giving the number of appointees who were regulated by civil-service rules, and the States to which they were charged. The resolution as proposed to be amended would involve an immense amount of work. If it is wise to have it there certainly can be no objection to it, but it seems to me the additional information required would be impossible for any committee to ascertain.

Who is to tell what is the politics of the men who now hold office throughout the country? How can the committee ascertain whether these men have changed their views or not? There are men who six months ago entertained political views of one sort who have within the last few months changed them, I am advised. From time to time people change their views, and accordingly they say to the committee to ascertain them with the incoming of each Administration. It is certainly impossible that any committee can ascertain this information.

Mr. President, it seems to me the amendment serves no useful purpose. The best test of the fitness of the Civil Service Commission. To my mind, is that the members of each political party find most fault with it while their own party is in power.

I agree with the Senator from Arkansas that it is wise that the President of the United States should be surrounded by political friends, but it is not always the fault of his political friends if the President is not so surrounded.

I shall object to the adoption of the amendment at this time. Mr. BERRY. One word in reply. I looked throughout the Blue Book last night, and also the report of the Civil Service Commission, with a view of obtaining some information. I did not expect the committee to state the name of each individual coming from each State, but simply to give the aggregate number throughout the entire civil service employed from each State; and then, as I said, as far as they were able to ascertain their policies.

I think that the committee can not learn definitely and certainly the political affiliations of every man who is in the classified service; but as to those who are there the committee can give an approximate estimate as to the political party to which they belong; and I think the committee can certainly give us some information on the subject which the Senate does not now have. I want to get as near the facts as may be. I recognize why the Senator from Colorado would rather that the facts should not go forth to the world, but I think we are entitled to have them.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, as I said the other day when this matter was up, I think it is most desirable to have the most thorough inquiry into every branch of the classified service and the workings of the civil-service law. I think it is in the interest of the law and its proper enforcement.

As to the matter of a return of the quotas, that could comparatively be easily done. It has been done a great many times, and may be done again. I have no objection to the amendment if the Senate chooses to adopt it, but such an inquiry involves an inquiry into the political opinions of some 40,000 persons, including a large number of women who have come into the public service through the civil-service examination. I think this is simply putting upon the committee something which they can not undertake.

As to the charge that the law is used to keep Republicans in office, four years ago or more, in 1889, I know it was freely charged and in other ways that the law was simply an existence to keep Democrats in office; that is, when a party comes into power, it is always charged that the law is used to keep its opponents in office. It seems to me uselessly burdening the committee with something they can not do; but I do not propose, as a member of the committee, to make any opposition to the passage of the resolution, for the fuller the inquiry the better it will please me and the friends of the law.

Mr. WOLCOTT. If it be in order, I move to amend the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas, by striking out from the amendment so much of it as requires the committee to inquire into the political opinions of the 40,000 appointees under the civil service.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment of the Senator from Colorado to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the amendment after the word "Territory," by striking out:

And, so far as they can, ascertain the number belonging to each political party.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move, in lieu of the words proposed to be stricken out to insert "the dates of the appointments respectively." That will tell very closely, infinitely better than any report we shall get.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I will accept that.

Mr. COCKRELL. If we get a report now, it will be found that almost every officeholder will claim to be a Democrat. Everybody knows that in the War Department, after the election of Mr. Cleveland in 1884, there was a standing reward offered for any Republican who could be found in that Department. [Laughter.] We could not find them. If a report were made now, it would be stated that four-fifths or nine-tenths of the officeholders are Democrats, and if a Republican President should be elected, it would not be thirty days until two-thirds of them would be Republicans again. The law is only one way of ascertaining the fact, and that is by getting at the dates of their appointments.

We all know—and there is no use of disguising this matter—when the Democratic executive Administration came into power on the 4th of March, 1885, four-fifths of the employes in the Departments here were Republicans. During that Administration they were eligible and had made their application during President Arthur's term, a majority of those who were appointed under the civil-service law were Democrats, because more Democrats applied for appointments in the civil service under a Democratic executive Administration than Republicans. When the Administration changed again in 1889 and the eligible list was cleared of those who had applied under the Democratic Administration, then more Republicans applied. There is no question about that.

If Senators will examine the records they will find—and our personal observation teaches us that it is a fact—that more Republicans have applied for the civil-service examination than Democrats, and there was therefore a greater proportion of Republicans appointed under the civil-service law than there were Democrats.

The only way the proportion can be ascertained is to get at the date of the appointments, and take it for granted that nearly all the men who were appointed prior to the 4th of March, 1885, were Republicans, and that the appointments since then have been about equally divided between the two parties. That would be as near as we can come to a classification of the political complexion of the employes.

Mr. President, I protest against my distinguished friend from Arkansas holding the civil-service law responsible for the retention of more Republicans in office than Democrats, for I say—and I say that the law shows it upon its face, and every Senator upon this floor admitted it in 1882-'83 when that law was enacted—that the law had nothing in the world to do with exit from office; that it was only intended to guard the entrance to office, and that anybody appointed under that law could be removed at will and pleasure. The law only applies to certain classes of offices. If Republican partisans have been retained under a Democratic executive Administration, it is the fault of the Democratic executive Administration and not of the law. If under Republican Administration partisan Democrats were retained in office, it was not the fault of the law, but the fault of the Republican executive Administration preferring to retain them.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from Missouri is quite right. There is not one word in the civil-service law which impairs the power of the Executive to remove any man in the civil service. The Senator, however, in my opinion, is not quite right when he says that the political complexion of the classified service in the various Departments can not be ascertained to-day. A few weeks ago I instituted an inquiry as to one of the great Departments of this Government on my own account, and from sources which I regard as absolutely reliable, and that, in that Department, in the classified service there was at that time 85 per cent of Republican employes and 15 per cent of Democratic.

I favor the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas. If the result of maintaining the civil-service rule is to put 85 per cent of one of the great political parties in the subordinate positions in the service of the Government and only 15 per cent of the other, it is a thing worthy to be looked into.

The President may remove any one of these employes that he sees proper; there is no embarrassment about the removal; but, when removed, the appointee who fills the vacancy so occasioned is filtered through the Civil Service Commission and its report, and neither the President nor the Senator from Missouri, nor myself, nor anybody else can tell who is going to fill that place.

I was opposed to the civil-service law when it was enacted. I have not seen a moment, an hour, or a day since that I would not have taken pleasure in voting to repeal it.

I do not care to say more.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I do not wish to discuss this matter now, but I think the Senator from Tennessee, in order to make his statement complete, should have pointed out that the civil-service rules derive their authority from the President of the United States himself.

Mr. HARRIS. That is true. The President has the power to extend the civil-service rules to any class of service he chooses.

Mr. HOAR. I had a good deal to do with the framing and passage of the original civil-service law, more perhaps than anybody now in either House of Congress, except the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY].

That law carefully avoids trenching upon two debatable questions: one whether any authority under the Constitution can interfere with the President's subordinate power of removal; the other, whether the legislative power can prescribe to the President in the exercise of the power of appointment any obligation to appoint a particular person or to make the appointment from a particular class. Accordingly, as the Senator from Tennessee has pointed out, the power of removal is absolutely untouched, and the power of appointment is conferred upon the President and restricted to such classes of persons as he shall, by the rules which he himself establishes, appoint and prescribe. So that the constitutional power both of appointment and of removal, in the largest interpretation of that power which anybody puts upon it, is untouched by this law.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will inquire whether the Senator from Colorado accepts the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I do.

Mr. BERRY. I ask that the amendment to the amendment be stated. My amendment is to the resolution of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas be read as it was offered, and then read as it would read if amended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the amendment by striking out "and so far as they can ascertain the number belonging to each political party," and inserting "and the date of their appointment respectively;" so that the resolution, if amended, would read:

Such committee shall also report to the Senate the number of persons employed in the classified service from each State and Territory, and the date of their appointment respectively, etc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAULKNER in the chair). Does the Senator from Arkansas accept the amendment to the amendment?

Mr. BERRY. No, sir; the Senator from Arkansas is opposed to the amendment to the amendment. I think the committee can ascertain from the chiefs of divisions and the various sources there the political affiliation of the employees far better than the date of their appointment would show. Besides, to undertake to state the date of each one's appointment would require a vast amount of work for the committee. I think it would be far better to let my amendment be adopted as I offered it. I hope the Senate will vote down the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. WOLCOTT. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

RAILROAD LANDS IN FLORIDA.

Mr. PEPPER. I understand that the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL] expected to submit some remarks to-day upon another subject. I understand, further, that he is quite willing to yield to me for the present.

Mr. CALL. I give notice, according to the custom of the Senate, that I would ask the consideration this morning at the close of the routine business of two resolutions which I had formerly introduced, relating to what I conceive to be a violation of the acts of Congress and the usurpation by the executive power of the rights and powers of Congress touching public lands in the State of Florida, and recent approvals of them by the corporations of that State. Out of respect to the Senator from Florida who desires the consideration of his resolution to-day, I have agreed to give way with the understanding, for which I ask unanimous consent, that on Thursday morning, at the conclusion of the routine business, the Senate will agree to France, that is the policy of civilization wherever it is directed by high intelligence. There is a certain or a tremendous conflict going on all over the world. It is a conflict that Africa is no longer a Dark Continent, but a continent of the future. The policy of civilization is to get possession of fields in which commerce may be successfully prosecuted. And Mr. Chairman, there is one nation crippled, crippled by this strained rule of constitutional interpretation, where no nation absent, one nation which has no voice, no presence in all this conflict: that nation is the United States of America. * * * We lie here prone, inert. We are apart from the world. We have no voice in the affairs of the world. We are not like a great brutal giant, too lazy to go abroad and yet so strong that by our sheer inertia we are able to hold our ground. We are nobody's rivals. We are as harmless as sucking doves to other nations, and no one attacks us because we are in no one's way. * * * But, sir, I do hope—no, I earnestly—that somehow, at some time during my life, we shall have a foreign policy; a policy which will cause us to be taken seriously and not as a nation for aggression; a policy which will seize upon, if necessary, as other nations do, some of the fields of trade and commerce of this world; a policy by which we shall assert ourselves on every sea; a policy which will cause our flag to float wherever other flags float, and which, above all, will give us a fair share of the commerce of the globe, out of which other nations are making so much of our wealth.

For over thirty-five years I have known Judge Chipman. I knew his failings—and he would not thank the man who should try to cloak them—and I knew his absolute honesty and integrity, both on the bench and in the councils of his country. His love for his State and for the city of Detroit was with him a passion which overrode every party consideration. These things the people knew, and so they honored him with great trusts; and when his too brief career was done, with sorrowful hearts they said him to rest in ground made historic by his mighty deeds of Pontiac and Dalzell, and consecrated by the ashes of Cass and Chandler.

MR. VILAS. Mr. President, I shall attempt no addition to what has been already said, and well said, in commemoration of the lamented Judge Chipman, but rise only as a mark of the regard which he won from many beyond the nearer circles about his life.

Our measure, sir, of the importance of one man's life to the company of mankind is governed largely by proximity of view. If we try to raise before the eyes the shadowy figures of the race who have been and gone, the countless throng overwhelms the vision, and few amongst the mass are the forms discerned with anything of clarity. Those who are done still are the dominating figures from whom some rays reach to us, and some glow with the gleam of the overpowering sense of the infinite multitude of the dead, the nothingness of the living.

Equally oppressive is the comparison of the present with the future. In truth, the future, to man's eye, is but the past inverted, and we stand between the two upon this, our "bank and shoal of time," unable to discern the beginning or ending of the race to which he belongs. Consequently that we are but insignificant numbers in the infinite reckoning of them who have gone before or shall follow us.

If our estimate of a man were thus to depend upon his comparative consequence in the race of men, we should be liable to extinguish the aspirations and principles which elevate aims and inspire excellence. Not so did the God of nature design us to view our places and performances in this world. We must recognize our limitations, bound our judgment by the knowledge permitted us, and leave the rest to God, sure "He doeth all things well." Why seek to measure the things about us here and now by guides to be drawn from beyond the line of mortal sight? Everything human, not alone of action, but even of thought, is tied down by time and place.

Not with the least approach to comprehension can the boldest thought be used to grasp the consistency of the infinite dimness on which the eye rests daily and through which tremble the gems of the canopy of night. The utmost aids which invention supplies to vision but prove it more surely incomprehensible.

If, therefore, we will pass under our review the life work of any man with justice, we must estimate his deeds according to the circumstances of his place and time, and leave to God all other judgments. Whose is the part which fell to him in the allotment of place and labor? Did he carry well the burden laid upon him? Did he meet opportunity at his gate? Did he live among his fellows as one who knew the second of the two great Commandments?

Sir, in the human view, Judge Chipman's part was, in the main, well done. Greater splendor may mark the lives of some, but his possessed far more than ordinary interest, and his place was in the higher ranks of the community. As a representative of the Northwest he enjoyed some peculiar advantages which challenge our interest and attention. In the early and distinctive history of the old Northwest of the Federal Union, Detroit was its foremost point of frontier consequence, the capital seat of its enterprise, trade, and authority. There his life began, on the crest of the advancing wave of civilization. There he lived, bearing the best life of the full share, from youth to age, of all the labors, trials, and anxieties which befall his community, participating in its joys and gratifications. And there, after more than three score years among them, he died in their arms, as it were, honored and beloved. In the shifting scenes of our new world, such has been the stable history of few who have sat as Representatives in Congress. I know of no parallel from the Northwest. And in what age of the world might he have lived when a more wondrous panorama of events could have swept before his view or a story of more thrilling interest have been enacted on the theater of life than it was his to witness? What a contrast between the America of sixty years ago and the America of to-day! In 1830 Detroit still retaining its character of a frontier station, although its frontier perils had passed away. There lives yet a venerable man—himself an able lawyer and judge—whom I have heard relate how, as a trapper's boy, he set out from that post in the early thirties, with no human companion but his hunter master, upon a six-months' cruise in the utter wilderness where near 2,000,000 of people now constitute the State by whose commission I voice here their testimony of respect for the man who then lay in a cradle there at Detroit.

What stirring impulses of quickening national life, what mighty throes of human passion and struggle have fired the brain and swelled the heart of every American during these two generations!

In the many vicissitudes of his time Judge Chipman carried the part of a wise and temperate citizen, discharging the duties of the hour and sharing with responsive sympathy the duties of progress which ruled events; doubtless with human errors, but with sincerity in his purposes.

Mainly his life work was in the administration of the law, at the bar and on the bench, as became his descent through a line of lawyers and judges. He manifested always—it is the testimony of all—an honest, genuine love of justice, which inspired and guided his useful career. The fame of the lawyer is rarely more than local and transitory, but is frequently great within its natural limits. Often he is the admiration, the idol, of such as may hear his speech and feel his power in loyal advocacy of the cause that has enlisted his heart; and few vocations call for or exhibit such instances of devotion and passionate labor in another's service as the good lawyer bestows for his client. But the impression which his life and his community have received of their testimony, after a long life work done, is conclusive of his character and his power.

Let it stand to his honor and good name that this proof in abundant measure establishes Judge Chipman's place among his fellow-men. Not alone in popular elections, where he always commanded the support of his city with continual advancement, but in the quietness of his private life, his life was crowned and enriched, but by many other unmistakable manifestations, the love of the people among whom he lived is proven to have been warmly bestowed on him. They loved him for his sense of justice, for his manliness, for his human kindness.

This popular affection was conspicuously marked at his obsequies by the outpouring of many thousands, of all ranks and conditions, to give thus their last expression of faithful attachment.

Sir, what, in human power to bestow, can promise better to soften the last agony; what human aid can more brighten to the escaping soul the vision beyond mortality, with hope for mercy in the judgment, than the encircling tenderness of the abundant love of one's fellow-men? That was Judge Chipman's guardian on earth; may it find gracious favor with the Divine Intercessor in Heaven!

MR. PROCTOR. Mr. President, my acquaintance with Judge Chipman grew out of his desire to learn about the home of his grandfather in Vermont, where also his father was born and bred to manhood. It was not the public service of his distinguished grandfather, Nathaniel Chipman, about which our friend inquired, for this was matter of history, but of the modest house on which he lived, the hill farm which he owned and tilled, the country churchyard where he was buried, and such details of the home life and surroundings of his immediate ancestors as a loving son might wish to know. The last time I saw him he expressed great regret that he had never visited Vermont, and said that he had resolved that the summer should not pass without doing so. It was then arranged that he would fix the date on which he would visit the State, and he was engaged to do so upon this. It seems often a premonition of the approaching end of life that the mind unconsciously turns to the early home, to the memory of those who have filled it, and to the last resting-place of the family and friends who have gone in the unknown path we are so soon to follow.

If Judge Chipman could have foreseen and ordered the exercise of to-day, I am sure he would have preferred that a representative from Vermont should speak—as I propose to do very

Mr. BERRY. I am also directed by the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 616) for the relief of David Dealy and Mary Younk, to report it back with a recommendation that it be indefinitely postponed, a House bill on the same subject having already been passed.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. MILLAN, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. 544) to reclassify and prescribe the salaries of railway postal clerks, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SHOUP, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 661) for the relief of the Shawnee tribe or nation of Indians, submitted an adverse report thereon: which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

DOCUMENTS ON HAWAIIAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. MORGAN, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported the following resolution; which was read:

Resolved, That there be printed for the use of the Senate — copies of all presidential messages to Congress touching the Hawaiian question; of all bills relating to Hawaiian affairs, and such as shall be sent by the President before this order is executed, and the same shall be arranged, as nearly as may be, in chronological order, and shall be printed. The arrangement and indexing shall be done under the direction of the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, the Committee on Foreign Relations have had great difficulty in getting a systematic idea of the public papers which have been sent in to the respective Houses, some papers being omitted from one document and some being omitted from another, and it was found necessary, in the opinion of the committee, to have a rearrangement, as nearly as may be in chronological order, of the various documents which have been sent here since the 1st of January, 1893, relating to Hawaii.

There is a Senate resolution, and without the concurrence of the House of Representatives we can only print documents at a cost not exceeding $500; but I suppose if we print these documents to that cost the type will be left standing at the Government Printing Office, or stereotyped plates will be made, from which any additional number may be ordered that the two Houses may desire.

Moreover, it is very desirable that there should be a topical index connected with this document, and really the Committee on Foreign Relations have taken some steps to have that index made.

With this explanation, I desire to have the resolution referred to the Committee on Printing, for the purpose of ascertaining the number of copies the Senate of itself has a right to order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be so referred.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS IN WASHINGTON.

Mr. RANSOM, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by Mr. SQUIRE on the 17th inst., reported it with an amendment, and asked for its present consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in line 2, before the word "Senate," to strike out the words "United States;" so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be instructed to transmit to the Senate all letters and reports relative to the Everett Harbor, including the mouth of the Snake River, also from the mouth of the Snake River to Lowell, in the State of Washington, since the 1st day of November, 1892, now in the office of the Secretary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

AWARDS UNDER SPANISH TREATY.

Mr. CALL. I submit a resolution, and ask that it be printed and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, requested to institute negotiations with the Government of the Kingdom of Spain for a reference to an impartial tribunal of the question whether the treaty of 1810 has been fully carried into effect by the United States, and whether the Government of the United States is bound in good faith to pay the full amounts awarded by the judicial tribunals to which the same were referred for the payment of the losses sustained by the citizens of the United States, provided for in Article 9 of the treaty of 1810, including interest and damages thereon. Also all other questions arising under the treaty in which it is claimed by the citizens of the United States of America have failed to perform and carry out the same, and to settle and finally decide what amounts, if any, remain to be paid by the United States and the claimants who have a right to the same.

Mr. CALL. In asking the reference of the resolution to the Committee on Foreign Relations I desire to state, so that it may be clearly understood, that I have in the receipt of a great many letters from citizens of Florida, as well as citizens of other States, claiming an interest in the claims under the treaty of 1810 and requesting me to advise them in regard to the employment of attorneys who are sending out blank powers of attorney for them to sign. I wish to state that I have advised all persons to rely upon Congress and upon the merits of their case rather than to dispose of these claims to speculators and attorneys. The time has not arrived when, in my opinion the services of attorneys and lobbyists are desirable. These claims are just and required to be paid in full by the United States. I shall insist, whenever appropriations shall be made, that the claims shall be paid directly to the claimants, and not to attorneys and agents.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and printed.

CORRESPONDENCE RELATING TO HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Mr. GORMAN. I submit a resolution and ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That there be printed in pamphlet form for the use of the Senate and House of Representatives 80 copies of House Executive Documents Nos. 70, 76, 79, 95, and 112, all being additional correspondence relating to the Hawaiian Islands, to complete the sets ordered and printed by the Senate on January 4, 1894.

Mr. HOAR. The Senate on Friday asked the President for later correspondence on this subject. The correspondence has not yet been communicated. Probably the answer will come in in a day or two. I suggest that that be incorporated in some way.

Mr. GORMAN. I have no objection to letting the resolution lie over.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator from Maryland will let the resolution lie over until tomorrow or next day, probably the additional correspondence will be sent in.

Mr. GORMAN. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over.

PATENT OFFICE GAZETTE.

Mr. HALE submitted the following resolution: which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on Printing be, and is hereby, directed to examine the facts and circumstances connected with the contract of the National Lithographic Company of Washington, D. C., for the publication of the Patent Office Gazette, and any other work, by said company, connected with the Patent Office. Said committee shall examine into the facts and circumstances connected with the proposals, by said company or any other person or company, for such work, the nature and extent of any terms and conditions connected therewith, the execution of the same with any official or officials of the United States, the awarding of a contract, unless such be the terms of the same, and all facts and circumstances connected with the time and with the manner of carrying out and execution of said contract, and, at or near a date as practicable, shall report the results of its investigations to the Senate.

In conducting its investigation said committee or any sub-committee shall have power to administer oaths to witnesses and to send for persons and papers.

FRAUDS UPON THE CUSTOMS REVENUE.

Mr. CHANDLER. I offer a resolution, for which I ask present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to transmit to the Senate a statement of the amounts expended during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1883, and since that date, under the authority of the appropriation in the act of March 3, 1879, for the detection and prevention of frauds upon the customs revenue, including a list of the names of the persons employed under such act and the several amounts paid them for services and expenses.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. BULLER. That resolution seems to be pretty far-reaching, and I suggest that it go over until to-morrow and be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the resolution will go over under the rules, and be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3605) to require railroad companies operating railroads in the Territories over a right of way granted by the Government to establish stations and depots at all town sites on the lines of said roads established by the Interior Department, asked for a committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. WHEELER of Alabama, Mr. KILGORE, and Mr. AVERY managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1126) granting to the Des Moines Rapids Power Company the right to erect, construct, operate, and maintain a wing dam, canal, and power station in the Mississippi River in Hancock County, Ill.

OVERHEAD WIRES IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate as part of the morning business a resolution submitted by the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], coming over from a previous day. The resolution will be taken up by title.

The SECRETARY. A resolution relative to the proposed abandonment by the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia of certain underground conduits in use for fire alarm, telegraph, and police telephone service in certain portions of the District of Columbia.

Mr. HALE. There are two resolutions which I have offered that come over to-day as part of the morning business. The Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] desires to address the Senate, and I ask that both resolutions shall retain their place as morning business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE SERVICE.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent that during the absence of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE] the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] may act upon the Select Committee on Woman Suffrage, and that during the absence of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOODFORD] may act on the same committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

INDEBTEDNESS OF SALT LAKE CITY.

Mr. FAULKNER. There is a very important and pressing bill on the Calendar which has received the unanimous concurrence of the other House. It is a bill of only nine lines, and I should like to call it up and put it on its passage, provided there is a discussion upon it. Of course, if it leads to debate I shall not press it. It is the bill (H. R. 4449) fixing the limit of indebtedness which may be incurred by Salt Lake City.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Enacted, etc. That Salt Lake City, in the Territory of Utah, may be indebted to an amount in the aggregate, including existing indebtedness, but not exceeding five per cent. on the value of taxable property within said city, to be assessed by the last assessment for Territorial and County taxes previous to the expiration of such time, and all laws and obligations in excess of such amount given by said city shall be void.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEWIS A. DODGE.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, on the 14th instant the Senate passed a resolution, which I offered, calling for the report of an investigation which has been recently made into the appraiser's office at Boston, Mass., with reference to Lewis A. Dodge, appraiser. Notice, on reading the resolution, that it simply calls for "the report." I intended, of course, to cover as usual the accompanying documents; and I ask that the resolution may be so amended, if there be no objection, as to call for "the report and accompanying documents."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the resolution will be so amended. The question is on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE BUILDING.

Mr. VEST. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the special order for to-day, in order that it may be considered after the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] has addressed the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the special order, the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1462) to provide additional accommodations for the Government Printing Office.

Mr. DOLPH. I have no objection to the bill being laid before the Senate, but I should like to have an understanding whether it has been made a special order for this time.

Mr. VEST. It has been.

Mr. DOLPH. Before 2 o'clock?

Mr. VEST. At 2 o'clock.

Mr. DOLPH. That is what I thought. I have no objection to that.

Mr. VEST. I do not want to interfere with the Senator from Virginia, and that is the reason why I call the bill up now.

Mr. DOLPH. I made the inquiry because I am very desirous to reach some bills upon the Calendar. We have not been able to take up the Calendar at all so far, and we are constantly interrupted. I desire to secure some time in the near future for the consideration of the Calendar.

Mr. CALL. I desire to appeal to the Senator from Missouri. I ask if he will allow the bill changing the boundaries of the northern judicial district of Florida to be taken up for consideration prior to the bill in his charge? The bill to which I refer will take but a very small portion of the time of the Senate and probably will require no discussion. If it is agreeable to the Senator, I should be very glad to have it considered and have his bill informally laid aside after the Senator from Virginia shall have concluded his speech.

Mr. VEST. I regret that I can not comply with the request of my friend from Florida. The bill for the Printing Office site has been waiting for consideration for some time, and I am so situated personally that I must ask its consideration. I have other matters pressing upon me, and will remain in the Senate under a sort of compulsion on account of that bill. I am obliged, under the circumstances, to ask for its consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection to the request of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. CALL. If the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] will allow me a moment, I will ask unanimous consent that the bill to which I refer may be taken up immediately on the conclusion of the bill now made a special order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida?

Mr. CHANDLER. I object. I shall object to all special orders until the Calendar is taken up for consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection.

TOWN SITES IN OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.

Mr. BERRY. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on House bill 3406.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. VICE in the chair laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives non-concurring in the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3605) to require railroad companies operating railroads in the the most unjust and burdensome exactions of the existing tariff law, in that it provides—

For a general reduction of the taxes on the necessities of life;

2. For the abolition or reduction of the duty on the raw materials which enter into manufactured products;

3. For a correspondingly lower rate of duties on the finished products into which such raw material enter;

And that its enactment will lead to more constant and better paid employment for American workmen;

And believing, also, that a prompt settlement of the fiscal policy of the Government is vital to the restoration of confidence and the stimulation of our industries and commerce;

Do respectfully and earnestly urge the passage of the Wilson bill in such form as will most effectively accomplish the objects above specified as speedily as may be consistent with a reasonable discussion of its provisions.

I ask that the petition be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HOAR. May I inquire of the Senator from Indiana the name of the first signer who reads the petition?

Mr. VOOHREES. I see some honored names here. I have not counted them all. I said it purported to contain something over four thousand names. Henry L. Pierce is the first name.

Mr. HOAR. I should like, with the leave of the Senator from Indiana and the Senate, to call attention to two facts: First, that the petition as it is stated goes on the principle of advocating a tariff for protection, because it points out the method in which the industries would be protected by the bill, as the petitioners fancy; and second, that if the opinion of the people of Massachusetts on that subject were taken I have no doubt there would be more than 100,000 majority against the views expressed in the petition.

Mr. VOOHREES. In answer to the brief speech of the Senator from Massachusetts, I will give a few other names. I see the name of J. M. Forbes. I see the names of William Lloyd Garrison and Amos W. Stetson. I believe those are names somewhat familiar in the history of the Commonwealth. I see the name of Endicott, and that class of names here, signifying that this is not a partisan petition. Indeed, I received a private letter accompanying it stating that it was largely made up of people who, up to this time at least, have regarded it their duty to vote the Republican ticket. Still it is an expression of Democrats as well. Now, if the Senator from Massachusetts is through I will send the petition to the desk. Otherwise I shall keep it here awhile.

Mr. HOAR. The name of Mr. John M. Forbes, whose name I will command not only respect but reverence, whenever it is mentioned in Massachusetts. I make no comment on the other names the Senator has mentioned.

Mr. VOOHREES. All right. I have myself the honor of knowing Mr. Forbes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The petition will be referred to the Committee on Finance.

THE LABOR PROBLEM

Mr. KYLE. I present a valuable paper, written by Mr. William Howard, of Bethlehem, Pa., entitled "A Solution of the Labor Problem." I should like to have this paper printed and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor. It is short, and has been spoken of very highly by such men as the late Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Windom; the governor of Pennsylvania [Mr. Pattison] and others.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the paper will be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, and printed as a document.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WOLCOTT, from the Committee on the Library, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1357) for the relief of Emile M. Blum, late commissioner-general, and James M. Seymour, jr., late assistant commissioner, to the Barcelona Exposition, reported it without amendment.

Mr. McMILLAN, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. 349) for the relief of Thomas Chambers, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PLATT. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1460) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish the Smithsonian Institution for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men," to report it with an amendment and submit a report thereon. This is a matter which ought to be acted on as speedily as may be, but as I have made a written report I shall not ask to have the bill taken up until the report has been printed. I give notice that I shall call the bill up at an early day after the routine business of the morning hour.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Meanwhile the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

The Secretary read as follows:

Coinage laws
of
The United States,
1792 to 1894,
with an

Appendix of statistics relating to coins and currency. Fourth edition—revised and corrected to January 1, 1894.

Prepared under the direction of the Committee on Finance, United States Senate.

Washington:
Government Printing Office,
1894.

Mr. DOLPH. The usual number of copies of this document will not enable Senators to answer the demand for it. I have already a number of requests in my desk waiting to be complied with. I suggest whether there should not be a larger number printed.

Mr. VOORHEES. Let this be printed for the temporary convenience of the Senate, but it ought to be printed as a public document for distribution.

Mr. DOLPH. I merely suggest that there should be a larger edition, more copies printed.

Mr. VOORHEES. I consulted with the chairman of the Committee on Printing, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN], and his suggestion is that if a resolution proposing a larger number of copies goes to that committee they will make an investigation of the subject and obtain an estimate, and do what may be proper under the circumstances. This I believe is to be done under the rules.

Mr. DOLPH. That is satisfactory.

Mr. COCKRELL. I understand this volume refers only to the coinage laws, and not to the currency laws or the laws relating to the issue of bonds.

Mr. VOORHEES. We are going on with that, but this should be done by itself.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is one publication, known as Coinage Laws and Currency Laws, which has been printed and reprinted once or twice. That volume has several omissions and mistakes in it, which ought to be corrected and a volume published containing all the laws authorizing any kind of coinage and all the laws relating to the issue of any obligations of the Government. It strikes me that it would be an excellent thing if they were put in the same book, and if the committee is preparing it they can be printed in one volume, and yet this volume can be printed separately for the time being. This compilation, I know, is a very valuable one. I have had occasion to examine it frequently, and I hope it will be printed.

Mr. VOORHEES. The work spoken of by the Senator from Missouri as containing errors, etc., is the former publication. Of course, Mr. Durfee is not responsible for that work; but we expect to cover that subject by the compilation made by him; and I have no hesitation in saying that when it is made by him it will be perfect in its kind.

Mr. SHERMAN. In respect to the coinage laws, there is no doubt whatever that the small book compiled by Mr. Durfee is very valuable, but it is imperfect in one particular. It undertakes to print all the laws relating to coinage, and therefore the compiler was compelled to omit portions of laws that contain provisions in regard to currency. For instance, only a portion of the resumption act is printed in the codification of the coinage laws, while the portion which relates to the issue of bonds, a subject which was discussed by us recently, is not in that book.

It seems to me that while this publication is a proper one, there ought to be a publication containing both the laws relating to the currency and the laws relating to the coinage in the same book. I will state that the Treasury Department have about every ten years published the laws relating to the currency, including the banking laws, but that publication is now practically out of print. I sent to get a copy of the latest edition of it, and the copy sent me was printed in 1886, I think.

Mr. COCKRELL. In 1886 or 1887?

Mr. SHERMAN. In 1886 or 1887—along there. That book ought to be in the hands of everyone who is called upon to discuss the question of currency or coinage.

Mr. COCKRELL. That publication has both the currency and the coinage laws in it.

Mr. SHERMAN. Not entirely all.

Mr. COCKRELL. Not entirely all of either. That is the point I made a moment ago, that it was not perfect either in the currency or in the coinage enactments; but it purports to contain all of them.

Mr. SHERMAN. It is not complete in either respect, but the Treasury Department naturally printed it in that way because there are bureaus confined to banking and currency, where a book would very properly omit all reference to coinage; but there are also in that Department bureaus where coinage alone is the subject-matter to be considered, and therefore, for the convenience of the Treasury Department, they have it in two volumes. But if Congress would provide for the publication of one volume containing all the laws relating to coinage and currency, then we would have for legislation all the information we need upon the subject that can be conveyed by law.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is no doubt that what the Senator says is correct and we ought to have the publication, but I beg to correct him. The publication of the Treasury Department that we have here as a document is all in one, coinage and currency together, and in neither respect is it perfect. They may have printed the Treasury Department for their own use those coinage laws in one volume and the currency laws in another, but the volume that was published by authority of Congress some years ago purports to contain the coinage laws and the currency laws, and neither one of them is perfect or correct.

Mr. SHERMAN. That volume is out of print.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have corrected it myself, and have it in that form. I hope the Senator from Ohio will join with the Senator from Indiana in urging that we should have two different books printed in one volume. I have no objection to the printing of the coinage laws in one volume, but the currency laws ought to be compiled and all ought then to be printed together in one volume, so that we may have the whole of them complete.

Mr. VOORHEES. The publication in this form has the strongest possible sanction from the present Secretary of the Treasury to me personally. I think the proper method is the one I am pursuing. The term "coinage laws" directs the mind at once to the subject of which it treats, and is not mixed up with the question of currency. It is the intention, so far as I am concerned, and I have no doubt that the Finance Committee will proceed now, through Mr. Durfee, the able clerk, who is employed, to compile a correct edition of the laws on the subject of the currency.

Whether it goes in the same book with this publication or in another book is a matter of very small importance to my mind. It is no matter to have them bound together or it might be well to have them bound separately. Certainly they ought to be separated so far as the material is concerned. For instance, as suggested by the Senator from Ohio, one law may treat on both subjects. The subjects should be separated as has been done in this publication. Those portions of the laws relating to currency and other subjects are left out, so that a person does not have to wade through a mass of other matter to get at the kernel he is hunting on the subject of coinage. This book addresses itself at once to the eye and to the understanding as a book entirely upon the one subject.

There is nothing so satisfactory, it seems to me, as to find a publication of this kind where you can turn to everything on a subject, unhindered by having to sift it from other matter. The subject of currency, the subject of the resumption act, and all such matters will come in their place and be carefully and cleanly edited, free from errors; and when that work is ready, the Senate can, if it sees fit, order the publication in one volume. I confess this is a matter of taste as to books. I would rather have them separated. I would rather have a book with its title telling me it relates to coinage and coinage alone, and another book treating of currency and that alone. But that is a matter for consideration hereafter. The proper course to pursue is to publish this volume at the present time, and when we get another excellent work, an edition of the currency laws of the Government, we shall present it and have it published also.

Mr. HALE. Before the Senator from Indiana sits down let me ask him if the committee has considered or has needed to consider the necessity of this important work having a thorough, complete, and exhaustive index.

Mr. VOORHEES. Yes, we have done so.

Mr. HALE. I trust that that has been attended to.

Mr. VOORHEES. Oh, yes.

Mr. HALE. It is the infirmity of a great many public documents on important subjects that half of their utility is shorn away by poor indexes.

Mr. VOORHEES. The book would have no value at all unless it had an index. I never owned a book in my life that did not have an index.

Mr. HALE. Recently I had occasion to look up a matter in the rules which I might need for my use, and discovered that in the index it had been left out of the proper subject-matter it should have been put under.

Mr. VOORHEES. The Senator may rest assured that that matter will be looked after.

Mr. HALE. I hope it will be looked after very carefully.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the resolution be read.
 Mr. WATKINS. There is no resolution pending. I simply repeat the constitution from the Committee on Finance, and ask that it be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Indiana that the document be printed? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

—Mr. McMILLAN. I submit a resolution, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Whereas there are now before the Senate twelve or more bills to charter new street railroad corporations or to extend existing lines in the District of Columbia;

Resolved, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, directed to inform the Senate—

First, Whether any considerable number of the citizens of the District of Columbia have represented to the Commissioners that there is need of increased street railway facilities to accommodate the public.

Second, What, if any, new lines of street railways are needed in the District of Columbia for public accommodation.

Third, Whether, in case additional facilities are required, such facilities can best be obtained by chartering new companies or by requiring the extension of existing lines.

Fourth, Whether it is feasible to require a transfer of passengers between city and suburban lines so that by the payment of a single fare a person may make a transportation from any point on one line of railway to any point on a connecting railway within the District of Columbia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Michigan asks for the present consideration of the resolution just read. Is there objection?

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President—

Mr. HALE. Let the first clause be again read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as indicated.

The Secretary read as follows:

First, Whether any considerable number of the citizens of the District of Columbia have represented to the Commissioners that there is need of increased street railway facilities to accommodate the public.

Mr. HALE. I move to amend by inserting after the words "to accommodate the public," the words "or have remonstrated against any new lines."

Mr. HARRIS. There certainly can be no objection to the amendment. The Senator from Michigan will modify his resolution so as to include that language.

Mr. HALE. Very well; we shall then get both sides. The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection the resolution will be modified as indicated by the Senator from Maine.

Mr. HALE. I cross a moment ago to object to the present consideration of the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair did not hear the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. ALLEN. I think the resolution should go over and be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection. The resolution will go over under the rule.

Mr. HARRIS. Let it be printed as modified.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be printed as modified.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLE, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2 to the bill (H. R. 5646) making appropriations to supply further urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for prior years, and for other purposes, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate; had disagreed to the other amendments of the Senate to the bill, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Kentucky, Mr. SAYERS, and Mr. CANNON of Illinois, managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1306) to establish a port of delivery at Bonners Ferry, Idaho.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 5258) granting a pension to Hannah Lyons;

A bill (H. R. 5485) to amend "An act authorizing the construction of a bridge across the East River, between the city of New York and Long Island," approved March 3, 1887; and TELEPHONE PATENT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. GRAY on the first instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Patents of the United States Senate be instructed to investigate all the facts connected with the application for and the issuing of the Berliner patent, now held by the Bell Telephone Company.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Senator from Delaware, who introduced the resolution, is not now present; and I think it had better remain upon the table for the time being.

Mr. HOAR. I think the resolution had better go to the Calendar in the ordinary way. If the Senator from Delaware shall desire to call it up at any time he can make a request, and I have no doubt the Senate will grant it. There is no use to have it read every morning.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have no objection to that course.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection, and the resolution will be placed on the Calendar.

COINAGE OF SILVER BULLION.

Mr. HARRIS. I move the second reading of House bill 4956, that had its first reading yesterday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Tennessee. The title of the bill will be read by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 4956) directing the coinage of the silver bullion held in the Treasury, and for other purposes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is the Senate ready for the question?

Mr. PLATT. What is the question?

Mr. HARRIS. The motion is for the second reading of the bill. It had its first reading yesterday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. PALMER. I ask if the Senate has reached the order of business where that motion is now in order? There is further morning business to be presented.

Mr. HARRIS. I will withdraw the motion if the Senator has a concurrent or joint resolution that he wishes to offer.

Mr. PALMER. I desire to make a report from a committee. Mr. HARRIS. I withdraw the motion for that purpose, or for any other purpose of legitimate routine morning business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair announced the close of that order of business, but will recognize the Senator from Illinois.

ANDREW FRANKLIN, ALIAS ANDREW M'KEE.

Mr. PALMER. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2627) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Franklin, alias Andrew McKee, and for other purposes, to report it without amendment and submit a report thereon. The committee also directed me to ask for the immediate consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Andrew Franklin, alias Andrew McKee, late private in Capt. M. Armstrong's company of Ohio militia from August 22, 1812 to February 23, 1813, and from July 28, 1813, to August 18, 1813, in the war of 1812, and pay him a pension of $50 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is there a report with the bill?

Mr. PALMER. There is. I ask that the report be read. It is very short.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report this day submitted by Mr. PALMER, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2627) granting a pension to Andrew Franklin, alias Andrew McKee, have examined the same, and report.

The report of the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House of Representatives, hereto appended, is adopted, and the passage of the bill is recommended.

Report to accompany H. R. 2627.

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2627) increasing the pension of Andrew Franklin, alias Andrew McKee, have considered the same, and respectfully report as follows:

The beneficiary is a pensioner at $30 per month under special act of Congress on account of services in the war of 1812. He served in Capt. Armstrong's company of the First and Second Regiments of Ohio Militia, commanded by Lieut. Col. David Sutton and Col. John Ferguson, from August 22, 1812 to February 23, 1813, and from July 28, 1813, to August 18, 1813. He served in the war of 1812, and participated in important military operations in Northern Ohio. Mr. Franklin is now over 70 years old and very feeble. His wife is 72 years old, and so crippled that she can do no work, and they are obliged to hire help to look after their wants. They have no other source of livelihood than the pension above referred to, and this, in view of the unusual circumstances, is insufficient to provide the ordinary necessities of life and at the same time employ the assistance necessary to their helpless condition.

In addition to his service in the war of 1812, Mr. Franklin also served two years as a soldier in the Mexican war, and was a teamster in the late civil war. A bill similar to the one before your committee was passed by the Senate and Congress, but failed of action in the House.

Your committee believe that the rate of pension provided for in the bill is absolutely necessary to the care and ordinary comfort of this old veteran and his aged wife, and the passage of the bill is recommended with an amendment striking out all of section 2.

Mr. PALMER. I will state in explanation of the report of the committee of the House of Representatives adopted by our committee, that the amendment recommended by it was made by the House.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COINAGE OF SILVER BULLION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If no further morning business be proposed, the Chair recognizes the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS].

Mr. HARRIS. I move the second reading of the bill referred to a few moments since, House bill 4956.

Mr. MANDERSON introduced a bill (S. 1743) granting a pension to Gen. John M. Thayer, United States Volunteer; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Ordered, That S. H. Sentenne and Paul Boileau have leave to withdraw from the files of the Senate, under the rules of the Senate, the papers relating to the bill for their relief in the Fifty-first Congress.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed with an amendment the joint resolution (S. R. 53) providing for the appointment of a commission to the Antwerp International Exposition; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bill and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 6080) granting a certain military reservation to Oklahoma City, Okla., to aid the public free schools thereof, and for other purposes; and

A joint resolution (H. Res. 5) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to transfer a certain piece of land in the State of Michigan to the city of Saginaw.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 1306) to establish a port of delivery at Bonners Ferry, Idaho; and

A bill (H. R. 2627) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Franklin, alias Andrew McKee.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I wish to call the attention of the Senate for a moment to a personal matter. My attention was called to a paragraph in the Washington Post of this morning in which it is alleged that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KYLE], and myself have complained—I do not know to whom, but that we have complained—that the Committee on Finance have not treated us kindly; that they have not treated us courteously; that they have not admitted us to their counsels; that we asked to be heard in behalf of our constituents and were refused.

What I wish to say is this, so far as I am personally concerned, I know nothing whatever about it. The committee have had no opportunity to treat us otherwise than courteously. So far as I am concerned, I have been at all times quite well satisfied that the committee had more than it could handle with the discontented elements in its own party, and, even though we had desired to be heard, I did not feel as though it would have been courteous to the committee to ask that we should intrude upon their consideration, and hence preferred to wait until the bill should be submitted to the Senate, where whatever objections we might have to the bill would then be presented in an orderly manner.

All that I have said by way of opposition to the bill was simply that if a bill should be presented to this body putting wool on the free list and leaving the manufactured articles therefrom on the dutiable list, I should feel it my duty to oppose the passage of the bill under such circumstances; and I have spoken of sugar in the same way, wool and sugar being articles in which the farmers are especially interested. We expect, when the bill comes before the Senate, to present our claims as to these articles.

I wish again, so far as I am personally concerned, to deny everything and anything charging discourtesy upon the part of the committee towards me personally. They have treated me very courteously; not only the committee, but every member of it, and I have great respect for them, personally and collectively.

DISTRICT STREET RAILROADS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read. The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. McMILLAN on the 6th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, directed to inform the Senate,

First, Whether any considerable number of the citizens of the District of Columbia have petitioned to the Commissioners that there be increased street-railway facilities to accommodate the public; or have recommended any new line.

Second, What, if any, new lines of street railroads are needed in the District for the public accommodation;

Third, Whether, in case additional facilities are required, such facilities could be obtained on reasonable terms, or by requiring the extension of existing lines;

Fourth, Whether it is feasible to require a transfer of passengers between city and suburban lines, so that by the payment of a single fare a person may secure transportation from any point on one line of railway to any point on a connecting railway, within the District of Columbia.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask the consideration of the resolution at this time, if there be no objection to it. The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] objected to it a few days ago. I hope he will withdraw his objection, as I should like to have the resolution passed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution which has been read.

The resolution was agreed to.

VIRGINIUS INDEMNITY FUND.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, on motion of Mr. MORGAN, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit herewith a report furnished by the Secretary of State in response to a resolution of the Senate of the 1st instant, making inquiry respecting the present condition of the Virginus indemnity fund.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,

Washington, March 8, 1894.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 6080) granting a certain military reservation to Oklahoma City, Oklahoma Territory, to aid the public free schools thereof, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title. The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. MANDERSON. My impression is that the bill should go to the Committee on Military Affairs. That military reservation has not yet been abandoned, and a bill of like import is before the Committee on Military Affairs.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill states that it is an abandoned military reservation.

Mr. MANDERSON. I think that is a mistake. I ask that the bill be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. The same subject-matter is now before that committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill will be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 5) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to transfer a certain piece of land in the State of Michigan to the city of Saginaw was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

ANTWERP INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the joint resolution (S. R. 53) providing for the appointment of a commission to the Antwerp International Exposition; which was, on page 2, line 19, after the word "Exposition," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, however, That nothing in this joint resolution shall be construed so as to create any liability of the United States, or incur, for any act or omission incurred hereafter by any claimant, or for permanent assistance to the Government of the United States, in support or liquidation of any debt or contract, or any claim, or for the payment of any of the provisions of this joint resolution.

Mr. SHERMAN. I move that the amendment be concurred in. The joint resolution as passed by the Senate does not provide for any liability on the part of the Government, and there is no objection to the amendment.

The amendment was concurred in.

UMATILLA INDIAN RESERVATION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed, and the Calendar, under Rule VIII, is in order.

Mr. DOLPH. I ask leave to have a very brief bill of local importance considered at this time. Let it be read by title, for information.

Mr. GALLINGER. I do not rise to object to the consideration of the bill from Oregon, but to say that I shall be compelled, if many more requests of the kind are made, to interpose an objection, for the reason that as long ago as last September I reported to the Senate a few pension bills which have passed the Senate several times heretofore. They propose to help out some poor and indigent people who have a just claim upon the bounty of the Government, and I very much desire that we shall get to the Senate as soon as possible.

Mr. DOLPH. The Senator is quite right. I have been wanting to go to the Calendar, but we have not been able to get to it during this Congress.

Mr. GALLINGER. I shall not object to the Senator's request. Mr. DOLPH. The bill which I now desire to have considered passed at the last session, and has been reported at this session unanimously.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The title of the bill referred to by the Senator from Oregon will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 90) to provide for the sale of the unsold portion of the Umatilla Indian Reservation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment, in line 15, after the word "advertised," to strike out "in such manner as the Secretary of the Interior shall direct," and insert "and conducted in such manner and under such regulations to promote fairness and to secure a just price for the benefit of the Indians as the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe, not inconsistent with law;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc. That all the lands of the Umatilla Indian Reservation not included within the new boundaries of the Reservation and not allotted or required for allotment to the Indians, and which could not be sold at the public sale of said lands and the Secretary of the Interior have been appraised and upon the conditions provided in an act entitled "An act providing for allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians residing upon the Umatilla Reservation in the State of Oregon, and granting pensions therefor, and for other purposes," shall be sold at the agency upon such reservation, by the register of the land office of the district within which they are situated, at public sale to the highest bidder at not less than the appraised value thereof, such sale to be advertised and conducted in such manner and under such regulations to promote fairness and to secure a just price for the benefit of the Indians as the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe, not inconsistent with law and in conformity with the provisions of said act, except that each purchaser of such lands shall be required to purchase one section of untimbered land, and 160 acres of timbered land, and no more; and that residence or actual occupation by the purchaser of the lands purchased shall not be required.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JULIA E. LOCK.

Mr. PALMER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 828) granting a pension to Julia E. Lock, formerly widow of the late Gen. Daniel McCook.

There being no objection the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions, with amendments, in line 4, after the words "directed to," to strike out "place on" and insert "restore to;" and in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifty" and insert "thirty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to restore to the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, and to Julia E. Lock, formerly Mrs. (formerly widow of the late Daniel McCook, brigadier-general of volunteers), at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM MCGARRAHAN.

Mr. GALLINGER and Mr. MANDERSON. Regular order. The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Calendar under Rule VIII is in order, and the first bill on the Calendar will be stated.

The bill (S. 341) to submit to the Court of Private Land Claims, established by an act of Congress approved March 3, 1891, the title of William McGarrahan to the Rancho Panoche Grande, in the State of California, and for other purposes, was announced as first in order on the Calendar.

Mr. MORRILL. I object to the present consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. An objection is interposed by the Senator from Vermont to the present consideration of the bill. Mr. TELLER. I ask that the bill shall stand on the Calendar where it is, without losing its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered. The next bill on the Calendar will be stated.

CROW CREEK AND WINNEBAGO INDIAN RESERVATION.

The bill (S. 131) making an appropriation to pay the damages resulting to the persons who went upon the Crow Creek and Winnebago Indian Reservation, in the State of South Dakota, between the 17th day of February and the 27th day of April, 1885, was announced as next in order.

Mr. COCKRELL. As the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs is not present, I ask that that bill may be passed over without losing its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection it will be so ordered. The next case on the Calendar will be stated.

MARY A. WISE.

The bill (S. 308) granting a pension to Mary A. Wise was announced as next in order, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Mary A. Wise, widow of Capt. Peter Wise, late of Company I, Eighteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HARRISON DE F. YOUNG.

The bill (S. 306) granting an increase of pension to Harrison De F. Young was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Harrison De F. Young, late a captain Second Regiment of New Hampshire Volunteers, at $50 per month, in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARTHA R. HITCHCOCK.

The bill (S. 553) granting a pension to Martha R. Hitchcock was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment in line 13, after the words "rate of," to strike out "$1,200 per annum," and insert "$50 per month;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Martha R. Hitchcock, widow of the late Ethan Allen Hitchcock an officer who served throughout the Seminole and Mexican wars and became a colonel and brigadier-general by brevet in the regular Army; and was honorably discharged as major-general of the United States volunteers after the close of the war for the Union and a service of nearly forty-four years in the armies of the United States, and to pay her a pension from the passage of this act at the rate of $50 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FORT JUPITER MILITARY RESERVATION.

The bill (S. 653) to open certain parts of the Fort Jupiter military reservation, in the State of Florida, to entry under the homestead law, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. CALL. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Mr. COCKRELL. I hope that motion will not be pressed at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania desire that the motion be put?

Mr. COCKRELL. I suggest to the Senator to wait until later in the day, that we may see what progress we shall make with the unfinished business. I should like to join the Senator in the action he desires if it can possibly be done.

Mr. QUAY. I withdraw the motion, and will renew it later in the day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion is withdrawn.

THE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. COCKRELL submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations be authorized to sit during the recess of the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. I submit another resolution. It is the usual resolution, but I presume it ought to go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations be, and it is hereby, authorized to employ a stenographer from time to time, as may be necessary, to report testimony as may be taken by the committee on its subcommittees in connection with appropriation bills, and to have the stenographer at its use, and that such stenographer be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Making a charge on the contingent fund of the Senate, the resolution necessarily goes to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. It will be so referred.

ALLEGED TRANSACTIONS IN SUGAR STOCK.

Mr. PEPPER. I submit a resolution, and ask that it be read, lie over under the rule, and be printed.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Whereas it is charged in many of the most influential and widely circulated newspapers of the country, and from them copied in the rural press, that some of the members of this body were actively participating in recent transactions on the New York Stock Exchange relating to the purchase and selling of shares of stock in organizations known as the Sugar Trust; and

Whereas it is alleged in said newspapers, and is being copied in the rural press, that the said members of this body, in their own personal interest and for their own selfish purposes, made use of knowledge and information procured by and through their official relations as Senators, to influence prices of shares in the sugar trust on the stock exchange in the transaction above said; and

Whereas it is alleged further, in the manner before mentioned, and is being circulated among the people, that the said Senators did, by reason of the franchise laws above referred to and their connection therewith, acquire large profits; and

Whereas the receipt of these charges and allegations is sufficient to require that they be fully, impartially and promptly investigated, to the end that the truth concerning them may be ascertained and made known, and the honor and dignity of the Senate preserved; Therefore be it

Enacted, That such a committee of all members of the Senate be appointed by the President pro tempore, whose duty it shall be to proceed without unnecessary delay to make a thorough investigation of said charges and all of them, and to report the results of the investigation, with their conclusions thereon at as early a day as practicable.

The said committee or any subcommittee thereof shall have power to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and perform all other duties usually intrusted to committees of like character, and to employ a clerk, a messenger, and stenographer.

The meeting of said committee shall be held in one of the committee rooms of the Capitol building, or in some other suitable room in a building belonging to the Government, and shall be held temporarily for this purpose, and properly supplied with furniture, stationery, and other conveniences by the Sergeant at Arms. Resolved, That in case the committee shall be of opinion that it will be expedient to make more complete and satisfactory examination of any relevant or material matter connected with the transactions out of which the investigation has grown, that the full committee or a subcommittee thereof shall visit the city of New York, such visit may be made.

The necessary expenses of said committee shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate on the usual vouchers.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. At the request of the Senator introducing the resolution it will be printed and for the present lie on the table, but the Chair suggests to the Senator from Kansas that under the law the resolution will have to go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate before it can be considered by the Senate.

Mr. PEPPER. I so understand. I rose to ask leave to change the words "Presiding Officer" to "President of the Senate."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be so modified.

Mr. PEPPER. I understand that the resolution will have to go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. MORRILL. I should like to ask the Senator from Kansas if he has any personal knowledge that there is any truth in any of these charges.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state to the Senator from Vermont that the resolution is not now before the Senate. It has gone to the table, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MORRILL. I was going to inquire further that if the Senator has not any such personal knowledge I do not think he ought to introduce a resolution of this kind.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection the Senator from Kansas will answer the inquiry of the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. PEPPER. Most cheerfully, Mr. President. If I had any personal knowledge of the matter I should so state and offer the resolution upon my own personal knowledge; but it being a matter of information concerning the sources named in the resolution, I thought it proper that the Senate should take some action concerning it by way of preserving its own dignity and honor.

Mr. QUAY. Is a motion to lay the resolution on the table in order now?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Not at this stage of the proceeding. The resolution is not before the Senate.

CONDITION OF TRADE IN INDIA, RUSSIA, ETC.

Mr. PETTIGREW submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, directed to send to the Senate, at his earliest possible convenience, answers to the following inquiries according to the best information now in his Department:

First, Whether any change has been made in the weight, fineness, or otherwise, in the legal-tender value of the coined silver money used by the people of India, Russia, or the Argentine Republic for the transaction of their domestic business; and if so, whenever, to what extent, and by what authority of law, during the past twenty years.

Second, Whether prices for the chief products of said countries, like wheat, cotton, etc., have advanced or declined in their prices when exchanged into their home markets for the legal-tender silver or paper money in common use among their people, and if so how much, during the past twenty years.

Third, Whether the products of such countries, through the sources named in the resolution, have increased or decreased, and if so how much, in the quantity and value of each, during the past twenty years, using their annual reports to ascertain amounts produced, exported, and manufactured, and their legal-tender silver and paper money to ascertain their home prices for the four years between 1872 and 1877, as compared with like averages between 1868 and 1869, as a basis on which to compare these inquiries.

E. T. CRESSEY.

Mr. PETTIGREW submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate is hereby directed to pay to E. T. Cressey the sum of $1,500 out of the contingent fund of the Senate, for services performed by reason of his preparing a catalogue of books in the library, including those stored in the basement, and in searching for certain documents of the earlier Congresses, in order to complete the files of the Senate from the beginning of the Government.

The motion was agreed to.

EAST RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. VEST. I was directed by the Committee on Commerce to ask the immediate consideration of a bridge bill, a very short one, which I reported this morning, and for the passage of which there is an immediate exigency. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5185) to amend an act authorizing the construction of a bridge across the East River between the city of New York and Long Island, approved March 3, 1857.

By unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM MCGARRAHAN.

Mr. COCKRELL and Mr. MANDERSON. Regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there further resolutions, concurrent or other? If not, the morning business is concluded, and the first case on the Calendar, under Rule VIII, will be stated.

The bill (S. 341) to submit to the court of private land claims, established by an act of Congress approved March 3, 1891, the title of William McGarrahan to the Rancho Pancho Grande, in the State of California, and for other purposes, was announced as first in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. I thought we were to commence with the Calendar to-day where we left off yesterday evening.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed by the Secretary that the bill the title of which has just been read was passed over yesterday to hold its place without prejudice.

Mr. COCKRELL. All right.

Mr. MORRILL. I hope that bill will be postponed until tomorrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Being objected to, the bill goes over.

Mr. WOLCOTT. In the absence of my colleague [Mr. TELLER], I renew the request he made yesterday, that the bill keep the place on the Calendar where it now stands.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Vermont object to allowing the bill to remain on the Calendar under Rule VIII without prejudice?

Mr. MORRILL. I do not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator does not object, and the bill will hold its place on the Calendar. The next bill on the Calendar will be stated.

DULUTH AND MANITOBA RAILROAD COMPANY.

Mr. GALLINGER. Concerning the bill about to be read, I will state that I have received a communication touching the matter from a constituent of mine, which I have mislaid, and I ask that the bill go over, retaining its place on the Calendar. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection the bill will be passed over, retaining its place on the Calendar.

ILWACO RAILWAY AND NAVIGATION COMPANY.

The bill (S. 634) granting a right of way across the Scarborough Hill military reservation to the Ilwaco Railway and Navigation Company was considered in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to hear the report accompanying the bill read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read. The Secretary proceeded to read the report submitted by Mr. COCKRELL, December 7, 1893, from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. ALLEN. I think the objection I was going to make to the bill can be obviated by an amendment reserving the right to alter, amend, or repeal the proposed act.

Mr. COCKRELL. I suggest to insert at the end of the bill as an amendment, the following:

And the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby reserved.

Mr. DOLPH. What does the Secretary of War say about granting this right of way?

Mr. COCKRELL. The bill was prepared by the Secretary of War.

Mr. DOLPH. Is the location to be approved by the Secretary of War?

Mr. COCKRELL. Oh, certainly. The bill is carefully guarded. The whole measure was prepared in the War Department. This is a reservation not far from the mouth of the Columbia River. There is nothing on it.

Mr. DOLPH. I know all about it. I know where it is. Mr. COCKRELL. Only in case of a foreign war would it be necessary to use it.

Mr. DOLPH. It may be important enough to be reserved and important enough to protect, but if the location is to be approved by the Secretary of War, with the right to alter, amend, or repeal reserved, there is no objection to the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. Oh, he will do that.

Mr. ALLEN. I hope the amendment suggested by the Senator from Missouri will be made.

Mr. COCKRELL. I offer the amendment. I move to add as an additional section the following:

SEC. 3. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby reserved.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN M. DAVIS.

The bill (S. 189) for the relief of John M. Davis was considered in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to set aside the general order of Maj. Gen. McPherson, approving and confirming the sentences of the court-martial dismissing John M. Davis, captain of Company H of the Sixty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and to issue to him an honorable discharge as of date of April 9, 1865.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RECORDING OF SUBDIVISIONS OF LAND.

The bill (S. 1005) to prevent the recording of subdivisions of land in the District of Columbia in the office of the Recorder of Deeds was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. CALL. I should like to have the bill go over, inasmuch as we shall need some explanation of it. I object to its consideration at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Florida desire to have the bill remain on the Calendar without prejudice or to go over under Rule IX?

Mr. CALL. I have no objection to the bill retaining its place on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over, retaining its place on the Calendar.

DISTRICT STREET RAILWAY TICKETS.

The bill (S. 443) to provide for the sale of new tickets by the street railway companies in the District of Columbia was considered in Committee of the Whole. It provides that no street railway ticket received for fare on any street railway in the District of Columbia shall again be sold to any passenger, but shall be canceled by the company issuing such ticket.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CROW CREEK AND WINNEBAGO INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I wish to call up at this time Senate bill 131. It has been laid over several times because of the absence of the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs. I see him present. I will withdraw the amendment which I offered the other day, and ask to have the bill passed as it came from the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is it one of the bills that have been passed over informally and remain on the Calendar under Rule VIII?

Mr. PETTIGREW. It is; under Rule VIII.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 131) making an appropriation to pay the damages resulting to the persons who went upon the Crow Creek and Winnebago Indian Reservation, in the State of South Dakota, between the 17th day of February and the 27th day of April, 1885.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has already been read in Committee of the Whole, and the pending question is upon the amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota, which the Chair now understands the Senator proposes to withdraw.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I withdraw the amendment. The amendment was submitted to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and a quorum of the committee unanimously recommended its adoption. But the chairman of the committee wishes to investigate it further, and I have concluded to withdraw the amendment. I hope the bill will be passed as reported by the committee.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONSOLIDATION OF GEORGETOWN WITH WASHINGTON.

The bill (S. 445) supplementary to an act entitled "An act to provide a government for the District of Columbia," approved February 21, 1871, and also an act entitled "An act for the government of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1874, was announced as next in order on the Calendar, and was read.

Mr. ALLEN. It occurs to me the bill is a little bit radical. I think it ought to go over.

Mr. CORKRELL. Let the two towns be one.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will state to the Senator from Nebraska that, practically, the purpose of the bill has been carried out by the action of the Commissioners in renaming all the streets west of Nineteenth street.

Mr. ALLEN. I do not doubt that.

Mr. FAULKNER. All west of Nineteenth street has been known heretofore as Georgetown, and now the Commissioners have gone to work (indeed, I think it was done a year or two ago), and named the streets in Georgetown so as to conform to the streets in Washington. The only point in the bill is that where the city of Washington is named in any law it is made to cover the municipality that used to be known as Georgetown, as in fact they are the same city, and makes the law applicable to the boundaries of Georgetown as well as the city of Washington. A similar bill passed the Senate at a prior Congress, but did not pass the other House. I think there can be no possible objection to the bill. It has been considered very carefully by the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Nebraska as objecting to the further consideration of the bill?

Mr. ALLEN. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Being objected to, shall the bill go over with or without prejudice?

Mr. ALLEN. I do not understand the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Nebraska desire to have the bill go over under Rule IX or that it shall remain on the Calendar under Rule VIII, without prejudice?

Mr. ALLEN. Let it remain on the Calendar under Rule VIII. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is so ordered.

SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The bill (S. 891) authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to accept payment without interest of certain special assessments, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, to add at the end the words, "and all settlements heretofore so made are hereby ratified;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized to receive payment of special assessments for improvements made under contracts with the board of public works of said District, and extensions thereof, without penalties or interest in any case, in the judgment of the Commissioners, the equities of the case justify the abatement of interest and penalties, and all settlements heretofore so made are hereby ratified.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS OF REAL ESTATE INSTRUMENTS.

The bill (S. 64) relating to acknowledgments of instruments affecting real estate within the District of Columbia, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HIGGINS. I ask the Senator from Virginia, who reported the bill, what is the object of making a change in the law concerning the forms of acknowledgment in the District of Columbia?

Mr. HUNTON. I beg to state to the Senator from Delaware that the forms of acknowledgment now in use in the District of Columbia are the old common law forms; they are exceedingly long and contain a great deal that is absolutely unnecessary. The forms reported by the committee are intended to conform to the new code adopted in almost all of the States.

Mr. HIGGINS. That was the point I wanted to get at. There was a movement by the American Bar Association within the last year or two to have acknowledgments in the various States and Territories and I presume, the District of Columbia conform, so that the same form of acknowledgment could be taken all over the country.

Mr. HUNTON. The bill proposes the same form of acknowledgment which has been adopted in many States.

Mr. HIGGINS. It is intended by the bill, then, to conform to that state of facts?

Mr. HUNTON. Yes, sir.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DAVID S. CORSER.

The bill (S. 1190) granting an increase of pension to David S. Corser was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposed to place on the pension roll the name of David S. Corser, late of Company H, Fourth Maine, New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $15 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was reported without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ISHAM T. OWEN.

The bill (S. 223) for the relief of Isham T. Owen, of Missouri, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to examine the claim of Isham T. Owen, of Altona, Bates County, Mo., for the payment of two California Indian war bonds, issued by the State of California in payment of the expenses by her incurred in the suppression of Indian hostilities in that State prior to January 1, 1854, payment of which was assumed and authorized to be made by Congress under the act approved August 5, 1854, as modified by the act of Congress of August 18, 1856, which bonds were owned and lost by said Owen; and if he be satisfied that the bonds have never been paid by or presented to the United States, that he audit said claim; and upon the filing with the Secretary of a bond sufficient to indemnify the United States against all possible loss in the premises, to pay the bonds, with interest to September 1, 1856, and after that time to pay the same to the Secretary of the Treasury shall report his action in the premises to the governor of the State of California.

The bill was reported without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SURVEYOR OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The bill (S. 444) making the surveyor of the District of Columbia a salaried officer, and to provide for more efficient service in the surveyor's office, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments.

The first amendment was in section 2, line 7, after the words "with the," to strike out "assessor;" and insert "Commissioners," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That the surveyor shall give bond to the United States in the penalty of $20,000, with two sureties, to be approved by the Commissioners, conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office, and shall take and subscribe an oath or affirmation before the Commissioners that he will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of his office, which bond and oath shall be deposited with the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, line 5, after the words "one thousand," to strike out "five" and insert "four;" in line 7, after the words "one thousand," to strike out "four" and insert "two;" in the same line, after the words "per annum," to strike out "one messenger, at a salary of $600 per annum; one rodman," and insert "two rodmen;" in line 9, after the words "seven hundred and," to strike out "eighty" and insert "twenty;" in the same line, after the word "dollars," to insert "each;" in line 10, after the words "per annum," to strike out "and" in the same line, after the word "two," to strike out "axmen" and insert "chainmen;" in the same line, after the word "at," to strike out "seven" and insert "six;" in the same line, after the word "hundred," to insert "and fifty;" and in line 11, after the words "per annum," to insert "and such additional employees as may be, in the judgment of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, temporarily required for the surveyor's operations, at an aggregate expense of not exceeding $2,000 in any one year;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, on the recommendation of the surveyor, be, and they are hereby, authorized to appoint one assistant surveyor, at a salary of $1,000 per annum, one street-painter and computer, at a salary of $1,000 per annum, one clerk, at a salary of $1,200 per annum, and two chainmen, at $250 each per annum, and such additional employees as may be, in the judgment of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, temporarily required for the surveyor's operations, at an aggregate expense of not exceeding $2,000 in any one year.

that the sum of $10,000 would be a very small compensation to pay him for the labor performed.

I would say, further, that this recommendation of the Surgeon-General of the Army received also the indorsement of Secretary of War Endicott when he was in office. This is really very small compensation to the estate of this gentleman for the services he performed.

The matter has been very carefully looked into by the committee and guarded in every respect.

Mr. HUNTON. I beg to ask the Senator another question. Was not the service which this gentleman performed, for which it is proposed to pay his widow, performed while he was in the employ of the United States?

Mr. MANDERSON. While he was a surgeon in the United States Army, but not within the line of his duties in any respect; it was something entirely outside of them.

Mr. HUNTON. What amount does the bill appropriate?

Mr. MANDERSON. Three thousand dollars.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE H. JEWETT.

The bill (S. 470) for the relief of George H. Jewett, of Arlington, Washington County, Neb., was considered in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to George H. Jewett $734, being the amount due him for material furnished and work done by him by an order from the military authorities at Fort Duchesne, Utah, in 1889.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BRIG. GEN. JOHN R. BROOKE.

The bill (S. 467) for the relief of Brig. Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army, was considered in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to the legal representatives of Andrew Cameron, of New Mexico, $1,000, and to the legal representatives of John Smith, of New Mexico, $1,000, in full satisfaction of the judgment obtained by them in the district court of the first judicial district of the Territory of New Mexico, at the August term of 1869, against Lieut. Col. John R. Brooke, Third Infantry, United States Army, now brigadier-general United States Army, for alleged trespass and false imprisonment.

Mr. HUNTON. I ask for the reading of the report in that case.

Mr. MANDERSON. The report in this case is very long, taking up, as it does, with the exhibits, six or seven pages of fine type. I think I can state this case to the Senator from Virginia to satisfy him that it should pass.

Mr. HUNTON. That will be satisfactory.

Mr. MANDERSON. Gen. John R. Brooke, of the United States Army, was stationed years ago in the department of Arizona. While on duty there, there was a great deal of pilfering of army property from the post under his command, and a great deal of trading, in violation of Army Regulations, with the soldiers of the command.

Gen. Brooke caused the arrest of the two parties mentioned in the bill, there being found in their possession Government property. The arrest was made upon a military reservation and within the confines of the post. They had evidently been engaged either in traffic with the soldiers, which is in violation of the Army Regulations, or else they had been engaged in something which is more objectionable, perhaps in brocure of the goods. They were held for some little time, several days perhaps, and after their release they brought suit against Gen. Brooke, claiming a large amount of damages for false imprisonment. He communicated with the War Department, and an attorney was selected to defend the cause on behalf of Gen. Brooke and the United States. After a short time, and before the cases were reached for trial, Gen. Brooke was ordered to another department, and after he left the department his attorney died. My impression is that he died. At any rate judgments were taken in both of the cases, in which there was full defense and recovery, I think, in each case of $20,000, or perhaps it was $10,000 in each case.

Those judgments have been held over this officer, who was simply performing his duty, for a great many years. The parties have frequently made effort at adjustment. The matter was referred to the War Department, and a very full letter from Adj. Gen. Williams, dated January 23, 1893, gives all the particulars of the affair.

It is believed that these judgments can be satisfied by the payment of the sum of $1,000 to each of the parties. The Committee on Military Affairs feel that this relief should be granted; that if it is possible to get rid of those judgments by some compromise, that compromise should be effected, and that the Government of the United States should relieve this officer from the odium and the results of those judgments which have hung over him for so many years.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia still desire the report read?

Mr. HUNTON. No, sir.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADOLPH VON HAAKE.

The bill (S. 469) for the relief of Adolph von Haake was considered in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay Adolph von Haake the difference of pay and emoluments between major and captain of infantry from October 25, 1863, to November 12, 1863, and from March 4, 1865, to June 10, 1865, deducting therefrom the pay and emoluments received by him during the period aforesaid.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN W. WACKER.

The bill (S. 408) to remove the charge of desertion standing against John W. Wacker, was considered in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of War to remove the charge of desertion standing against the name of John W. Wacker, who enlisted under the name of John Walker, as a private in Company L, and transferred to Company I, Ninth New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and now of Company F, Second United States Infantry, absent without leave from Company I, Ninth New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, after September 9, 1863, he having had twenty-five years of faithful service since his absence without leave under his original enlistment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. H. COOK.

The bill (S. 142) to remove the charge of desertion from William H. H. Cook was considered in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, after the word "Zouaves" in line 6, to strike out "and grant him an honorable discharge as of May 14, 1863," and insert "and to substitute in lieu thereof 'absent without leave from August 25, 1862, to May 14, 1863, when his regiment was mustered out. He subsequently enlisted December 25, 1863, in Company H, Fourth Iowa Cavalry, and was honorably mustered out August 8, 1865, with his regiment.'" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to remove the charge of desertion from William H. H. Cook, late a private in Company G, Fifth New York Dragoon Zouaves, and to substitute in lieu thereof 'absent without leave from August 25, 1862, to May 14, 1863, when his regiment was mustered out. He subsequently enlisted December 25, 1863, in Company H, Fourth Iowa Cavalry, and was honorably mustered out August 8, 1865, with his regiment.'

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROPERTY RETURNS BY GOVERNMENT OFFICERS.

Mr. PROCTOR. As the Senator who reported the three following bills is not in his seat, I ask that the two bills from the Joint Commission to Inquire into the Status of the Executive Departments be taken up. The first one is the bill (H. R. 5530) to regulate the making of property returns by officers of the Government.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont asks unanimous consent that the Senator proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by him.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I see no reason why we should not proceed with the Calendar in order.

Mr. HARRIS. Is House bill 5530 one of the bills that has been informally passed over, and is on the Calendar under Rule VII?

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. It is not. The Senator from Vermont asks unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill. Does the Senator from South Dakota object?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Yes, sir; I object.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the next bill on the Calendar will be proceeded with.

THOMAS H. CARPENTER.

The bill (S. 179) authorizing the restoration of the name of Thomas H. Carpenter, late captain Seventeenth United States

Infantry, to the rolls of the Army, and providing that he be placed on the list of retired officers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN W. TAYLOR.

The bill (S. 144) to correct the military record of John W. Taylor was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to amend the record of the War Department so as to show that John W. Taylor, musician of Company A, First Wisconsin Heavy Artillery, entered the military service of the United States on the 11th day of June, 1861, and was honorably discharged therefrom on the 31st day of October, 1865.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to amend in section 1, line 5, by inserting before the word "as" the word "so." It will then read that the record shall "be amended so as to show," etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

PROPERTY RETURNS BY GOVERNMENT OFFICERS.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I withdraw my objection to the request of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR].

Mr. PROCTOR. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the two bills I indicated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first of the bills will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 5530) to regulate the making of property returns by officers of the Government.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read for information.

The bill was read.

Mr. CALL. I think the bill had better go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida objects to the present consideration of the bill. Does the Senator from Florida desire that the bill shall retain its place on the Calendar?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes; let it retain its place on the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection that order will be made.

Mr. CALL. What is the order?

Mr. HARRIS. That the bill be retained on the Calendar without being displaced.

Mr. CALL. That is right.

COINAGE OF SILVER BULLION.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 4956) directing the coining of the silver bullion held in the Treasury, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is upon the motion of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] that the vote by which the bill was ordered to a third reading be reconsidered; on which the Senator from Iowa has the floor.

Mr. ALLISON. I had expected to make some observations this morning, but I find my throat so sore that I can not speak very well to-day. However, I think I can speak loud enough to make a suggestion, which I shall be glad to have the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] hear. I think after all that has occurred, it would be wiser and better if we could make some arrangement whereby, at a particular time, a vote can be had upon the bill. I suggest to Senators that, by unanimous consent, one or two amendments may be permitted to be offered and voted upon with a view of perfecting the text of the bill. I should like personally to take the sense of the Senate upon striking out a portion of the second section. It would result in no protracted debate, and it would be a vote taken upon a time next week—some of us are very much occupied, as the Senator from Tennessee knows—say, Wednesday of next week at 3 o'clock, to take a final vote upon this measure?

Mr. HARRIS. It is certainly my desire to accommodate the convenience and wishes of every Senator upon the floor so far as I consistently can do so. Now, can we come to an agreement by unanimous consent that, at a given hour on Monday or Tuesday, or if necessary Wednesday, we shall come to a vote first upon the Senator's motion, and if that motion carries that debate on such amendments as follow shall be limited to five minutes to each Senator under Rule VIII, and that we shall continue under the five-minutes rule until a final vote shall have been reached? As to unanimous consent to offer amendments, that question can not be settled now. Of course, any Senator has the right at any hour of any day to ask unanimous consent to do whatever he may desire to do. I do not now commit myself to consent or to give unanimous consent to the offering of any amendment hereafter, unless the Senator's motion to reconsider shall be carried by a majority vote of the Senate. I desire, however, to say that I really want to accommodate the wishes of Senators, and to do anything that I can consistently to accommodate them. Now, if the Senator from Iowa will name a day and an hour of a day, Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday, when we can come to a vote upon the suggestion that I have made, I shall interpose no objection whatever to it, but shall be glad to have the unanimous consent of the Senate to such an agreement.

Mr. ALLISON. Then I will wait to the next morning of the Senate, that on Wednesday at 2 o'clock voting shall take place as suggested by the Senator from Tennessee under the five-minutes rule. Perhaps the morning hour on Wednesday can be devoted if necessary to general debate should there be a pressure for time, or we can leave that to future arrangement.

Mr. HARRIS. Of course I shall have no objection up to the hour set for taking the vote to any debate that Senators may desire to indulge in. If we can come to the agreement I have suggested, I should myself personally favor an adjournment over from to-day until Monday, but I should not controvert the Senators on the other side who may want to use to-morrow in debate. I shall not insist upon adjourning over if such an agreement is made, but I will consent to it freely.

Mr. MANDERSON. I do not understand exactly the position taken by the Senator from Tennessee. Suppose that the hour for taking the vote upon the motion of the Senator from Iowa to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed to a third reading shall be at 2 o'clock on Wednesday and that motion by a majority vote of the Senate should be defeated, is it then proposed by the Senator from Tennessee that amendments to the bill may be considered?

Mr. HARRIS. Upon the contrary, I distinctly declined to commit myself to any such position.

Mr. MANDERSON. Then the Senator from Tennessee does not say at this time whether he will or will not object to amendments?

Mr. HARRIS. I have said that I will not commit myself at this time; and if the Senator desires me to go a step further I must frankly say to him I do not think I shall at any time consent to it. But I absolutely preclude myself at this moment by a positive declaration to that extent.

Now, my proposition is that we vote at 2 o'clock on Wednesday upon the motion of the Senator from Iowa. If that motion shall carry the bill goes back to the amendment stage. Then I want to limit debate to the five-minutes rule on amendments, and I want an hour not very remote from the 2 o'clock hour fixed on which we shall come to a final vote upon the measure. I shall be as liberal in respect to the fixing of those hours as I can consistently be.

Mr. MANDERSON. I want to be as frank with the Senator from Tennessee as he is with the Senate. I am so fully convinced that the construction placed upon the language of the first section of the bill is as I stated it yesterday, and that it does not carry out by its own language the intention of the framers of the bill that I want by some method to amend the bill in that regard.

Mr. HALE. Or offer to amend it.

Mr. MANDERSON. Or offer to amend it, at least; and there is no way by which that can be done by the rules of the Senate in the event that the motion of the Senator from Iowa to reconsider should be voted down and the bill should stand as it is. I think the bill is so defective that it embarks the Senate and the Congress, and the Government, upon a very dangerous path. I am inclined to think that the bill as it reads commends itself very heartily to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER], whose position with reference to national finances we well understand. I should like his attention for a moment, so that he may correct me if I am wrong.

The Senator from Kansas is recognized upon the floor and in the country as one who believes that money can be made by the stamp or fiat of the Government of any material, whether it has international value or not, and I believe he agrees with me in the construction that I have placed upon the language of the bill, that it permits, or rather absolutely insists, in strong if not in absolute terms, that the Secretary of the Treasury shall immediately cause to be coined as soon as possible the silver bullion," etc. That is not the best language perhaps. Probably an improvement on that would be the old idea that he shall "immediately, if not sooner," cause the bullion to be coined. But that I state simply in passing. I say I think the Senator from Kansas, who is the advocate upon this floor of what we are pleased to call fiat money, agrees with me

The amendment was read and ordered to lie on the table and to be printed, as follows:

Amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. GALLINGER to the bill (H. R. 4541) to resume taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes.

Said amendment shall be proposed, so far as it concerns importations from the Dominion of Canada, only by a proclamation of the President of the United States. The said proclamation shall be issued under the following conditions:

When it is duly certified to the President of the United States that the Government of the Dominion of Canada has declared a desire to enter into trade relations with the United States and will result in a material reduction of the duties now existing against the admission into Canada of the products and manufactures of the United States, he shall appoint a commission, to be composed of those who may be designated to represent the government of Canada, to consider the most desirable manner in which to accomplish a larger exchange of the products and manufactures of the two countries. If the result of our deliberations of the joint commission shall be an agreement and a report, satisfactory to the Secretary of the Treasury, that by a material reduction of the duties, or by the putting upon an equal basis of the Canadian tariff a list of manufactures and products of the United States which, in his opinion, will afford an equal advantage to the United States as the operation of this bill will afford to Canada, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall so report to the President, the President, on being notified by the Canadian government that these recommendations will be presented to the parliament of Canada for enactment, shall then issue his proclamation making this act operative as regards the Dominion of Canada immediately upon the enactment into law by the Canadian parliament of the recommendations of said joint commission.

It is further the duty of the commission before sending this country to ascertain upon what terms entire freedom of commercial intercourse between the United States and the Dominion of Canada can be secured, and said commissioners shall report to the President, who shall lay said report before Congress.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (H. R. 5481) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 4571) to make service connections with water mains and sewers in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

ALLEGED TRANSACTIONS IN SUGAR STOCK.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution submitted by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER], coming over from a former day.

Mr. QUAY. After the resolution has been read, I propose to move to lay it on the table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read. The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. PEPPER on the 10th instant, as follows:

Whereas it is charged in many of the most influential and widely circulated newspapers of the country, and from them copied in the rural press, that some one or more members of this body were actively participating in recent transactions on the New York Stock Exchange relating to the purchasing and selling of shares of stock in an organization known as the sugar trust; and

Whereas it is alleged in said newspapers and is being so copied in the rural press, that the said members of this body, in their own personal interest and for their own selfish purposes, made use of knowledge and information procured and through the influence of their positions as Senators, to influence prices of shares in the sugar trust on the stock exchange in the transactions aforesaid; and

Whereas it is alleged further, in the manner before mentioned, and is being so circulated among the people, that the said Senators did, by reason of the transactions above referred to and their connection therewith, acquire undue gains and profit; and

Whereas the gravity of these charges and allegations is sufficient to require that they be fully, impartially, and promptly investigated to the end that the honor and dignity of the Senate preserved: Therefore be it

Resolved, That a select committee of five members of the Senate be appointed by the President of the Senate, whose duty it shall be to proceed without unnecessary delay to make a thorough investigation of said charges and all of them, and report the testimony and evidence with their conclusions thereon at an early day as practicable.

The said committee or any subcommittee thereof shall have power to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and perform all other duties which may be incident to committees of like character, and to employ a clerk, a messenger, and stenographer.

The meetings of said committee shall be held in one of the committee rooms of the United States Building or in some other suitable room in a building belonging to the Government, to be set apart temporarily for this purpose, and properly supplied with furniture, stationery, and other conveniences by the Secretary of the Senate. Provided, That in case the committee shall be organized it will be conducive to more complete and satisfactory examination of any relevant or material matter connected with the transactions out of which the investigation has grown, that the bill of the Senate subcommittee thereof shall visit the city of New York, such visit may be made.

The ordinary expenses of said committee shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate on the usual vouchers.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President—
Mr. QUAY. Now, I move to lay the resolution on the table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair desires to suggest to the Senator from Kansas and the Senator from Pennsylvania that as the resolution creates a charge on the contingent fund of the Senate, in the opinion of the present occupant of the chair it can not be considered by the Senate for any purpose until it has been referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. I do not understand the Chair to rule that no other motion is in order under the rule except to refer the resolution to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, the Senate can not consider the resolution for any purpose whatever. The law requires the reference of such resolutions to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

Mr. HOAR. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The Senator from Massachusetts will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HOAR. Has not the Senator from Kansas the right to modify his resolution by striking out so much of it as provides for the incurring of expenses, so that the Senate can adopt the resolution without its being referred to the committee? The expense can be provided for separately.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas has a right to modify his resolution. He can put it in any form he chooses.

Mr. PEPPER. I have risen for that purpose, Mr. President. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. PEPPER. I desire to modify the resolution so as to eliminate from it all matter relating to expenses or the incurring of expenses by the action of the committee, so that the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate will have nothing to do with it, at least now.

Mr. QUAY. Then I move to lay the resolution so modified on the table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Pennsylvania moves that the resolution so modified be laid on the table. The Secretary will report the resolution as modified.

Mr. PEPPER. What I wish to do is to strike from the resolution all matter which requires the expenditure of money, leaving the powers of the committee and its duties otherwise intact, and if I may be heard for a few moments I should like to submit a remark or two.

Mr. QUAY. My motion is not debatable.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be modified and reported as modified before it can be further considered.

Mr. QUAY. I understand the motion is not debatable.

Mr. HOAR. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. After the Senate has modified his resolution it is he not, under the ordinary courtesies of the Senate, entitled to the floor if he claims it, before the motion to lay on the table can be put?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair can hardly recognize that as a parliamentary question, but he thinks under the ordinary courtesies of the Senate the Senator proposing a resolution has usually been and ought to be recognized as a matter of courtesy.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President—

Mr. QUAY. I understand the Senator from Kansas desires to make a statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Pennsylvania will please pause until the Secretary can read the resolution as modified.

The SECRETARY. Strike out all of said resolution after the word "practicable" in the sixth line thereof, so that the resolution as modified will read:

Resolved, That a select committee of five members of the Senate be appointed by the President of the Senate, whose duty it shall be to proceed without unnecessary delay to make a thorough investigation of said charges and all of them, and report the testimony and evidence with their conclusions thereon at an early day as practicable.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas is recognized by the Chair.

Mr. QUAY. Now, I withdraw the motion to lay on the table if necessary to enable the Senator from Kansas to proceed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion of the Senator from Pennsylvania has not been entertained because the resolution has not been in a condition where the Chair thought it was proper to be entertained.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, it was not my expectation to take up any of the time of the Senate this morning, for I did not apprehend that either my amiable friend from Pennsylvania nor any other member of this body would feel called upon to propose the adoption of a resolution which, upon its face and under the circumstances is so evidently and obviously appropriate.

During the last few weeks the gossip of the newspapers, the gossip of the street, the gossip in this hall, and, if I am not mistaken, the gossip in this Chamber has been to the effect that certain persons in New York have been going about here to secure or to prevent certain lines of legislation, and the gossip became so intense and spread so widely that finally charges were made against the body of the Senate. I am mentioning them by name, of such a specific character, so virtuous in their intent, and if you are going upon this body such a dishonorable course of conduct, that I confess I feel humiliated. I felt pained and wounded to think that anything should occur, either here or elsewhere, which would in any manner justify such charges against this body or against any particular member of the Senate. I waited and hesitated for several days, wondering what would be done about it, but, having no doubt of what ought to be done, I felt that I ought to bring this matter before the Senate. A resolution similar to this one, when it occurred to me that, just as the body of the Senate is the body of the people, so the members of this great body for which I have profound respect, it might be inappropriate, it might be regarded as an intrusion upon the established rules and the courtesies of this Chamber, and I threw the paper away; but after waiting one more day, I came to the conclusion that it was the duty of some member of this body to call attention to the matter in this public way, in order that an examination might be had and the truth be made known.

Mr. President, last spring a year ago, I think, charges were made but in one newspaper to begin with, if I remember correctly, and that in this city, against one member of this body who last year I recall was elected to the Senate. That Senator was accused by a certain paper with having embezzled bank funds once in his life, and a resolution for investigation was introduced and a great deal of righteous indignation was manifested upon this floor in relation to it. I do not now recall just how the subject was disposed of, but I do know that it was disposed of in a way which was perfectly proper and reasonable, and that in a few days the matter was hushed about the country through the newspaper reports.

The Senate owes it not only to itself but to the country at large that this subject should be investigated honestly and fully, no matter whether any of us suffer, and no matter who the man is that suffers. There is a discussion going on among the common people of the country, or as I heard it expressed recently among the groundlings, the workmen of the country, that the Senate is organized; they have their little assemblies here, there, and everywhere. They meet often behind closed doors and they discuss these subjects. The newspapers report specific charges against certain members of the body. No official contradiction is made from this place such as the people will understand, no testimony given, nothing by which they may determine for themselves whether the charges are true or false. They go back to their meetings satisfied that the charges are true.

I am confident that, so far as my constituents are concerned, who are the people in this city and pointed against the charges on the floor, they are disappointed. I am sure that they are disappointed. Why did you not do so, your honor, knowing that those charges were made against the Senate? And the constituents of all the Senators who are listening to me.

Mr. President, I am not always friendly to the metropolitan newspaper press, but I know, and so do you, fellow Senators, these papers are among the great powers for doing good as well as for doing harm. It may be true that in some respects they are edited in the business department, and that the business manager dictates much of the editorial matter, but there is not one among them who does not have a relief fund for the last three months had at some time or other a relief fund for the poor that it itself organized.

Now, I think that the people of this country are weary of excursions for the little people, taking them out on Sundays to see the things that grow in the country, so that the children could have a little fresh air. I think that the people are weary of the New York press—the Sun, the World, the Times, the Tribune, the Herald, the Journal, the Daily News, the Evening Post, and the Tribune in the Tribune concerning the Tribune's fund. The World has a bread of fund, and so it goes all over the country. Now, when a charge of this kind is made, even if it were true that our press has gone as far as is sometimes charged in this Chamber as to become venal, when charges are made in this publicly, spread before the people, and when the press is so powerful, we have that there must be something in them, there must be some fire where there is so much smoke. I insist that we owe it to ourselves first, and to the people we represent second, and to the whole world at large third, to investigate this matter, and to investigate it thoroughly.

Hence, while I know nothing of the truth of the charges, and while I have no belief on the subject, except that ugly charges are being made, I ask that the resolution may be adopted and that the committee may be speedily appointed and put to work.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, we have, it seems, fallen into the fashion within a short time past of introducing into the Senate and having read from the desk or reading substantial by members of the body many of the scandalous articles that appear in the public press reflecting upon members of this body. It seems, sir, as if there were an organized attempt, well organized and encouraged in quarters in which there should be no encouragement to such attempts, to belittle and degrade the Senate of the United States. I am sorry to say that on some occasions it has been as if there were this body to undue and hasty action, if not imprudent action.

Now, when a great measure is pending before this body, one which the party to which I belong is pledged to pass in some form, there seems to be on the part of a portion of the public press a determination to force immediate action upon the bill by charging misconduct upon the part of members of this body. I am amazed that any member of the Senate of the United States should feel that it was his duty to bring these charges to the attention of this body in the form of a resolution for an investigation. I have always believed that men in public station who are actuated by honest motives and with a single purpose to discharge their public duty to the people could afford to pass by such statements as have recently appeared in the public press affecting members of this body.

When the body of the Senate is the body of the people, I think the better judgment of the country will be that he who is conscious of his own integrity and has a proper appreciation of this body would know that such resolution is out of place and ought never to have been introduced.

Mr. President, within the past year we have seen charges in the public press and heard them made upon this floor against members of the Senate who were members of the Senate at the repeal of the Sherman law. Those Senators were then denounced as representing States whose interests compelled them to vote against that bill, and they were charged with personal interest in the matter then pending. For one, sir, I recognized then that we were entering upon an era when strong outside influences would be brought to bear to encourage charges which were infamous and which the whole country knew to be untrue, but I thought that the Senators were wrong in that with misconduct, or of being influenced by personal interests, stand before their fellows here and before the country perfectly vindicated.

Now, sir, while we are charged with the great duty of reforming the tariff, a duty to which we are pledged, and the fulfillment of which may strike, as the other side of the Chamber may contend, if radical changes are made in the revenue laws, at great business interests, there is every incentive to the men who are so affected to create the impression that there is corruption and bad conduct upon the part of Senators who are to deal with that question.

The public press in every State in the Union are anxious for speedy action, and before the bill had even reached the Senate, the public press in every State in the Union were denouncing the delay in considering the bill. We have been denouncing the delay in considering the bill, and when the bill did reach the consideration of the Committee on Finance these idle, outrageous charges and intimations against honorable members of that committee have been made.

Mr. President, if the Senate of the United States is to stop in the discharge of its great duty to the country to investigate these idle, outrageous, and infamous charges, legislation will be prevented, and it will be upon this side of the Chamber shall not be able to discharge a duty which we have promised to the country.

I denounce the outrageous misrepresentations which have been made of Senators. I trust that this case will bring the Senate of the United States back to its old-time method of action. We submitted to it in the case of the tariff, I repeat, but it was not brought to the attention of the Senate on both sides of the Chamber, without regard to party, vindicate this body by showing the public press that it is not a matter as is indicated in the resolution of the Senator from Kansas, if the Senator from Kansas or any other Senator on this floor believes that his vindication is necessary, let him ask for an investigation later on; but to take up these sweeping charges as I repeat, but to bring them before the Senate, and to have them not only of scandal, who have done nothing but discharge a public duty as they understand it, is, in my judgment, an outrage.

Mr. President, I desire while I am on the floor to say one other thing for myself. The tariff bill is here; the responsibility for its passage and the form in which it shall pass belongs to this side of the Chamber; it has been dealt with honestly and fairly; and no charges in the public press, no intimation coming from any quarter, no matter how high or how low, of speeding it through, or passing it without consideration, of passing it just as it came here from the House of Representatives, will ever influence my action in this matter. We shall deliberate over it Friday, as we have already done on questions of such importance; we shall consider it in a spirit of broad Americanism, as I hope, and we shall amend it where it is necessary it should be amended, for the bill, as I understand it, as it reached us would not produce revenue enough to support the Government. The bill must be put in such shape that we shall not have a deficit in the Treasury. The Senate Committee on Finance is engaged in perfecting that bill, and I have no doubt that when the committee which has charge of it brings it forth it will be in a more perfect shape than it was when it came to us from the House of Representatives.

Mr. President, to our friends on this side of the Chamber, having the responsibility, having in mind the thorough protection to the Treasury of the United States and the care of the interests of the consumers of the country, I will say that we can not afford to be diverted by pretended friends or foes from the fair consideration of the bill. Whether these attacks emanate from the men who think that their interests are in jeopardy, or whether they come from another class who would like to see a bill passed which did not raise revenue enough to support the Government so that it might deal in more Government bonds, or whether the attacks come only from the imagination of gentlemen who control newspapers—no matter from what quarter, no matter what the motive, I appeal to this body to assert its own dignity, to go on with the consideration of this public measure, and if there is a Senator on this floor or any man of responsibility anywhere who will make a charge against any Senator connected with this bill, charging him with even indiscretion, we shall take up any such individual cases when this great public duty is discharged, and not before.

Mr. President, I move that the resolution lie on the table.

Mr. MILLER. I call for the yeas and nays upon that motion.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PASCO) in the chair. The Senator from Maryland moves that the resolution be laid on the table, on which the Senator from Texas calls for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BUTLER (when his name was called). I have a general rule with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. If he were here I should vote "yea," but not knowing how he would vote.

Mr. QUAY. I have no doubt that if my colleague [Mr. CAMERON] were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. BUTLER. Then I vote "yea."

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. HILL], whom I do not see present. As I do not know how he would vote, I withhold my vote. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. GEORGE (when Mr. McLAURIN's name was called). My colleague [Mr. McLAURIN] is absent, paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON].

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]; but upon this question I think he would vote just as I do. So I take the liberty of voting. I vote "yea."

Mr. WHITE (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from California [Mr. WHITE], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. WILSON. I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUHOUN]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The result was yeas 37, nays 27, as follows:

So the motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I ask the indulgence of the Senate to say that my vote in opposition to laying the resolution of the Senator from Kansas on the table is not to be construed as indicating any belief or suspicion even on my part that any Senator has been guilty of the charges referred to in the resolution. I voted for the investigation for this reason: Very recently the press has been full of charges of improper motives and improper conduct on the part of Senators. I thought fair, full investigation would show the groundlessness of these charges and in that way tend possibly to suppress such insinuations in the future.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had, on the 10th instant, approved and signed the act (S. 1306) to establish a port of delivery at Bonners Ferry, Idaho.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 5481) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes; was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

COINAGE OF SILVER BULLION.

Mr. HARRIS (Mr. PASCO in the chair). Mr. President, a number of Senators have spoken to me this morning, indicating that the time fixed for disposing of the House bill in reference to the coinage of the seigniorage would probably be short for the discussion, and therefore requested me, at the completion of the routine morning business, to ask unanimous consent of the Senate that the bill be taken up. (It is the right of any Senator to speak, but I will ask, in deference to the request of these Senators, that the bill be taken up at this time and proceed with it.)

Mr. COCKRELL and others. That is right.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee? The Chair hears none. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, the title of which will be stated.

THE SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 4936) directing the coinage of the silver bullion in the Treasury, and for other purposes.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate resumes the consideration of the bill; and the Chair recognizes the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] as entitled to the floor.

Mr. VILAS. Mr. President, I am sure it will be agreed by all who were in the Senate on Friday last that the protraction of the discussion while I held the floor was not by myself. The points taken up were rather the suggestions of others than my own. While I shall object under no circumstances to any Senator's interruption if he wishes, for I will not refuse that courtesy fairly asked, I shall be able to dispose more quickly of the observations I wish to make upon this bill by proceeding without too much interruption.

Mr. President, I set out to consider the reasons which are professed in support of this measure, and I had opportunity only to speak of one. That one, indeed, is, if I read correctly the report of the committee in the House of Representatives, the only reason given there, or substantially the only reason, namely, that the needs of the Treasury require this as a measure of relief. I think I fully answered on Friday that suggestion of a reason. It was no use, showing that the Treasury does not need the bill; that the Secretary of the Treasury does not ask for or want this measure and stands opposed to it, but it was also fairly shown that it could not operate relief to the Treasury. So I felt myself justified in saying of this proffered reason that it is rather a pretext than a reason for the enactment of the bill.

There is another suggestion proffered, certainly much the same aspect, that this is a bill to coin the seigniorage. It will coin what is called the seigniorage, but that is but a small part of its purpose or scope. What this bill seeks is to put into the paper circulation of the country some $200,000,000 more of silver certificates.

On the floor of the Senate the distinguished Senator from Nevada [Mr. Sherman] has said in 1894, I think, that class of the greenbacks provided for in the act of 1890, because he said they operated like an endless chain of demand upon the Treasury for gold, and thereby he would relieve so far the Treasury. But that reason extends to all the greenbacks as well as those provided for in the act of 1890. I agree—that the thing is desirable in itself in our proper provision for currency, but what is now proposed in their place would be far worse than the greenbacks we have; the substitution of silver certificates for these notes of the Government, with the whole faith and credit of the Government, to pay a dollar in value of the gold dollar behind them. That I object to.

It is with the suggestion that this bill will increase the circulation, which I have not yet heard in support of it on the floor of the Senate, but has been elsewhere made in common speech. There is really no need for increase of circulation, but if it were desirable—and I do not care to object—it is not desirable to do it in the manner now proposed.

Mr. President, these various professions and suggestions are not the reasons which inspired the scheme to enact this legislation. These are the professed gifts of the Greeks, and they conceal the engineery in gratuito by which destruction is to be wrought to the financial interests of the country instead of its welfare promoted.

Mr. President, let us deal directly with it. The incentive for the enactment of this bill will be gathered better by considering who presents it and what is its true object. In that we shall find the reasons which underlie the promotion of its enactment, and in that we shall find the objections to its passage. What to the friends of this measure is promise, to me is menace; and I believe there are many who incline to favor this bill because it seems a harmless measure, or at least of but little harm, who can hardly accept the responsibility of supporting it when its nature and, I think, certain effects are considered.

I have already said that this bill would add some two hundred millions of silver certificates to the currency of the country. I do not oppose it because it is to coin the seigniorage; nor because it is to transform the silver bars in the Treasury into silver dollars; nor because it increases the circulation; nor because the Sherman notes may be retired. Each and every one of these objects might be in a proper way accomplished, with possible result of certainly little evil and from some of them much good. But, sir, let us ask what will be our condition when the end is reached which this bill proposes to accomplish. I think it will be thus seen, what I do not believe will be disavowed by many, that the efficient reason which pushes this bill is that it is a step, probably efficacious, to bring about the substitution of the silver standard in the country; if not completely effective of that end, at least dangerously promotive of it. And for that reason I think we are ought to stand against it.

Let me suppose the proposals of this bill accomplished. What change shall we have, then, in the circulation issued by the Government? What have we now? Of greenbacks of the old issue, $346,681,016; of the greenbacks issued under the Sherman act, $153,001,184; making a total of greenbacks now issued, $499,682,200; and of silver certificates on the 1st of March, $338,061,504; a total of $837,743,704 of paper currency issued by the Government, without reckoning gold certificates or currency.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The Senator does not include the national-bank notes, I understand.

Mr. VILAS. I spoke of currency issued by the Government. The national-bank notes are issued by the banks. Disregarding the gold certificates, which form no part of this consideration, because the gold certificate stands equivalent to gold, and the currency certificates, which are merely another form of the greenbacks, 60 per cent of the Government circulation is now greenbacks and 40 per cent silver certificates; or taking the entire circulation of the country as it stood on the 1st of March, sixteen hundred and ninety millions, and the silver certificates at the present time constitute one-fifth of the money of all kinds in circulation.

What will be the condition when the proposal of the bill is accomplished? It provides for certificates in place of the seigniorage, $55,156,681, and for certificates in substitution of the Sherman greenbacks; if the substitution be complete, $153,001,184; or a total of $208,157,865 to be added to the present three hundred and thirty-eight millions. The amount is reduced by cancelling an equal amount of Treasury notes issued under the Sherman act.

Mr. VILAS. I am about to call attention to that. I am giving you what will be the condition when the silver certificates are substituted for the coin in the Treasury or issued upon all the coin and the bars in the Treasury which were purchased by force of the Sherman act. There will then be outstanding $346,219,339 in silver certificates, and there will be outstanding $346,681,016 of greenbacks under the old issue, a total of $692,900,355. In other words, at that time, of the currency issued by the Government disregarding the gold certificates and currency certificates.

Mr. STEWART. And the national-bank notes.

Mr. VILAS. The national-bank notes are not issued by the Government.

Mr. STEWART. The permission of the Government was given to issue them; that is all.

Mr. VILAS. The greenbacks will constitute but 40 per cent and the silver certificates 60 per cent. They will have changed places. The Government notes will be two-fifths and the silver certificates three-fifths of the Government issues, whereas at present the Government notes are three-fifths and the silver certificates but two-fifths. And if the total circulation remains substantially the same in volume, the silver certificates will constitute one-third of the entire circulation instead of one-fifth, as at the present time.

Now, sir, I desire to call attention next to the fact that the silver certificates are an inferior species of paper currency, and to the consequences which must ensue from the inferiority of one class of the paper currency issued by the Government for use with other circulating media. Gold will pay any debt, public or private, in this country—or any other country—according to the value of the 25.8 grains of standard gold in our dollar. In this country the notes issued by the Government, redeemable or demandable in coin but practically in gold, will pay any debt public or private in this country, nor will it compare with gold for the reason that the value of that depends upon no action of Congress or of Parliament, but is fixed by the trade of the world.

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], whose learning upon this financial subject is certainly exceeded by none, disputed the other day in our discussion the proposition that the silver certificate is inferior money. He asked this question of me, and I promised to answer it.

What is the value of the certificate? The silver certificate is not a legal tender. It will pay no debt between citizens of this country. It will pay honestly, against the will of the citizen, no debt of the Government to the citizen; but it is receivable by the Government for customs, taxes and all public dues. The silver certificate does not therefore meet, by the very terms of the law which provides for both, the same office which the greenback meets in this country, nor will it compare with gold for the reason that the value of that depends upon no action of Congress or of Parliament, but is fixed by the trade of the world.

Mr. VILAS. With great pleasure.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator has spoken of the value of the greenback and of the gold dollar. I wish to ask the Senator if it is not a fact, which he will now admit, that in London, Liverpool, Paris, Berlin, or wherever he chooses to go, a silver certificate has exactly the same value in the purchase of anything, I do not care what it is, that a greenback or a gold dollar has?

Mr. VILAS. I am unable to answer with certainty the question of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. TELLER. May I answer it?

Mr. VILAS. It may be true that up to the present time, and with only the present amount outstanding, and with the promise of this Government to receive silver certificates for all public dues, the credit of the silver certificate has been sufficiently upheld even in London to make it accepted there as it is here; but that does not alter the question.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to ask the Senator another question, as he is speaking now of inferior money.

Mr. VILAS. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. Does its inferiority consist in anything except the fact that it is not a legal tender for all purposes, and practically has not the silver certificate been as efficient in the discharge of money functions as the greenback? I speak of this country now. The Senator knows about this country.

Mr. VILAS. I have no hesitation in answering the Senator

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, March 13, 1894.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. E. B. BAGBY.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PRIVILEGED QUESTION.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker—

THE SPEAKER. Does the gentleman rise relating to the RECORD?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I rise to a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker, and I ask that the Clerk read the rule of the House relating to privileged questions, not to questions of personal privilege, but to privileged questions.

THE SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the rule.

The Clerk read as follows:

RULE IX.

QUESTIONS OF PRIVILEGE.

Questions of privilege shall be, first, those affecting the rights of the House collectively, its safety, dignity, and the integrity of its proceedings; second, the rights, reputation, and conduct of members individually in their representative capacity only; and shall have precedence of all other questions, except motions to fix the day to which the House shall adjourn, to adjourn, and for a recess.

Mr. GROSVENOR. In the daily RECORD of March 14, on page 3480, I find the following:

CORRECTION.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to correct the RECORD. On Saturday we passed the District appropriation bill, containing an appropriation of $45,000 for charitable institutions, a part of which was for sectarian institutions, and in the same bill we wiped out one poor little Protestant chapel standing on Government land. I offered an amendment in relation to that chapel which was rejected, and the vote by which my amendment was rejected is not correctly stated in the RECORD, probably through inadvertence. On page 3490 of the daily RECORD of March 11 appears the following:

"Mr. MORSE. I ask for a division.

The committee divided, and the yeas were—yeas 3, yeas 60." In fact, Mr. Speaker, there were 3 yeas that I saw, namely, Messrs. GROW, SPRINGER, BLAIR, HUDSON, LIVINGSTON, and MORSE, and perhaps more I think. That was only about a third of a quorum present and three hundred members of the House were absent.

THE SPEAKER pro tempore. The correction will be made.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have no interest in this matter beyond my duty as a member of the House of Representatives. I did not vote on the motion to strike out this paragraph, and therefore I am not wise as to what it is, in my judgment, an arrogant misuse and misdirection of the purposes of the RECORD for several reasons. In the first place, there are four ways of taking a vote in this House, and only one of them discloses the vote of an individual member; and no member of this House has the right, by indirection, to undertake to put into the RECORD the names of members voting for or against a proposition like this under the guise (and I use the word without purpose of offense) of correcting the RECORD. There can be no correction made except to state that there were more votes than 3 in the affirmative, and state the number of them; and that, perhaps, would have been a legitimate correction of the RECORD; but it was not a fair and legitimate correction of the RECORD to disclose the names of the members.

Nor, Mr. Speaker, was it a fair correction of this RECORD, nor did it pertain to the correction of this RECORD, nor did it throw the slightest light upon a correction of this RECORD to accuse this House of Representatives of having acted in a manner which I am sure no member here understands he was doing and making appropriations for sectarian purposes. That was a reflection, under the Constitution of the United States and under the provisions of almost every State of this Union, upon the integrity of the House of Representatives. As to the truth of the statement or as to its falsity, as the case may be, I neither add to nor diminish the language of the gentleman. But I say that, after that appropriation bill had been passed, no member of the House, under the guise of a correction of the RECORD, had a right to make an imputation of that character against the action of the House upon a measure which had passed out of the jurisdiction of the House, except on a motion to reconsider. So that I make the point here, Mr. Speaker, that it was not a correction of the RECORD, and that, therefore, the material put into this statement was a misuse of the power of a member in attempting to make a correction.

Mr. DOCKERY. Will the gentleman allow me to make a statement?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Certainly.

Mr. DOCKERY. I was performing the duties of the Chair on yesterday, and I am somewhat surprised to note in the daily RECORD of March 11, on page 3480 [permanent RECORD, page 195], quoted by Mr. GROSVENOR, following the statement of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MORSE], this language:

THE SPEAKER pro tempore. The correction will be made.

Mr. MORSE. I will say that the Speaker pro tempore did not say that.

Mr. DOCKERY. I want to say, and in this my statement is verified by the Official Reporters, that the Chair made no reply whatever to the statement of the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I do not know that it is necessary, but before taking my seat I move to strike out from this "correction of the RECORD" all after the word "namely," including the names of the six gentlemen mentioned, down to and including the word "absent," at the end of the next sentence. That leaves in the statement this language: "In fact, Mr. Speaker, there were six yeas that I saw."

I have no objection to leaving that in the RECORD if the gentleman from Massachusetts desires, but I move to strike out the remainder of the language, and I make this motion with much more reference to the future than to the present, for I care little or nothing about this particular transaction or this enumeration of members. I do care a great deal about the former language, which contains an imputation upon this House, but I leave that to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. DOCKERY. Will not the gentleman include in his motion to strike out the language attributed to the Speaker pro tempore, following the statement of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will include that language upon the statement of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY], who was at that time performing the duties of the Chair.

Mr. COGSWELL. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday, when my colleague, Mr. MORSE, asked recognition of the Chair that he might correct the RECORD, I felt that he was going beyond his right and privilege in interjecting statements that are not borne out by the facts, to wit, that the District appropriation bill had appropriated $45,000 for sectarian purposes, and that the committee and the bill had "wiped off the face of the earth one little Protestant Bethel," or some such language as that, first, because he had no right, under the guise of correcting the RECORD, to make such an allusion to that bill or to the debate upon it; and, secondly, because the statement is not borne out by the fact. I speak of this now because it happened to be my duty as a member of the committee to antagonize the gentleman's amendment to that bill. It is not true, Mr. Speaker, that the bill appropriated one dollar for sectarian purposes, nor is it true that it wiped off the face of the earth any Protestant Bethel. Therefore I complain that, under the guise of correcting the RECORD, my colleague should have made an attack on the Appropriations Committee and on the bill which they reported here by the utterance of that which is not true. I repeat, there is not a dollar appropriated in that bill for sectarian purposes; nor is there anything which justifies his statement that the bill, or the committee who reported it, have wiped off the face of the earth any Christian Bethel.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, the exact language used by me yesterday is this:

On Saturday we passed the District appropriation bill, containing an appropriation of $45,000 for charitable institutions, a part of which was for sectarian institutions, and in the same bill we wiped out one poor little Protestant chapel standing on Government land.

Now, if the Chair will refer to the bill H. R. 4581, page 36, in the third clause of that bill comes:

THE SPEAKER. The Chair will call the attention of the gentleman from Massachusetts to the fact that the point made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] is that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MORSE], rising on yesterday to a correction of the RECORD, had no right to refer to anything but that part of the RECORD which he claimed to be incorrect.

Mr. MORSE. Well, I claimed that the vote was incorrectly stated in the RECORD.

THE SPEAKER. And the point the gentleman from Ohio makes is that it is all that should be referred to, and that the gentleman from Massachusetts had no right to refer to the merits or demerits of the bill.

Mr. MORSE. Well, the Speaker pro tempore did not call me to order, and I intended to be entirely in order, but so much of my remarks as were out of order I very cheerfully withdraw, and ask to have stricken from the permanent RECORD. Certainly the House can not ask more than that from me.

THE SPEAKER. Then the suggestion of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] will be adopted, striking out of the RECORD the portion of the remarks of the gentleman from Massachusetts indicated by the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. COGSWELL. Do I understand, Mr. Speaker, that that will strike out the gentleman's remarks in regard to the action of the Appropriations Committee and the bill which it reported, and which was passed here?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks there ought to be in the RECORD the statement that the vote was incorrect.

Mr. CORNWELL. With that understanding, I am content. The SPEAKER. In the opinion of the Chair, that is as much as most as could go into the RECORD.

Mr. SIMPSON. I move to strike out the whole correction, inasmuch as it reflects on every member of this House, charging us with having voted an appropriation for sectarian purposes. I think for that reason the motion to strike out the whole correction should be agreed to.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I did not include the whole of that language in the objection, I think, because I had not carefully gone through the bill; hence I did not feel competent myself to make that motion. But I entirely concur in the suggestion of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON], that it ought all to be eliminated from the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that before the gentleman from Massachusetts rose, as appears from the RECORD, the Journal had been approved. The Journal of course contains the vote. The purpose of the gentleman in rising, as he stated, was to correct the RECORD as to a vote.

Mr. MORSE. That is right.

The SPEAKER. The RECORD conforms to the Journal. The Journal, not the RECORD, is the evidence of what the vote was in the House—the highest evidence beyond any question—and the gentleman did not seek to correct the Journal, but to correct the RECORD.

Mr. MORSE. The RECORD is in error.

The SPEAKER. But the RECORD conforms to the Journal, and ought to do so, because the Journal is the highest evidence of the vote of the House. But the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON] moves to strike from the RECORD the whole correction.

Mr. SIMPSON. On that motion I demand the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is now on the motion of the gentleman from Kansas to strike from the RECORD this entire correction.

The motion was agreed to.

RESOLUTION OF HON. NEWTON C. BLANCHARD.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following: which was read and laid on the table:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Washington, D. C., March 12, 1887.

C. HULL, of this district.

Very respectfully,
J. C. HULL, JR.

NEWTON C. BLANCHARD.

Hon. CHARLES F. CRISP,

Speaker of the House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

OBSTRUCTIONS IN NEW YORK HARBOR, ETC.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a copy of a communication addressed to the Chief of Engineers, showing the necessity for funds for the prevention of obstructive and injurious deposits within the harbor and adjacent waters of New York City; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

POST-OFFICE BUILDING, BUFFALO, N. Y.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, requesting that an item for the commencement and completion of the United States post-office building at Buffalo, N. Y., be inserted in the sundry civil bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

SEA WALL AT SANDY HOOK, N. J.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate submitted by the Secretary of War of appropriation for the construction of a sea wall at Sandy Hook, N. J.; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

SENATE BILL REPEALED.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House Senate bills of the following title; which were severally read twice and referred as stated:

A bill (S. 58) for the relief of William Clift—to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (S. 193) for the relief of John S. Neet, jr.—to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (S. 194) for the relief of Napoleon B. Giddings—to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (S. 326) for the relief of C. B. Bryan & Co.—to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 469) for the relief of Adolph von Haake—to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (S. 470) for the relief of George H. Jewett, of Arlington, Washington County, N. H.—to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 574) for the relief of Wells C. McCool—to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (S. 910) for the relief of Eunice Tripler, widow of Charles S. Tripler—to the Committee on Claims.

BRIG. GEN. JOHN R. BROOKE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 467) for the relief of Brig. Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army.

Mr. BINGHAM. I ask unanimous consent that this bill be taken up and passed at this time; and pending the request, I desire permission to make a brief statement of the case.

The bill was read, as follows:

Enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States be authorized and directed to pay to the widow of the late Brig. Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army, the sum of $10,000, out of the Treasury of the United States, in full satisfaction of the claims of the late Brig. Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army, for alleged trespass and false imprisonment, and the said sum is hereby appropriated for said purposes, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid and expended in full satisfaction and satisfaction of said claims arising out of said judgments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to make a brief explanation with regard to this bill. Without objection, the gentleman will proceed.

There was no objection.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, in the Fifty-second Congress a bill identical in language with this was passed by the Senate and came to the House; it was acted upon favorably by the House committee, and was reported and placed upon the calendar. It was in the closing days of the session. The Speaker had promised to give me recognition, and there were two bills which I desired to have considered—one this bill from the Committee on Military Affairs, the other a bill from the Pension Committee.

I determined, after consultation with Gen. Brooke, to take up the pension case, as it was the claim of a widow in great distress, and felt that his position was so strong that the next Congress would give him relief.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, it is impossible to hear the statement of the gentleman. I understand that this is still subject to objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM] is making a brief explanation, subject to objection. Mr. BINGHAM. That is the history of the proposed legislation in relation to this matter in the Fifty-second Congress. That bill has now been passed by the Senate, in language identical with the bill of the last Congress. The Committee on Military Affairs have submitted a bill, which is now on the Calendar, and which is similar in every particular, with the exception of an amendment containing a declaration that the parties must settle this claim within three months after the passage of the act. If I have that amendment changed, I shall see that the amendment to the House bill be added to the Senate bill.

The statement of this case is briefly this: In 1867 Gen. Brooke, then a lieutenant-colonel in the United States Army, was stationed in the Territory of New Mexico. Great difficulty then existed, growing out of the exchange of liquor for clothing, camp equipment, etc., on the military reservation. Two men were arrested upon the charge of selling liquor to the soldiers in exchange for military supplies. They were incarcerated in the guardhouse of the camp for several days, pending an examination of the question. They afterwards entered suit against Col. Brooke for false imprisonment. The War Department authorized the employment of counsel. Counsel was employed. The case went on for almost two years. Gen. Brooke was ordered out of the service of the country, pending of course, his case would be attended to by his counsel. In the meantime his counsel died, and with no reflection upon the judicial administration in the Territory in 1867 I will simply say that judgment was rendered for $10,000 in each case against Col. Brooke.

These judgments have since been pending. Propositions of compromise have been submitted to the Department as low as $1,500. It is doubtful that such cases can be settled for $1,000. Some of the parties in interest having deceased, their heirs are now making the claim.

Gen. Brooke has no property that he thinks can be levied upon;

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman for unanimous consent to consider the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HALL of Minnesota, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

REAL AND PERSONAL PROPERTY, AND MODE OF TAXATION IN THE SEVERAL STATES.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be directed to prepare and transmit to the House of Representatives a statement showing the population of each State and Territory, and the value of real and personal property, the value of land, the value of coal and iron, and the value of the tax on real and personal property, and the tax per capita, each assessed by congressional districts in the several States, and like information as to each Territory and the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of this resolution.

Mr. SAYERS. That should go to a committee. It is an important resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman objects to its consideration, and the Chair will refer it after examining it.

ORPHAN AND MINOR CHILDREN OF ALFRED PHIPPS.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill H. R. 6459, which was reported favorably from the Committee on Pensions. I would like to have it passed.

The bill was read, as follows:

And he [The bill for the relief of John T. Phipps and other orphan and minor children of Alfred Phipps, Company A, Twelfth Maryland Infantry.

Be it enacted, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the names of John P. Phipps, Bertha L. Phipps, Mary M. Phipps, Alfred J. Phipps, and Florence H. Phipps, orphan minor children of Alfred Phipps, Company A, Twelfth Maryland Infantry, upon the pension roll of the United States, at the rate of $20 per month each, until they shall respectively arrive at the age of 65 years.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Interior be and he is hereby authorized to pay to the said orphan and minor qualified guardian of said children under the laws of the State of Maryland and the persons hereby authorized to be paid.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Your committee recommend that the bill do pass after being amended by striking the initial "C" for "P" after the word John in line 4; striking out all of line 8 after the word "States" and insert in lieu thereof the words "except to the limitations and provisions of the act of June 27, 1838, as it may be amended." Also that the title be so amended as to read, "A bill to pension the minor children of Alfred Phipps."

The SPEAKER. This bill was reported, as the Chair understands, from the Committee of the Whole to the House at a previous session.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request for consideration? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The amendments recommended by the Committee of the Whole were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the title will be amended in accordance with the recommendation of the committee.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A messenger from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the bill (H. R. 1133) to remove the charge of desertion standing against John W. Wacker.

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts states that he rises to a question of personal privilege.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Speaker, I had no objection whatever to have eliminated from the RECORD anything I said in connection with the remarks and correction of the RECORD which I asked to make on yesterday that was improper or out of order; but to eliminate from the RECORD the fact that there were six votes instead of three is to change the truth. The special purpose for which I rose and on which I desire to address the House is the statement made by my colleague [Mr. COGSWELL]. In his remarks he said I used the words "sectarian purposes." In my remarks of yesterday I used the words "sectarian institutions." Exactly what I said was this:

I desire to correct the RECORD. On Saturday we passed the District Appropriation bill, containing an appropriation of $45,000 for charitable institutions.

Now, I have nowhere accused the House of making appropriations for sectarian purposes. A part of it was for sectarian institutions. I did not undertake to say how it was used. Now, Mr. Speaker, to deny that is to deny the record. Why, it is here in black and white. There can be no mistake about it. Page 36 of the bill, which we passed, reads as follows:

In all, $50,750.

Then it goes on to name the institutions to which this money is to be applied. The bill was amended from the way I have it in my hand, and these appropriations were made specific for each of these institutions instead of pro rata, according to the number of inmates, as in the original bill, and among the institutions that are named is the Church Orphanage of St. John's parish. That is an Episcopal institution. Then there are the St. Ann's Infant Asylum, the St. Joseph's Asylum, the House of the Good Shepherd, and St. Rose's Industrial School, Catholic institutions. For anyone to say that these are not sectarian institutions and belong to a church or particular sect is denying what the Almighty and every man in Washington knows is true.

Mr. ENLOE. I make the point of order that the gentleman has stated no matter of personal privilege, but is simply making a statement.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Massachusetts that is a mere issue between the gentleman and his colleague as to what was proper, correct, and best can not raise a question of privilege.

Mr. MORSE. Well, but, Mr. Speaker, I was accused, or it was alleged by my colleague, that I charged the House with making appropriations for sectarian purposes. I said "sectarian institutions," and there is a difference between those words "sectarian institutions" and "sectarian purposes."

The SPEAKER. The Chair will think that the gentleman has presented a question of privilege.

Mr. MORSE. I have at least myself right, Mr. Speaker. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. COGSWELL. Mr. Speaker, I now ask that the remarks of my colleague be stricken from the RECORD unless I have a chance to reply. A fair inference as to the meaning of the gentleman's remark yesterday was that the appropriations had been made for sectarian purposes.

Mr. MORSE. I deny that.

Mr. COGSWELL (continuing). That I deny. Why, all these appropriations to these benevolent institutions were to institutions of a denominational nature; and when he segregates them and says they are sectarian institutions, is there anyone within the sound of my voice who does not believe I made the charge upon that bill and the committee which reported it that it was favoring appropriations for sectarian purposes? And even letting it go as "sectarian institutions," these appropriations made to these different institutions are for taking care of the poor children of this District.

It was compensation to each one of the institutions, without regard to their denominational belief for the board and care they had extended to the poor children of this District. I repeat again that the purpose of his recent remarks and those on yesterday was to create the impression that the bill, that those who reported that bill, and the committee are in favor of the appropriation of money for sectarian purposes. I deny it now, once, and forever.

Mr. MORSE. I deny that that was my purpose. I submit that it would be manifestly very unfair to allow these remarks to go in and to strike out my explanation.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Just a word. What was the purpose of the gentleman in the use of his language?

Mr. MORSE. To correct the RECORD.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The rule of law is that every man uses language with reference to its plain everyday meaning.

Mr. ENLOE. That would be a very embarrassing rule.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now, I know it is a violent assumption in this case, but we must, in dealing with a matter of this sort, and in drawing attention to it, treat everybody alike. Now, I assume that the gentleman from Massachusetts used that language for some purpose. Why did he say "sectarian institutions?" What object did he have? What was his purpose?

Mr. MORSE. To contrast the appropriation for that purpose with the wiping out of that little chapel.

when they think to tell them "you are going to silver standard." They somebody distress and disaster will come to them.

Mr. President, we are on a gold basis now. I am tempted to read just a line or two from Gen. Francis A. Walker, from a little tract entitled "Bimetallism; a tract for the times," which I have here, where he puts this question in a very concise way. He says:

"The question is not whether gold or silver is better, but whether the country is better off with gold or silver. The question is not whether gold or silver is better, but whether the country is better off with gold or silver. The question is not whether gold or silver is better, but whether the country is better off with gold or silver."

I think I could get two silver basis we could not be worse off than we are now, and it is notorious fact that the countries using silver only as standard money are better off than we.

Mr. President, the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS], whom I do not see in the Senate, argues at length the other day to show that the people of the United States distrust silver certificates, and he cited the fact that they were going into the Treasury Department now in large numbers for import duties. To show that there was a distrust, he said that in 1879, when the resumption of specie payment came by the Government of the United States, there was distrust of our ability to pay the greenbacks in gold, and thereupon, because of the distrust that the people had of the greenback, they took it to the Treasury and deposited it there, and that when it was an established fact, either in nine or ten months or a year afterward that the Treasury could redeem and would redeem the greenbacks in gold tender, people took other kinds of money to the Treasury. Now, I have looked over to see what was our condition in 1879. I find that in December, 1878, the Secretary of the Treasury made this statement:

"The operations of the Treasury, aided by the favorable condition of our foreign commerce, have advanced the value of United States notes to 99 percent, or within nearly 2 percent of par."

Now, that was more than a year before we resumed specie payment, and that was upon the eve of a general discussion that had been going on for more than a year all over the country, in Congress and out, as to whether we could resume specie payment on the 1st of January, 1879.

I was handed this statement by a gentleman whom I have no doubt will believe I have already looked it up—that the New York Herald, on September 4, 1878, said:

(Gold was official at 100.)

Within a half cent of par on September 4, 1878. On the 14th of November, 1878, gold sold at par in the city of New York. Resumption had been practically begun for all purposes, except perhaps for the handling of gold in the way of export or something of that kind, for several months before 1879. There was no distrust then; there is no distrust now; and neither the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH] nor the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] nor the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] nor the three combined can make the American people discredit the American money. During the last panic, when the whole country was in revolution financially, the greenback was as good as gold, and gold was no better than this inferior, despised silver certificate.

Mr. President, this is the only country in the world, I believe I may say, where the legislators stand in the house in which they are called to legislate and deprecate the money of their country. Why is it that Frenchmen ever dared to stand in any legislative body of that country and declare that the money of the country was not good money. It is left for this country and this country alone, for the financial agents, for the legislative members to reprecise the Government money.

For nearly twenty years, at least since 1878, there has been a continued attempt by the Treasury Department to deprecate the silver money of this country. All the great financial agencies and banking agencies of the country, led on or supported by the great metropolitan press, have been endeavoring to make the people believe that silver was unfit for money, and that it would not discharge money duty. The Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Wisconsin and the Senator from Oregon announce that the American silver dollar is but a 45-cent dollar. Has it anywhere failed to buy 100 cents' worth of anything that any man has to sell? I will admit, measured in gold the silver in a dollar will only bring 45 or 46 cents, but measured in commodities it will buy more than twice as much as it would buy in 1872, before the demonetization of silver. It will now buy more wheat, corn, and cotton than it would then. It is a dollar that is as good as gold.

Its value is not determined by the metal in it; it is determined by what it will do for money; and I submit the spectacle is not edifying, is not instructive when Senators stand here and insist that the American dollar is a dishonest dollar and that the men who take it are being cheated. Yet, in spite of these tirades, in spite of these attacks, the people are as anxious for a silver dollar to-day as they ever were. If there were 50,000,000 more of them in circulation there would not be so many idle, poor men and so many closed mills and so much distress and so much disaster coming to the people.

Mr. President, I wish now to advert to what I referred to the other day, and I allude to it now because yesterday a Senator whom I see sitting near me said to me "When we repealed the Sherman law we did more for silver than has ever been done." Why? Because you put the whole world in distress.

Mr. GEORGE. Including ourselves.

Mr. TELLER. Including ourselves. You have put everybody in distress. You have destroyed the production of money of the people, for the time being at least, and as Gen. Walker says, is the condition so favorable that you want any more of it? For the first time in the history of the American people we have denied to the American citizen the right to assemble in the great cities and declare their grievances. The mayor of Boston a few days since said to the citizens of that great city, "You can not assemble and hold a public meeting upon the common," because he feared revolution, because he feared riot.

When we have come to this we have fallen upon an evil day and upon evil times, and we shall not be compensated by putting England in greater distress than we. We will not be compensated by it if we should succeed by it in forcing the mints of the world open to silver, when we have thrown ourselves, by our own unaided act, to have opened them without entailing upon the people the frightful condition we have entailed upon them.

Mr. President, I had intended to say several other things with reference to matters which have been alluded to in this debate, but admonished by the fact that I am approaching a vote, I decided that other Senators desire to speak, I shall reserve what I have to say until another time.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, if the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH] will allow me, I shall, in what I have to say, and in the vote which I shall cast on this question, say and vote without reference to any position that I may have occupied in the late civil war. I have endeavored since the close of that war, since I took an oath of allegiance to the United States, to discharge my duty as an American citizen without reference to past conflicts, without any reference to past jealousies or past animosities. I have been a member of this body I have endeavored, upon every occasion, whether by vote or speech, to so act that it could not be known from that vote and from that speech whether I resided north or south of Mason and Dixon's line. I am not aware that I have ever even in the heat of debate used an expression which would tend to show that I had an interest or felt an interest in any question before this body not felt in common by the American people.

The passage of this bill is not a sectional question. It is not a Democratic question. It is not a Republican question. As far as I am able to understand the past history of this country, all parties, from all sections, have declared themselves favorable to the remonetization of silver. In the very act which repealed the purchasing clause of the Sherman law there was a distinct declaration, a distinct pledge, that the Government of the United States should use its best efforts for the purpose of having a more enlarged basis of coinage than the free-coinage measure. I wish it was, if it had any chance of becoming a law. The bill proposes only to require in specific terms the coinage of silver already purchased, already owned by the Government, and, as has been shown by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY], and also by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], already required by law to be coined.

In passing this bill we introduce no new law, except there is a little change in the order in which coinage is to take place. As the law now stands, every dollar of bullion in the Treasury is required to be coined; first, that portion of it which is considered as representing more immediately the Treasury notes outstanding, and, afterwards, the gain or seigniorage. By this bill that order is inverted or reversed, and that is the only change, as has been conclusively shown in this debate, made by the bill in the present existing law.

But, sir, it is argued with great earnestness, with great zeal, with great ingenuity, that the first section of the bill provides not only for the coinage of $5,000,000 of silver, but not alude to the hundreds, but speak in round numbers, but also requires that silver certificates to the amount of $5,000,000 shall be issued in addition to the coinage. So, according to that contention, the currency of the country is not only to be increased by $5,000,000 of silver, but also by $5,000,000 of silver certificates, with no silver behind them. That I believe is the contention of the very able and, I might be allowed to say when speaking of this particular argument, of the very ingenious Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON]. That gentleman's character for candor certainly demands from me the expression of the belief that, as singular as the argument is, as inconclusive as it is, yet nevertheless it is the true opinion of that Senator. He has become, I think, the victim of his own ingenuity in his argument.

Of course, Mr. President, I must concede that the bill is inartificially drawn, that it is inapt in its expressions, and that without reference to the prior legislation of Congress, there might be some ambiguity in it. But sir, it is a fundamental, and universal rule in the construction of statutes, recognized everywhere, that all statutes in pari materia, all statutes upon the same subject-matter, must be construed together. If that were not so the celebrated Sherman law would be found to be very defective. Unless we can recur to the then existing legislation of Congress to explain its provisions, they would be doubtful and ambiguous, if not construed to mean what they appear to what we have already construed them to mean. It is very true that there is nothing said in the first section of this bill about the legal-tender quality of the silver dollars to be coined under it, nor is there anything said in the Sherman act of 1890 as to the legal-tender quality of the silver dollars issued under it. Yet it has never been doubted that the silver dollars coined under the Sherman act were a legal tender.

There is nothing said in the first section of this bill as to the size and weight of the dollars directed to be coined by it. They are not even called standard dollars in the first section. Yet, sir, when we come to construe the meaning of the act and to carry it into effect, when we see a provision requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to coin a dollar, we are obliged, under the rule to which I have alluded, to refer to the existing legislation on this subject to see what a dollar is and what kind of a dollar is authorized to be coined. So that difficulty is removed.

Then we come to the very difficulty suggested by the Senator from Iowa. The sum of $55,000,000 is to be coined, "and such coin or the silver certificates issued thereon shall be used in the payment of the public expenditures, and the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, if the needs of the Treasury demand it, issue silver certificates in excess of such coinage."

Then follows the provision: "Provided, That no excess shall not exceed the amount of the securities as herein authorized to be coined."

Now, sir, the very slightest reflection would have taught the Senator from Iowa that when a silver certificate is named and not described in the act itself we must refer to the existing legislation of Congress to see what a silver certificate is. Referring to that legislation we find that a silver certificate certifies that so many dollars, in fact, are deposited in the Treasury to be paid to the bearer; or, in other words, that a silver certificate is not simply a promise by the Government to pay so many dollars in silver, but is a statement, a certification, of a fact that so much silver has been deposited in the Treasury and is ready to be paid upon the presentation of that certificate. That is the meaning of a silver certificate.

Mr. HARRIS (at 2 o'clock p.m.). Mr. President, the hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, at which time by the unanimous consent of the Senate, it was agreed that the vote on the motion of the Senator from Iowa to reconsider the vote by which the bill was ordered to a third reading should be taken, I now demand that vote.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was ordered to a third reading. [Putting the question.] The yeas and nays appear to have it.

Mr. QUAY and Mr. ALDRICH called for the yeas and nays; and they were ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. I think he and I would perceive vote the same way on the bill, and he so understanding it, I would consent that he had arranged a pair with some other Senator.

Mr. GEORGE. He is paired with me.

Mr. CULLOM. I therefore vote "yea."

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). Upon this subject I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. If he were present I should vote "nay" and he would vote "yea."

Mr. McILLAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], and vote "yea."

Mr. McLAURIN (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON]. If he were present I would vote "nay."

Mr. MITCHELL (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES].

If he were present I should vote "yea," and I presume he would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HUNTON (after having voted in the negative). When I cast my vote I was not apprised of the fact that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], with whom I have a general pair, is absent. I desire to withdraw my vote and announce my should vote "nay."

Mr. PASCO. I was requested to announce the pair of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS] with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES].

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin. I was paired with the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES]. As he is paired otherwise, I vote "yea."

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to state that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] is detained at his home on account of illness and if he were present he would vote in the affirmative. He is paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE].

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 45; as follows:

So the Senate refused to reconsider the vote by which the bill was ordered to a third reading.

Mr. HARRIS. Under the consent rule agreed upon some days since, the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] has now the right, if he chooses to exercise it, to move to commit the bill.

Mr. MANDERSON. Understanding that it is no violation of the unanimous consent rule, I move that the bill be committed to the Committee on Finance with instructions to amend the bill so as to provide that the silver certificates which are to be issued by the first section shall be issued only in anticipation of or in lieu of the securities provided to be coined.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the Senate ready for the question on the motion of the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, when this motion was previously made by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN]—

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator from Connecticut allow me to suggest that from this time, while the motion of the Senator from Nebraska is debatable, the debate is limited under the consent agreement to five minutes to each Senator?

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. HAWLEY. I thank the Senator; I was perfectly well aware of it. I want only ten seconds.

When the motion was previously made by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] to commit the bill I voted "yea" as I thought with usual distinctness, but I found myself recorded as voting "nay." I ask unanimous consent to have the Journal changed. It is still in time; it has not been printed. I am positive about my vote.

Mr. HARRIS. Does the Senator refer to his vote on the last roll call?

Mr. HAWLEY. No; when this same motion to commit was made by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] on the 7th instant.

Mr. HARRIS. I remember that recently after a vote there was a request made, and I committed the error of declaring that a vote could not be withdrawn after the result had been announced, but I find a Senator may for sufficient reasons change or withdraw a vote he did not intend to give. However, he can not record a vote he did not cast.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. HARRIS. I make no objection.

Mr. HAWLEY. There is a mistake in the Journal. There is no mistake as to my vote. There is an error in the Journal, and I ask unanimous consent that it be corrected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The correction will be made, in the absence of objection.

Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. President, I do not desire to occupy even the five minutes that I am permitted to take under the unanimous agreement. I have heard nothing during the course of this debate to change what I believe is the fair, the logical, the final, and the inevitable result of the language of the bill. It is characterized by those who are its friends as being crude, rough, and ungrammatical. It has led to a debate which shows that those fitted to construe the English language are at sea as to what the bill means. I think that no man, whether he be acting in a legislative capacity or as a judicial officer hereafter to construe it, can have any doubt of the proposition but that the first section of the bill provides (as was very fully suggested by the Senator from Iowa a day or two since) that there shall be coined absolutely and immediately the $55,000,000 said to be the gain or seigniorage upon the bullion in the Treasury, and that in excess thereof there shall be issued, if the public expenditures require it, an amount equal to that seigniorage, or $55,000,000 more.

Now, in the presence of this dispute it certainly seems to me to be no more than fair that the bill shall go to the Committee on Finance, a committee abundantly able and qualified to correct its language. I admit that it is not an error in style, but an error in the substance of the bill, and that it should be committed and returned to the Senate for its consideration. There need be but a very trifling delay. No one upon this floor openly contends that the bill means that $110,000,000 shall be coined and issued as paper by virtue of its first section, and if that is not what it means let it be corrected so that there can be no dispute or cavil as to what its terms are.

For one, I have no desire to precipitate upon the bill any other amendment than that I suggest. I care very little as to the dispute over the second section. That which concerns me is the dispute as to the language of the first section, and I think it should be corrected. My motion points out an easy method by which that correction can be made; and I am at a loss to understand the position of gentlemen who insist that the bill shall not be corrected in its English so that it may express what they say it means. I hope the motion will prevail.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the position of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] to commit the bill with instructions.

Mr. MANDERSON. On that question I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). On all questions arising on the bill I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. If he were present, he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

Mr. HUNTON (when his name was called). "I am paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. McLAURIN (when his name was called). I wish to announce that I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON]. I should vote "nay" if he were present.

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). Under the arrangement previously announced, by which my pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE] has been transferred to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], I will vote. I vote "yea."

The roll call having been concluded, the vote was announced—yeas 27, nays 44; as follows:

So the Senate refused to commit the bill to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HARRIS. Believing as I do, and with the understanding, that there is no question which can arise now except the question, Shall the bill pass, I ask unanimous consent that the five-minutes rule agreed upon the other day may be revoked. I understand there are several Senators who desire to be heard upon the question as to the passage of the bill. I have no desire to limit the debate upon the general question to five minutes, and therefore I have no objection to abrogating that part of the consent rule if it meets the desire of the Senate.

Mr. MORGAN. But the vote is to be taken to-morrow at 2 o'clock.

Mr. HARRIS. Of course, the final vote is to be taken to-morrow at 2 o'clock upon the passage of the bill.

Mr. TURPIE. I was about to inquire what effect the modification would have on the time when the final vote shall be taken.

Mr. HARRIS. There can be no modification of the rule upon that point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the final vote will be taken at 2 o'clock to-morrow. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. BLACKBURN. It seems to me that it would be hardly fair to agree to the request of the Senator from Tennessee, which might practically cut off all opportunity to be heard under the agreement as to the five-minutes rule. Suppose some Senator should occupy the time from now until to-morrow at 2 o'clock?

Mr. HARRIS. I beg to say to the Senator from Kentucky that I have no sort of concern or wish on the subject, but I chance to know that there are several Senators who have heretofore expressed a desire to be heard. So far as I am concerned I simply desire to say that I shall interpose no objection. I have no desire upon the subject.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I have no objection to urge provided we shall vote upon the bill at 2 o'clock to-morrow. Neither under the five-minutes rule nor under any other rule do I propose to occupy any part of the time of the Senate; but if there be more than one Senator who wants to be heard I should think that under the agreement made by the Senate the opportunity ought to be given under the five-minutes rule and that the time should not be occupied by one or two Senators. However, I interpose no objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. HARRIS. I want to state again, as it seems the Senator from Kentucky did not quite understand me, that I do not care who wants to be heard or at what length he wants to be heard, I shall demand the final vote at 2 o'clock to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. HALE. I object, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made. [A pause.] Mr. BUTLER. As there seems to be an indisposition to discuss this subject further, I see no reason why we can not have a vote now on the final passage of the bill.

Mr. CULLOM. The time is fixed for to-morrow.

Mr. RANSOM. The time has been fixed by unanimous consent.

Mr. BUTLER. I understand. I have no desire, of course, to interfere with the consent rule, but we had better be voting than sitting here and doing nothing.

Mr. GEORGE. I desire to ask if there was objection to the abrogation of the five-minutes rule?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Mississippi that it was objected to.

Mr. MILLS. If there is nothing before the Senate, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the Senator from Texas to withdraw that motion.

Mr. MILLS. I will do so.

Mr. HARRIS. When requested that the five-minutes rule be abrogated, if the Senate should desire to have it abrogated, it was objected to. Now, as it seems that no Senator desires to make a five-minutes speech on the question of the passage of the bill, I believe I will ask unanimous consent that we proceed to vote upon it now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee make that request?

Mr. HARRIS. I submit it.

Mr. HALE. I withdraw the objection which I made a few minutes since to the consideration of the Senator from Tennessee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee renew his former request?

Mr. HARRIS. Of course I renew it. It is a matter about which I do not feel the slightest personal concern, except that I desire to accommodate Senators who wish to be heard.

The PRESIDENT OF THE U. S. has objection to the request made by the Senate from Tennessee, that said part of the money made by the bill, according to the like amounts may be appropriated for the redemption of the same, and it is so ordered.

Mr. C. A. M. (Mississippi).

Mr. GEORGE. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE] was in the house when I informed him of the objection, and I saw the floor at this time, but he continues his remarks as though he were in the house.

Mr. C. A. M. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. Very well.

The PRESIDENT OF THE U. S. The Senator from Mississippi will proceed.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, when I was interrupted, I was trying to prove to the Senate that there is nothing in the objection made by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] to the passage of the bill, that the first section of it authorizes the coining of silver and the issuing of silver certificates to the amount of $110,000,000. The argument by which that can be proved is a very easy one. In the first place, I will call the attention of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON], and the attention of the Senate, to the fact that silver certificates—not any other kind of certificates, but only silver certificates—are required to be issued. What is a silver certificate? It is a paper well known and well recognized in law and defined in law as a paper which certifies that so much silver has been deposited and remains in the Treasury for its redemption.

Now, sir, if a certificate were issued behind which there was no silver for its redemption, then it would not be a silver certificate as defined in law. So unless this bill is to be construed as authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue a certificate which certifies a falsehood, it is absolutely clear that no certificate can be issued unless there is a silver dollar or silver bullion to the amount of the dollars mentioned in the certificate behind it for its redemption. So there is nothing in that objection.

Mr. President, I now proceed to consider the necessity of passing the pending bill. I understand there is a deficit in the Treasury. I understand that the needs of the Treasury are such that more money ought to be taken to carry the current expenses of the Government. I have been informed that $55,000,000 have already been borrowed by the Secretary of the Treasury for the purposes of the Government.

Now, the question presented to the Senate is this: Are we to borrow money to carry on the Government, or are we to coin silver already in the Treasury for that purpose? It has been demonstrated by the gentlemen who have preceded me that there is no such thing as the faith in coining this silver. It has also been demonstrated that, unless this silver is coined, it can be put to no use.

Then we are brought face to face with this proposition: Having $55,000,000 of silver in the Treasury and the Treasury needing the money, and the Secretary of the Treasury borrowing money, shall we go into the markets of the world and borrow, or shall we coin that which is already in the Treasury? It seems to me as a business proposition there can be no doubt as to what we should do. It was stated yesterday by the Senator from Iowa, who is very well informed upon such subjects, that the present deficit in the reserve was caused by paying out in the ordinary expenses of the Government the gold reserved for the redemption of the greenbacks. Now, if that be so, and I have no doubt it is, then we are face to face with the proposition, whether the Secretary of the Treasury is to go on and borrow money for the ordinary expenses of the Government, or whether we are to authorize him to coin the silver bullion now in the Treasury. That is the question before the Senate.

It seems to me that no good business man would doubt as to the propriety of the course to pursue. I desire to do that thing which will relieve the Secretary of the Treasury from doing that which he thinks he has a lawful right to do, and which I think he has no right to do, that is, to go on and borrow money for general governmental purposes. A reference to the statement made by the Secretary of the Treasury before the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives shows that he believes he has the power and that it is his duty to issue bonds and borrow gold and place it in the Treasury and use it for the ordinary purposes of the Government. That is his position. I think in that it is the duty of the Government to issue bonds for a very plain violation of the law, as well as for the good business reasons which I have already stated, I think the bill ought to pass, so that the money will be in the Treasury to meet the demands upon the Treasury without allowing the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow money for that purpose.

I have stated that I believe the Secretary of the Treasury made a serious mistake in supposing that he has a right to issue these bonds for any other purpose than to raise money to redeem the legal-tender notes of the United States. The act under which he claims authority to borrow money, so far as it relates to the point now before the Senate, reads as follows:

And the Secretary of the Treasury may purchase and redeem the same, and may issue and sell the same, and may use the same for the redemption of the same.

Which is the plain meaning of what are called the greenbacks—bonds authorized to be issued, and sold, and used for the redemption of the same.

Going that far, we find that the Congress in enacting this law followed the plain business rule not to borrow money as long as we had it. So the first direction to the Secretary of the Treasury was, "You shall first use the surplus in the Treasury. You are not to borrow money as long as we have it, but when we have the money you must use it. When we have it not then you must borrow it." That is the plain meaning of the statute. He is authorized to use the surplus in the Treasury, "and to issue, sell, and dispose of, at not less than par, in coin, and in the descriptions of bonds," mentioned in the act, "to the extent necessary to carry this act into full effect."

Now, the Secretary of the Treasury, in the statement which he made before the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives on the 24th of January last, claimed that he had a right to issue any amount of bonds he saw proper. I believe he said in one part of his statement that he could issue $1,000,000,000 if he thought it was necessary, and when he got the money in the Treasury he could use it for the ordinary purposes of the Government.

Now, let us see whether he is mistaken in that or not. What is the extent to which he may issue bonds? The law does not say $500,000. It does not say $200,000; it does not say any other sum, but it does specify a rule by which he must be governed, and he can no more go beyond that rule than he could borrow $500,000 when the statute says he might borrow $200,000. He is authorized to issue and sell bonds "to the extent necessary to carry this act into full effect." The purpose of the act is simply to redeem greenbacks.

I should like to know by what process of argument, when this statute says plainly that he shall only borrow to the extent necessary to redeem the notes specified in the act, that he can go beyond that. It does not allow him to issue bonds to any extent he sees fit, but to the extent necessary to carry the act into full operation, and the act is carried into full operation when provision is made for the redemption of the greenbacks, or the United States notes mentioned in the act.

The first thing he must do when he is about to issue a bond is to decide this question: Is the money proposed to be raised by the bond necessary to carry this particular act into full effect? Does he make that decision according to law when he decides the act will not only issue bonds, but to issue money to carry the act into full effect, but that he will issue bonds for the purpose of carrying on the Government in its general expenditures?

Mr. President, it seems to me that the argument is so plain on that point that it is not necessary to elaborate it. That is as far as he may go. He must determine that question honestly and fairly upon a consideration of all the circumstances, and one of these circumstances, if we had no other act, so it will, but this, would be the amount of greenbacks then in circulation.

I find on examination that $375,000,000 was about all of the paper mentioned in the act of 1875 and required to be redeemed that was outstanding at the passage of the act. If there had been no other act passed, if we had stood upon that act alone, then the amount which the Secretary of the Treasury could borrow would be the exact amount of the notes then outstanding. Could he borrow more? If he could, he could borrow more money under the authority given by that act than the Treasury was authorized to redeem the paper authorized and required to be redeemed by the act. And remember, Mr. President, under the act now under consideration—that is, the act of 1875—when a greenback or a Treasury note was redeemed, it was redeemed in fact. There was no power to reissue it. It became extinguished as an obligation, and was to be canceled by the Secretary of the Treasury. It was a demand to be made upon the Treasury than the amount of greenbacks then in circulation.

But it is said that there has been some change made by the act of 1878 upon that subject, and it is true there has been; but that act contains no enlargement of the power to borrow, as it is conferred by the act of 1875. The act of the 31st of May, 1878, contains no provision whatever in reference to borrowing money, but it does contain a provision which the Secretary of the Treasury is empowered to which I have formerly alluded, says there is "no authority to issue bonds except that conferred by the act of 1875." There is no allusion in that act of 1878 to borrowing money; it simply provides that there shall be no more cancellation or retiring of United States notes when they have been redeemed. That is all there is of it. I read the act in full:

That from and after the passage of this act it shall not be lawful for the Secretary of the Treasury or other officer under him to cancel or retire any

1882	1.19	11.4	1.13	1893	.60	7.2	.75

These statements show that the world's production of wheat was 45,000,000 bushels less in 1888 than in 1887, yet the price was 85 cents, a decline of 4 cents per bushel.

In 1889 the world's production was 190,000,000 bushels less than in 1887, and 15,000,000 bushels less than the crop of 1885, and the price was 90 cents per bushel as compared with 89 cents in 1887, a rise of 1 cent per bushel.

The crop of 1890 was 94,000,000 less than the crop of 1887, and the price fell to 83 cents per bushel, or a decline of 6 cents per bushel.

The crop of 1891 was 61,000,000 bushels less than the crop of 1887, and the price was 85 cents per bushel, or a decline of 4 cents per bushel as compared with the price in 1887. The price of this crop was maintained above what it would have been by the passage of the Sherman law in 1890, and the consequent rise in the price of silver.

The crop of 1892 was 49,000,000 bushels less than the crop of 1887, and the price fell to 80 cents per bushel, a loss of 9 cents.

The crop of 1893 was 81,000,000 bushels less than the crop of 1887, and wheat fell with silver to 60 cents per bushel. Since 1887 the population of the countries which use wheat have increased over forty millions of people, while the production of wheat in the world has steadily declined, and the price per bushel has decreased 29 cents.

Certainly the statement that overproduction has caused the decline in the price of wheat is overcome by these figures.

What, then, is the cause of this great decline? We contend that it is the appreciation of gold and the bounty resulting to the people of India by the decline in the value of silver bullion, as shown by the statement from the Treasury Department, which I will not read but wish to have inserted as part of my remarks:

Statement showing the exports and average export price of cotton, raw and wheat from British India during the years ending March 31, 1870 to 1891, and eleven months ending February, 1892, inclusive.

NOTE.—At the request of Mr. GEORGE O. JONES, the rupee has been reduced to United States money at the rate of six cents per rupee.

S. G. BROCK, Chief of Bureau.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Bureau of Statistics, April 16, 1893.

These tables show that while India did not increase her production of wheat, the amount that was exported enormously increased and the people of that country substituted something else for food, probably millet.

The export price of wheat from India has increased rather than decreased, so that while wheat brought but $1.10 per bushel in 1870, it was worth $1.21 for the eleven months ending February, 1892.

During the month of February, 1892, India exported 2,737,000 bushels of wheat, valued at $3,901,000, at the average export price of $1.32 per bushel.

As silver continues to decline India will continue to receive an increased price per bushel for her wheat, and the quantity she exports will also increase. All authorities agree that there has been no decline in the purchasing power of the rupee in India, but that it will purchase as much of labor and of everything else as in India to-day as it ever would, although its bullion value is but 23 cents.

In this connection I insert the following extract from the speech of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES]:

Let us endeavor to make an approximate estimate of the losses sustained by our agricultural population since 1885, when President Cleveland first advised Congress to recall the silver purchase act of 1856 and to stop the coinage of silver dollars:

WHEAT.
Average export price per bushel—	$1.17
1870 to 1883	73
1883	73
Difference	44

According to the report of the Agricultural Department for December, 1882, the wheat crop of this country for the year then closed amounted to 315,000,000 bushels. On this quantity there is 44 cents per bushel, raised by the decline in the price of silver bullion, amount to an annual sum of $138,600,000 of debt and tax-paying power, which amount apportioned among the principal wheat-producing States shows the loss of each of such States to be as follows (I give the figures in round numbers):

Wheat crop of 1892 in—	Bushels.	Loss.
Indiana	40,000,000	$17,600,000
Minnesota	41,000,000	15,960,000
California	39,000,000	17,160,000
Kansas	20,000,000	20,800,000
South Dakota	32,000,000	14,080,000
North Dakota	33,000,000	15,400,000
Ohio	40,000,000	15,200,000
Missouri	25,000,000	11,000,000
Illinois	28,000,000	12,320,000
Michigan	15,000,000	10,700,000
Pennsylvania	19,000,000	8,540,000
Nebraska	16,000,000	7,040,000
Kentucky	12,000,000	5,280,000
Oregon	10,000,000	4,400,000
Washington	10,000,000	4,400,000

There may be added to these figures five to ten million bushels each for the States of New York, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, Texas, Tennessee, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Iowa. The loss on wheat, therefore, suffered by the farmers of this country must be estimated at $200,000,000 annually.

COTTON.
Average price per pound in New York—	Cents.
1870 to 1885	11 1/2
1870 to 1892	8
Difference	3 1/2

Taking the crop year 1888-'89 as an average year, and, for convenience of calculation, computing the loss at 3 cents per pound, we find that the total annual loss of the planters of the United States amounts to over $100,000,000 distributed among the States as follows:

Cotton raised in—	Pounds.	Loss per year.
North Carolina	230,000,000	$69,000,000
South Carolina	275,000,000	82,500,000
Georgia	180,000,000	54,000,000
Florida	32,000,000	960,000
Alabama	422,000,000	126,600,000
Mississippi	522,000,000	156,600,000
Louisiana	240,000,000	72,000,000
Texas	710,000,000	213,000,000
Arkansas	330,000,000	99,000,000
Tennessee	162,000,000	48,600,000
Total	3,422,100,000	$1,026,600,000

This makes a total loss to the agriculturists of this country, in wheat and cotton, by reason of the demonetization of silver, of over $325,000,000 a year.

These figures are startling, and certainly warrant an earnest effort to restore silver to its old place and price.

It is no longer a question of the silver content of their loss is as nothing compared with the loss of the tiller of the soil.

This decline in the price of silver and its effect was predicted in 1886 by one of England's shrewdest men.

At a meeting of the British and Colonial Chambers of Commerce, held in London in 1886, Sir Robert N. Paine, a member of Parliament, a banker, and ex-mayor of London, said that "the effect of the depreciation of silver must result in a great loss of the wheat and cotton industries of America and by the ag-

Mr. VOORHEES and others. Consent.

Mr. HARRIS. It is unusual, but I shall not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection, and leave is granted. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the bill before the Senate having been ordered to a third reading, and read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. GALLINGER. On that question I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FAULKNER (when Mr. CAMDEN's name was called). My colleague [Mr. CAMDEN] is necessarily detained from the Chamber, and is paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. If my colleague were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. FAULKNER (when his name was called). I made a pair yesterday with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. That pair has been transferred to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES], which entitles me to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). I was paired on this question with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY], he being opposed to the bill and I in favor of it; but by an arrangement my pair has been transferred to the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CAMDEN]. I therefore vote "yea."

Mr. HILL (when his name was called). Upon this question I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON].

Mr. STEWART (when the name of Mr. JONES of Nevada was called). My colleague [Mr. JONES of Nevada] is paired with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. If my colleague were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], and I vote "nay."

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 44, nays 31; as follows:

TENNESSEE STATE CLAIMS.

Mr. HARRIS. A few days since I asked the unanimous consent of the Senate to consider the joint resolution [S. R. 61] providing for the adjustment of certain claims of the United States against the State of Tennessee, and certain claims of the State of Tennessee against the United States. A question was raised by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] and the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. Since that time the Senator from Maine and myself have looked over the joint resolution, and I have consented to offer certain amendments which are perfectly satisfactory to him. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to consider the joint resolution at this time, and, if considered, I will submit the amendments.

Mr. HALE. When this joint resolution was before the Senate a few days since, it provided for the determination of certain questions between the General Government and the State of Tennessee by a special commission, and appropriated money in advance to carry out the result of such commission's deliberations.

I thought then, as I do now, and so did the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], who is absent, that it would be much safer legislation to have all such reports made to Congress, so that it may consider the question of an appropriation; and on the suggestion by the Senator from Ohio and by myself, the Senator from Tennessee, who is a very conservative legislator on such matters, consented that the joint resolution should go over. He and I have examined it since then, and the amendments which he and I have agreed upon cover the point; so that if it is determined by the commission that the General Government is indebted to the State of Tennessee, instead of the money being appropriated in advance, the Secretary of the Treasury will report the whole matter to Congress with such recommendation as he may deem proper.

I am bound to say that if, after full adjudication by this commission, the Secretary reports in favor of an appropriation, I shall consider that Congress is in duty bound to carry it out. The final jurisdiction of Congress is maintained over the subject; and, therefore, I see no further objection to the joint resolution, and hope that it will pass.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee asks unanimous consent of the Senate for the consideration of the joint resolution indicated by him. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the joint resolution be read at length, and then I shall suggest the amendments agreed upon by the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] and myself.

The Secretary read the joint resolution.

Mr. HARRIS. After the word "Tennessee," in line 11, the Senator from Maine and myself have agreed to an amendment, to insert "the said commission shall report such agreement, compromise, or settlement to the governor of Tennessee, to be submitted by him to the Legislature of said State at its next regular session."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposed amendment will be stated in connection with the language of the joint resolution.

The SECRETARY. In line 11, after the word "Tennessee," it is proposed to insert:

"The said commission shall report such agreement, compromise, or settlement to the governor of Tennessee, to be submitted by him to the Legislature of said State at its next regular session."

So as to read:

That the Attorney-General, Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of War be, and they are hereby, authorized and required to proceed to compromise, adjust, and settle with the State of Tennessee, through her duly appointed agent, all said matters, upon such terms as to amount, allowance and interest, etc., as shall do equal and impartial justice to both parties; and if the result of such settlement shall disclose a balance due to the United States from the State of Tennessee, the said commission shall report to the Secretary of the Treasury such agreement, compromise, or settlement, to be submitted by him to the Legislature of said State at its next regular session.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS. In line 11, before the words "the payment," I move to insert the word "if."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The SECRETARY. In line 11, before the words "the payment," it is proposed to insert the word "if," so as to read:

And if the payment of such balance shall not be provided for at the next regular session of the Legislature of Tennessee, then the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and required to proceed to collect same by the appropriate proceedings in accordance with the terms of the bonds held by the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS. I move to strike out all after the word "to," in line 19, to the end of the joint resolution, and insert "report the same to Congress with such recommendation as to an appropriation therefor as he may deem proper."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the word "to," at the beginning of line 19, it is proposed to strike out "pay the same to the governor of Tennessee out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated," and insert "report the same to Congress with such recommendation as to an appropriation therefor as he may deem proper;" so as to read:

And in the result of such settlement shall disclose a balance due the State of Tennessee, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to report the same to Congress with such recommendation as to an appropriation therefor as he may deem proper.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. Will the Secretary read that part of the joint resolution which refers to the officers who are to constitute this tribunal?

Mr. HARRIS. The Secretary of the Treasury, the Attorney-General, and the Secretary of War.

Mr. HALE. I thought as the joint resolution was read that the order of precedence which is fixed by the statute is not followed.

Mr. HARRIS. As to the order of precedence between those officers, neither the Attorney-General nor I gave any thought—at least I did not—and I do not suppose he did—but the joint resolution was originally prepared by the Attorney-General and myself. What order does the Senator suggest?

Mr. HALE. It is not a material thing, of course; but we generally follow the order which is fixed by the statute. The Secretary of the Treasury should be first and the others in due order.

Mr. HARRIS. I have no objection to any order. I agreed to a commission on the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of War, and the Attorney-General. I care not in what order they may appear in the joint resolution.

Mr. HALE. The order as stated by the Senator is correct. Let the Secretary read that part of the joint resolution, so that we may see how it is there.

The Secretary read as follows:

That the Attorney-General, Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of War, and they are hereby authorized, etc.

Mr. HALE. I move to amend by changing the order.

The SECRETARY. In line 3, after the word "the," where it first occurs, it is proposed to strike out "Attorney-General;" at the end of the same line, after the word "Treasury," to strike out the word "and," and after the word "War," in line 4, to insert "and the Attorney-General;" so as to read:

That the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of War, and the Attorney-General be, and they are hereby, authorized, etc.

Mr. HALE. That is right.

Mr. HARRIS. On reflection, unless the Senator from Maine thinks it material, as this is a subject-matter which I have discussed with the Attorney-General, and he and I agreed upon the exact verbiage of the joint resolution as it was originally offered, I should prefer letting it stand as it is.

Mr. HALE. I am sorry to hear from Tennessee, I know, is very careful about all such matters, and if he thinks, after consultation with the Attorney-General, that any feeling would be manifested about changing the joint resolution, I shall withdraw my amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. I hope the Senator will. I prefer the joint resolution remaining as it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine withdraws his amendment.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. VORHEES. I move that when the Senate adjourn today, it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

WILLIAM MCGORRANHAN.

Mr. TELLER. I give notice that on Monday next, immediately after the completion of the routine morning business, I shall move to amend the bill, known as the McGorranhan bill. I have given several such notices, but there has been no opportunity for me to make a motion to take the bill up. I shall endeavor, however, on that occasion to have it taken up.

Mr. VEST. If the Senator from Colorado will permit me, I wish to say there is a bill here which ought to be disposed of, which is in the nature of unfinished business, but has lost its place on account of the seigniorage bill coming over from the House of Representatives and being taken up. I refer to the bill in regard to the purchase of a site for the erection of a Government Printing Office.

Mr. TELLER. I will say to the Senator from Missouri that if I can get the McGorranhan bill up I shall be willing that it be laid aside for the bill to which he refers.

COL. JESSE H. STRICKLAND.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 838) for the relief of Col. Jesse H. Strickland, Eighth Tennessee Cavalry, United States Volunteers, with the understanding that if it shall lead to protracted discussion it will not be pressed.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment in line 9, after the date "1864," to insert "deducting all pay and allowances paid to him in any other military capacity for the time," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of $100,000, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Jesse H. Strickland, late colonel of the Eighth Tennessee Cavalry, the pay and allowances of cavalry, from January 30, A. D. 1863, to April 1, A. D. 1864, deducting all pay and allowances paid to him in any other military capacity for the time.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WAGON BRIDGE NEAR SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

Mr. VEST. I am instructed by the Committee on Commerce to report with certain amendment two bridge bills, and to ask that they be immediately considered. There is necessity that they should come back to the other House to-day, if possible. I report first the bill (H. R. 4831) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the construction of a high wagon bridge at or near Sioux City, Iowa," approved March 2, 1839, as amended by acts of April 13, 1890, and February 7, 1893, with an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. VORHEES. If the bills lead to no debate, I shall not object to their consideration.

Mr. VEST. I have no idea that they will lead to debate.

Mr. VORHEES. If the bills lead to no debate, I shall not object to their consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4831) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the construction of a high wagon bridge at or near Sioux City, Iowa," approved March 2, 1839, as amended by acts of April 13, 1890, and February 7, 1893.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment in line 9, after the word "April," to strike out "thirteenth" and insert "thirtieth;" and in line 13, after the word "years," to insert "after the date of approving this act;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of $100,000, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the construction of a high wagon bridge at or near Sioux City, Iowa," approved February 7, 1893, so that the said act shall be null and void if the construction of said bridge shall not be commenced within two years after the date of approving this act, and be finished on or before March 2, 1896.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. VEST, the title was amended so as to read:

"A bill to amend an act entitled 'An act authorizing the construction of a high wagon bridge at or near Sioux City, Iowa,' approved March 2, 1839, as amended by acts of April 30, 1890, and February 7, 1893."

IOWA AND NEBRASKA PONTON BRIDGE COMPANY.

Mr. VEST. I also report from the Committee on Commerce, with amendments, the bill (H. R. 5425) for the relief of Iowa and Nebraska Pontoon Bridge Company, for the consideration of which I also ask unanimous consent.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 3, line 7, after the words "over the," to strike out "railroad," and insert "railroads."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert as an additional section:

SEC. 9. All the rights granted by this act shall cease whenever the Secretary of War shall determine and give the notice hereunto provided that the said bridge shall be removed within the time specified in the act authorized by an act approved March 2, 1839, and amended April 30, 1890, and February 7, 1893, as amended and open for travel, and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to give the owners of said bridge the notice to remove the same within twelve months from the date of said notice, and if the company owning said bridge shall neglect to make such removal within said time, it shall then be his duty to cause the same to be removed at the expense of said company.

Mr. ALLISON. I am not quite clear in regard to this proposed amendment of the bill, and I call the attention of the Senator from Missouri to the matter. I am not sure that that provision will accomplish all which it is intended to accomplish. As I understand, the charter for the pontoon bridge, so called, is to expire by limitation when this new structure is completed and in operation; but the amendment as I heard it read only provides that the pontoon bridge shall be removed within twelve months. It seems to me it might be well to add to the amendment "that the charter herein granted shall expire at that time."

Mr. VEST. The amendment says so at the beginning of it. Mr. FRYE. It provides in the first two lines that all the rights acquired by virtue of the act shall cease.

Mr. ALLISON. I should be glad to have those lines read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will again read the proposed amendment.

The Secretary read the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

SARAH K. McLEAN.

Mr. FURBER. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of S. 341, S. 342, for the relief of Sarah K. McLean, widow of the late Lieut. Col. Nathaniel H. McLean. It is a very meritorious measure, and it was passed at the last session of the last Congress unanimously.

By unanimous consent, the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the proper accounting officers to settle and adjust to Sarah K. McLean, widow of the late Lieut. Col. Nathaniel H. McLean, all back pay and emoluments that would have been due and payable to him, as major, from July 27, 1864, to the date of his reinstatement, March 3, 1875.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is there a report in this case?

Mr. TURPIN. Yes, sir.
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FRYE in the chair). There is a long report accompanying the bill.

Mr. ALLEN. I ask for the reading of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.
The Secretary proceeded to read the report, submitted by Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Military Affairs, December 19, 1875.

Mr. GALLINGER. I withdraw the request for the reading of the report.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire to state that this measure has been before Congress for some time, and I believe it was passed in the last Congress, having been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs by a majority report. Also at the present session it was reported by a majority report, and the views of the minority were submitted, as the record shows. I do not think that there is any equity or justice in this case. I simply desire to state that by not objecting to the bill I do not consent to its correctness, or to the principle that is embodied in it. I adhere to the minority report that was made, but I shall not consume the time of the Senate in having the views of the minority read.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. WEST. I am instructed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 249) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at the most accessible point between the city of Kansas and the town of Sibley, in the county of Jackson and State of Missouri," approved March 3, 1875, to report it with amendments, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments of the Committee on Commerce will be stated in their order.

The amendments were to add to the bill the following as an additional section:

Sec. 2. That no other corporations, in the location of which hereinafter mentioned, shall be permitted to construct a bridge.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add to the bill the following as an additional section:

Sec. 3. That no other corporations, in the location of which hereinafter mentioned, shall be permitted to construct a bridge, and so on, which this act is amendatory, and hence, within three years, and be completed within ten years from the date of the passage of this act. And should the same be completed, this act, and the act so amended, is amendatory, and so on, and so on.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS CHAMBERS.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 349) for the relief of Thomas Chambers.

Mr. HAIRIS. I wish to ask the Senator from Michigan if that bill is reported by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads?

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE. It is, and an identical bill has passed this body twice heretofore on the report of that committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to Thomas Chambers, of Mackinac, Mich., $3,654.56, in full compensation for the additional expenses incurred by him in carrying the Canada mails from Sault de Saint Marie, Mich., to Mackinac, Mich., from July 1, 1875, to June 30, 1879, inclusive, he having contracted to carry United States mails only.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HARRIS. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, March 19, 1894, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, March 17, 1894.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon, and was called to order by the Speaker.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. E. B. BAGBY.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read, corrected, and approved.

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege. By yesterday's RECORD I observe that a concurrent resolution directing the institution of suits in the name and in behalf of the United States against the officers and directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company for the recovery of money and property of said company illegally and fraudulently diverted, was introduced by the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. BOATWRIGHT), and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. I desire to inquire of the Chair whether that resolution, under the rule, does not properly go to the Committee on the Pacific Railroads? If so, I ask to have the reference changed.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House do pass a concurrent resolution, directing the institution of suits in the name and in behalf of the United States against the officers and directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company for the recovery of money and property of said company illegally and fraudulently diverted, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The SPEAKER. This resolution was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. The Chair thinks it ought to have gone to the Committee on the Pacific Railroads; but that is for the House now to determine.

Mr. REILLY. I move that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from the further consideration of the resolution, and that it be referred to the Committee on the Pacific Railroads.

Mr. BAILEY. I suggest to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BOATNER], who introduced that resolution and at whose request it was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, is absent, and that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. REILLY] withhold the matter until the return of the author of the resolution. I think it is perfectly clear, under the rule, that the resolution might properly be referred to the Judiciary Committee. I think it equally clear that it might have gone to the Committee on the Pacific Railroads, and I suggest to the gentleman that in the absence of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BOATNER] the matter might simply be left in abeyance.

Mr. REILLY. I will say in reply, with the consent of the House, that the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BOATNER] is a member of the Judiciary Committee, and also a member of the Committee on the Pacific Railroads. The gentleman did not confer with myself or with any other member of the Committee on the Pacific Railroads in regard to this resolution; but as a matter of fact I understand that the resolution was not referred by the Speaker, but that the reference was made pro forma by the Speaker's clerk, as is the practice.

Mr. BAILEY. At the request of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BOATNER]:

Mr. REILLY. At the request of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BOATNER], and I understand further that the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BOATNER] is absent for an indefinite period. It is not known how soon he will return, and I think it proper and right at this time, while the matter is fresh in the minds of the members in the House, to call it up and have it disposed of.

Mr. BAILEY. I will say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that I believe the resolution has been referred to me as a subcommittee: in view of that I understand I will do nothing with it until the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BOATNER] returns. I am not in an attitude where I want to insist upon jurisdiction of the resolution; but at the same time I am not willing to see it taken from the committee which I know its author desires to consider it, and to be referred to another and different committee, in his absence. If he were here he could speak for himself, and I should have no part or parcel in the controversy.

Mr. REILLY. I will simply say this: Under the rule it is the duty of the Speaker to make these references. The Speaker has declared in the presence of the House that in his opinion this resolution ought to have gone to the Committee on the Pacific Railroads. Hence I do not believe there ought to be any question raised.

If there was any question about the matter it would be different, but the Speaker stated to the House a moment ago that unquestionably this resolution ought to go to the Committee on Pacific Railroads, and I insist upon my motion.

Mr. BAILEY. Then I want to suggest that the motion can only be made at the instance of the committee itself, and that an individual member of that committee claiming jurisdiction is not permitted to make the motion.

Mr. REILLY. I have conferred with my colleagues on the committee, and those with whom I have spoken have authorized me to take this action.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will cause the rule to be read, or read the rule:

Corrected in case of error of reference may be made by the House, without debate, and a correction with Title XL on any day immediately after the reading of the Journal by unanimous consent, or on motion of a committee claiming jurisdiction or on the report of the committee to which the bill has been referred.

And the correction, of course, under the rule, is not debatable. What was the point of order of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. BAILEY. I make the point of order that the motion to refer can only be made by the committee, and not by a member of the committee.

The SPEAKER. That seems to be the rule.

Mr. KYLE. I would like to say a word right along there. I would like to have something to say in this matter.

The SPEAKER. The point of order is not debatable on the question of reference.

Mr. KYLE. I just want to say that it strikes me that this bill ought to go to the Committee on Pacific Railroads, or all the bills should be taken up by that committee and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania make the motion by direction of the committee claiming jurisdiction?

Mr. REILLY. I must say there has been no formal action taken by that committee, or meeting for that purpose. I have spoken to individual members of that committee, who have authorized me to claim jurisdiction of this matter. Whether that will come within the rule or not I do not know.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks, if the point is made, it ought to be at the request of the committee.

Mr. REILLY. Very well; I will withdraw the motion, and will have a meeting of the committee for that purpose.

PONTON BRIDGE AT SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 5425) for a charter for the Iowa and Nebraska Pontoon Bridge Company, with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. HAINER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HAINER of Nebraska, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendments were concurred in was laid on the table.

HIGH WAGON BRIDGE AT SIOUX CITY.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 4831) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the construction of a high wagon bridge at or near Sioux City, Iowa," approved March 2, 1889, as amended by acts of April 13, 1890, and February 7, 1893, with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. PERKINS. I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. PERKINS, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendments were concurred in was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the title will be amended as recommended by the Senate.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

COL. JESSE H. STRICKLAND.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 838) for the relief of Col. Jesse H. Strickland, Eighth Tennessee Cavalry, United States Army.

Mr. COOMBS. The House having reported a bill exactly similar, I ask that that bill be permitted to lie on the Speaker's table for the present.

There was no objection.

ACCOUNTS BETWEEN UNITED STATES AND THE STATE OF TENNESSEE.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the joint resolution (S. R. 61) providing for the adjustment of certain claims of the United States against the State of Tennessee, and certain claims of the State of Tennessee against the United States.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask that that resolution be permitted to lie on the Speaker's desk without any action being taken at the present.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following Senate bills, which were severally read and referred as follows:

The bill (S. 179) authorizing the restoration of the name of Thomas H. Carpenter, late captain Seventeenth United States Infantry, to the rolls of the Army, and providing that he be placed on the list of retired officers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The bill (S. 575) for the relief of Sarah K. McLean, widow of the late Lieut. Col. Nathaniel H. McLean—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The bill (S. 290) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at the most accessible point between the city of Kansas and the town of Sibley, in the county of Jackson and the State of Missouri," approved March 3, 1887—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

The bill (S. 159) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Oregon and Washington Bridge Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Columbia River between the State of Oregon and the State of Washington, and to establish it as a post-road"—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

The bill (S. 176) granting the right of way to the Duluth and Manitowish Company across the Fort Pembina reservation in North Dakota—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The bill (S. 1458) granting to the Duluth and Winnipeg Railroad Company a right of way through the Chippewa and White Earth Indian Reservations in the State of Minnesota—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The bill (S. 1230) for the relief of Maria T. Karge—to the Committee on Pensions.

The bill (S. 349) for the relief of Thomas Chambers—to the Committee on Claims.

that it was not an advertising sheet in any sense; that it did not come under any of the heads relating to objectionable matter; that it was merely a publication of the order, issued once a month, for the purpose of conveying the news as to the progress of the order, the changes made in their rules and regulations, and the general drift and tendency of the work of the order. Later, under the same Administration, another application was made by a gentleman in the city of St. Louis, one Mr. Morgan, a member here. He proposed to issue a regular weekly newspaper, and was anxious to advertise the paper and the enterprise largely with the first edition. He wished to send through the mails an edition of a hundred thousand copies of the first issue of the paper.

His application was rejected, on the ground that the legitimate subscription list of the publisher was too small to justify so large a circulation for the first issue, or for any other issue, an excess of the bona fide mailing list. Upon further examination, and also upon my own presentation of the case, the Postmaster-General modified his order to the extent that papers to the number of about five times the number of bona fide subscribers upon the publisher's list might be sent through the mails at the first issue, and a certain number in advance from that time on so as to correspond as nearly as might be with the practice as to other regular publications.

Mr. President, I have another case which is different from either of the former cases, in which, in the ruling, the Postmaster-General, upon a second application, not one personal from myself, however, remains of the belief that his former ruling was correct. The gentleman affected has appealed to me for assistance, and I have thought it best to render it by offering the pending resolution. He is a resident of this city, a citizen of the State of Virginia, I believe, and he is an active advocate of views which he and a few others like him hold upon economic questions.

He has found it convenient in several instances to announce himself as a candidate for prominent offices in the State of Virginia, member of Congress, governor, and the like, with a view of disseminating his ideas. By way of aiding his ambition in this respect he proposed to publish a little periodical, a quarterly, called the Virginia Patriot.

The gentleman claims to be the founder of a new party called the Pantocrat party, and the members speak of themselves as Pantocrats. His publication is altogether respectable, altogether decent; but it was clear to my mind upon the presentation of the first issue of his little paper that it was not properly mailable as second-class matter. I so advised him, and the reason I gave was that it was advertising the man rather than the doctrine, at least it was advertising both; and upon appeal to the Postmaster-General he received a similar answer. But now he comes out with a second number of his paper, from which he has eliminated the advertising feature; that is to say, that which advertised himself upon the ticket of any party, and he simply presents the doctrines, the same as a Republican writer or a Democratic writer or a Populist or a Prohibitionist or a Nationalist writer would do. He claims the privilege of passing through the mails as second-class matter this little paper.

The resolution asks that the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads shall consider and report not any specific matter, but whether the postal laws and regulations ought not to be so amended that any person shall have the right to mail any periodical, tract, leaflet, or other similar publication, by the sack or otherwise, and have the same delivered to any receiver of mail at any domestic post-office when the postage is prepaid thereon at the rate of 1 cent per pound or fractional part thereof, and when such publications are not of obscene or immoral character, nor issued for advertising purposes, nor to incite riot or insurrection.

While I am not in harmony with this paper at all, any more than I am with a Republican or a Democratic paper, a question is presented by this man and it is that question that I now present to the Senate for action by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, whether the postal laws and regulations may not be or ought not to be so amended that any person, whether he be a publisher or not, whether he is a private citizen or whether he may be, may not properly pass through the mails as second-class matter such periodicals as are mentioned in the law and the regulations now. For example, a friend of mine in the city of New York may forward to me a thousand or ten thousand tracts with the request that I distribute them. They may be temperance tracts, they may be religious tracts, they may be political tracts, they may be reform tracts, they may be tariff tracts, or what not. The resolution would permit my friend in New York to send those tracts to me as second-class matter, and I should permit me to mail and distribute them in packages or single at pound rates, a cent a pound for every pound or fraction of a pound.

So, too, it would permit me to distribute my newspapers after I have read them; and that is a very common practice with a great many people. After they have read their newspaper or their magazine or their tract they are anxious to send it to some friend in order that he or she may have the same benefit or pleasure from perusing it that they did; and if the law were amended as the resolution suggests it would permit persons to send periodicals of those classes through the mail the same as a publisher does. While I do not see any reason why it should not be done, I see a good many reasons why it should be done, and I therefore now appeal to the Senate and ask that the resolution may be adopted and that the committee may consider carefully whether the time has not come when any individual person, man, woman, or child, may send through the mail at pound rates just such matters as the newspaper publishers and printers are permitted to send through the mail. That is all there is in the resolution, and I ask that it may be adopted.

Mr. PLATT. I wish to have the resolution read once more. The Secretary again read the resolution.

Mr. PLATT. I have no objection to the passage of the resolution. I do not believe in its adoption, but I have no objection to its being considered by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. PEPPER. I move that the papers in my possession be referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads in connection with the resolution. I will send them to the desk.

The motion was agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 556) granting an increase of pension to John Stockwell was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The bill (H. R. 566) to ratify the reservation of certain lands made for the benefit of Oklahoma Territory, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

The bill (H. R. 6250) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to loan the Columbian caravels to the American National Red Cross, incorporated, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

BRIG. GEN. JOHN R. BROOKE.

The bill (H. R. 2640) for the relief of Brig. Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army, was read twice by its title.

Mr. MANDERSON. A bill identical with this measure passed the Senate about a week ago. The only change there is in the House bill is one that decidedly betters it, and requires that within three months from the passage of the act this offer of compromise shall be accepted by the judgment creditors. I ask that the bill be put upon its passage.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask that the bill be read at length, so that there may be no question about the two bills being identical.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States be authorized and directed to pay to the legal representatives of Andrew Cameron, of New Mexico, the sum of $1,000, and to the legal representatives of John R. Brooke, of New Mexico, the sum of $1,000, out of any moneys in the judgments obtained by the said Cameron and Smith in the district court of the first judicial district of the Territory of New Mexico, at the August term of said court, against Lieut. Col. John R. Brooke, Third Infantry, United States Army, now brigadier-general United States Army, for alleged treason and false imprisonment. Provided, That the provisions of this bill shall be accepted by the legal representatives of Andrew Cameron and John R. Brooke, as a settlement in full of all claims against John R. Brooke, of the United States Army, within three months from the passage hereof. And the said sum shall be appropriated for said purposes out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid and received in full discharge and satisfaction of all claims arising out of said judgments.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DEATH OF THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE ENCHS.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask that the resolutions of the House of Representatives in reference to the death of my late colleague in that body be laid before the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate resolutions of the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The resolutions were read, as follows:

Resolved, That the House do stand adjourn with deep regret the announcement of the death of Hon. William H. Enchs, a late Representative from the State of Ohio.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nebraska to recommit the bill with the instructions suggested by him.

Mr. ALLEN. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], who is necessarily absent; but before leaving the Chamber he informed me that he was opposed to the recommitment of the bill, and asked me to secure a pair for him. I vote "nay," and I have asked the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] to kindly pair with the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. ALLISON (after having voted in the affirmative). I do so with pleasure, and withdraw my vote.

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE], but I transfer that pair to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT], and vote "nay."

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN].

Mr. SHOUP (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. I do not know how he would vote on this question. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. SMITH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DOUGLAS], but I transfer that pair to my colleague [Mr. McPHERSON], and vote "nay."

Mr. WILSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT]. I do not know how he would vote on this question if he were present, and therefore I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. VILAS. I have a general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MINOR]. Is he recorded as voting?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oregon has not voted, the Chair is advised.

Mr. VILAS. Unless there is necessity for my vote to make a quorum I shall withhold it.

Mr. HANSBROUGH (after having voted in the negative). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. PALMER]. I observe that Senator is absent, and therefore I withdraw my vote.

Mr. FAULKNER. I desire to say that my colleague [Mr. CAMDEN] is paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY].

Mr. GEORGE. I desire to announce for the day that my colleague [Mr. McLAURIN] is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON].

Mr. VILAS. Has a quorum voted, Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. A quorum has not voted.

Mr. VILAS. Then I shall vote on the question to make a quorum. I vote "nay."

Mr. ALLISON. I shall take the liberty of voting to make a quorum, if the Senate will allow me.

Mr. HARRIS. Certainly.

Mr. ALLISON. I vote "yea."

So the motion to recommit with instructions was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs upon the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN], which will be read.

The SECRETARY. After the word "advertisement" in section 4, line 34, strike out all of the section down to and including the word "concerned" and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"By publishing a notice of the time, place, and terms of the sale once each week in some daily newspaper published in the District of Columbia for eight successive weeks, and by personally serving on the person in actual occupancy of the real estate and the grantor of the trust deed, if he resides in the District of Columbia.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the Secretary read the part proposed to be stricken out.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as indicated.

The SECRETARY. Strike out after the word "advertisement," in line 34, the following words:

Not less than ten days, in a daily newspaper or newspapers printed and published in said District, as to the trustee or trustees, or trustee acting, shall seem most for the interest of all parties concerned.

Mr. FAULKNER. I have no objection to the amendment suggested by the Senator from Nebraska, and I hope it will be agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska. The Chair hears none, and it is agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to have the section read as it will stand amended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as indicated.

The Secretary read as follows:

Sec. 4. That a deed of land in the District of Columbia in trust to secure the payment of debt in the following words, or to the like effect, namely:

"This deed of trust made this [date], between [the grantor or grantors] of the first part, and [the trustee or trustees] of the second part, witnesses, that the said party (or parties) of the first part, in consideration of the debt hereinafter specified (or partly) conveyed unto the party (or parties) of the second part the following-described land in the (here insert location and description of the property) in trust to secure to [the party secured] payment of the sum of [amount] dollars, on account of [here state character of debt] and interest thereon, the said debt and interest being payable according to the tenor and effect of (here insert the number and description of the note or notes, bond or bonds, etc.) with the power of sale authorized by law. Witnesses, the following signature (or signatures) and seal (or seals) shall be deemed legally sufficient in form to vest in the trustee (or trustees, the survivor of said trustees) all the estate, right, title, and interest whatever, both at law and in equity, of the grantor in the land conveyed for the purposes of the trust, and, unless otherwise in the deed expressed, to fully authorize the trustee (or trustees) to sell the said land and the interest thereon (or trustees) in case of default in the payment of the debt or interest or any part thereof, according to the tenor and effect of the note, notes, bond or bonds described or referred to, or renewal thereof, or of any sum or sums advanced by the party or parties secured on account of taxes or insurance when demanded when requested in writing by the beneficiary or his assigns under and subject to the said deed and described, or such thereof as may be necessary, at public auction, in front of the premises, at such time, upon such terms, with such postponement or postponements of sale or resale, and after such previous advertisement, by publishing a notice of the time, place, and terms of the sale once each week in some daily newspaper published in the District of Columbia for eight successive weeks; and a certified copy of said notice shall be personally served on the person in actual occupancy of the real estate and the grantor of the trust deed, if he resides in the District of Columbia, and on compliance with the terms of sale to convey "all the right, title and interest" by the trustee "to the purchaser or purchasers, the property sold, discharged of the trusts and of all liability on the part of the purchaser or purchasers to see to or account for the application of the purchase money, and to apply the proceeds of the sale after retaining a trustee's commission on the gross amount thereof not exceeding 2 per cent thereof, as follows:

"Second. To the payment of any sum or sums which may have been advanced by the holder or owner of the debt secured on account of insurance and taxes.

"Third. To the satisfaction of the debt secured by the trust remaining unpaid, with interest thereon as specified in the deed of trust, paying over the surplus, if any, to the grantor or grantors in the trust, his, her, or their heirs or assigns.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill is in the Senate and still open to amendment.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask that in line 2 of section 2, before the word "general," the word "with" be inserted; so as to read "with general warranty."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLPH. What has become of the amendment which was just read on the desk? I think the question has not been put on that amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. The amendment of the Senator from Nebraska has been agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. No, it has not.

Mr. HARRIS. I thought the Senator from West Virginia accepted it.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from West Virginia is not the Senate.

Mr. HARRIS. Of course not, but I understood the Chair to say, "If the Chair hears no objection the amendment is agreed to." I may be entirely mistaken about it.

Mr. HOAR. I listened very carefully.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will put the question. The question is upon the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN].

ESTATE OF CHANCEY M. LOCKWOOD.

TWO FRIENDS pro tempore. There being no concurrent or other resolutions, the morning business is closed, and the Secretary will call the first bill on the Calendar under Rule VIII, at the point reached when last under consideration.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Before the first bill on the Calendar is taken up, I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that the bill (S. 166) for the relief of the legal representatives of Chancey M. Lockwood, which was passed over some days since, be now considered. I will state that I propose to offer an amendment to meet the objection suggested the other day by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR].

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. The bill has already been read. Mr. SHERMAN. I think it had better be read.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Certainly; let it be read.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. In line 9, after the word "same," I move to strike out the words "upon the basis of justice and equity," so as to make the bill read:

"That the legal representatives of Chancey M. Lockwood be, and they are hereby authorized to continue their claim in the Court of Claims of the United States for extra mail service on route numbered 1607, extending from Salt Lake City, Utah, to the Dellys, Oregon, and the Court of Claims shall have jurisdiction to a final decree of the same, and to render a final judgment therein for the value of such extra mail service performed as aforesaid, and from any payment that may be rendered in said cause either party thereto may appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States; and the fact of the statutory limitations shall not avail in such cases."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill was reported from the Committee on Mines and Mining with amendments, which will be stated in their order.

The first amendment was, after the word "of" in line 9, to strike out "twelve months" and insert "one year;" and after the words "from the" in line 10 to strike out "time when such work and labor should be completed under the provisions of said section" and insert "1st day of November, 1883;" so as to read:

"That the provisions of section numbered 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which require that each claim located after the 1st day of May 1873, shall be worked, improved, or developed, shall not be less than 10 acres of labor shall be performed or improvements made during each year, be suspended for the term of one year from the 1st day of November, 1883.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 20, after the word "the," to strike out "tenth" and insert "first;" and in the next line, after the word "of," to strike out "June" and insert "November;" so as to read:

And that the further provision that on all claims located prior to the 10th day of May, 1873, 500 worth of labor shall be performed or improvements made by the 1st day of June, 1884, and for one year thereafter, or each claim located after the year 1873 and prior to the 1st day of May, 1873, and the same hereby is, suspended for the term of twelve months from and after the 1st day of November, 1883.

Mr. STEWART. Let the bill go over. I think we have already passed a bill that substantially answers the purpose. We passed a House bill after this bill was reported, and I think it answers the purpose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the Senator certain that a House bill has been passed accomplishing the same object?

Mr. STEWART. Yes; substantially the same object. It has become a law. Let the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. STEWART subsequently said: I ask that the bill (S. 878) to amend section 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which refers to the working of mines, may be indefinitely postponed, as a House bill on the same subject has been passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be indefinitely postponed, if there be no objection. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 743) for the relief of the citizens of the States of Oregon, Idaho, and Washington, who served with the United States troops in the war against the Nez Percés and Bannock and Shoshone Indians, and for the relief of the heirs of those killed in such service, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. SHERMAN. As this is a bill of considerable importance and the Senator having it in charge is not here, I think it had better go over without being displaced.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill goes over without prejudice.

SURVEYOR OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. PROCTOR. I ask unanimous consent that the bill (S. 444) making the surveyor of the District of Columbia a salaried officer, and to provide for more efficient service in the surveyor's office be now considered. The bill was heretofore passed over on the objection of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], which he now withdraws.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has already been read, and the amendments made in Committee of the Whole have been concurred in by the Senate. The bill is still open to amendment.

Mr. PLATT. If the bill is not too long, I think it had better be again read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read at length as amended.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Enacted, etc. That from and after the passage of this act the surveyor of the District of Columbia shall receive a salary of $3,000 per annum in lieu of fee, and shall be subject to the direction and control of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Sec. 5. That the surveyor of the District of Columbia, without charge on the order of the Commissioners, and all fees for surveys made by the surveyor or the assistant surveyor, be paid over to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia, and be received by the press of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and be covered into the Treasury of the United States as other moneys there now deposited, and shall be preserved and shall be part of the public property of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 6. That the assistant surveyor shall take the same oath his principal is required to take, and may, during the continuance of his office, discharge any or all of the official duties of his principal and any default or misfeasance in office by the assistant surveyor, or other assistant or helper of the surveyor, shall be deemed a breach of the official bond of his principal. That the compensation of the assistant surveyor and his clerks are to be ascertained and directed to prescribe a schedule of fees to be incurred by the surveyor for his services, in lieu of the fees now charged, which schedule shall be printed and promulgated in the office of the surveyor.

SEC. 7. That all laws and parts of laws in the District of Columbia relating to their surveyors, now in existence, as far as the same are applicable and not inconsistent with this act, are hereby continued in full force and effect.

THE PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LAND NEAR JEFFERSON BARRACKS, MISSOURI.

The bill (S. 190) for the benefit of sundry persons residing in the vicinity of Jefferson Barracks, Missouri, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to release whatever title the United States may have in that part of the survey within the boundary lines described in the deed of the town of Carondelet to the United States, dated October 25, 1854, and now claimed as a portion of Jefferson Barracks military reservation, situated in the county of St. Louis and State of Missouri, to the legal representatives and assigns of John B. Martigny, to whom the survey was confirmed by act of Congress, approved July 4, 1836; and also to release whatever title the United States may have in so much of the land covered by the patent issued by the United States to William H. Janzen, November 1, 1846, as lies within the boundary lines described in the deed of the town of Carondelet to the United States, dated October 25, 1854, and now claimed as a portion of Jefferson Barracks military reservation, to the legal representatives and assigns of William H. Janzen.

MR. PLATT. I ask that the last section of the bill be again read.

THE PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the last section of the bill.

The Secretary read as follows:

SEC. 3. That this act shall not affect or impair the title which any person other than the United States may have acquired in any of the lands described herein, adverse to the title of either the aforesaid John B. Martigny or William H. Janzen, or of those claiming under either of them.

MR. PLATT. That seems to be a provision that the bill shall never take effect.

MR. COCKRELL. Not at all. It does not take effect against anybody except the United States. All that is done by the bill is simply to quitclaim the interest of the United States, and if there be any adverse interests under these old claims they can be settled in court.

MR. PLATT. I think the Secretary made a mistake in the reading of the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHRISTOPHER SCHMIDT.

MR. WASHBURN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 573) for the relief of Christopher Schmidt.

MR. COCKRELL. Let the bill be read for information.

THE PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read for information, subject to objection.

The Secretary read the bill, and, by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments, in line 5, after the words "sum of," to strike out "$10,000" and insert "$10 a month;" and in line 3, after the date "1892," to insert "in quarterly payments, upon such vouchers as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10 a month to Christopher Schmidt, of St. Paul, Minn., until he has received from the United States the sum of $10,000, in quarterly payments, upon such vouchers as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

MR. SHERMAN. Does the first amendment provide for the payment of $10 a month during the man's life?

MR. WASHBURN. During his life. I will state that the bill originally provided for an appropriation of $10,000. The man is totally disabled.

THE PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendments reported by the committee.

The amendments were agreed to.

MR. WASHBURN. I move to amend by adding at the end of the bill, "payment to commence from the time of receiving such injuries."

MR. COCKRELL. I hope that amendment will not be agreed to. I think we are doing very liberally if we do what the bill now provides. Congress never has granted arrears, and the amendment proposes practically to pay arrears.

MR. WASHBURN. I will state to the Senator from Missouri that this person is totally and absolutely disabled from the wound he received, and there seems to me no good reason why the payment should not commence from the time of the injury as much as from the present time.

MR. COCKRELL. The committee did not consider that question. If that question is to be raised it will open the door to granting arrears by special act of Congress, and I shall have to insist on the bill being recommitted.

MR. WASHBURN. I withdraw the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is withdrawn.

MR. SHERMAN. I should like to have the clause read which fixes the duration of this pension at $10 a month. Is it to be during the life of the person?

THE PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the part of the bill referred to by the Senator from Ohio.

The Secretary read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10 a month to Christopher Schmidt, of St. Paul, Minn., for injuries received from accidental shot on the rifle range at Fort Snelling.

MR. SHERMAN. It ought to be $40 a month during his life. We do not want to establish a perpetual annuity here.

MR. COCKRELL. I supposed that was in the bill. That was the intention of the committee. I move to insert the words "for and during the term of his natural life." Those words ought to have been in the bill.

THE PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

THE SECRETARY. In line 6, after the "month," it is proposed to insert "for and during the term of his natural life."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. MARY O. AUGUSTA.

MR. HUNTON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 4013) to release and turn over to Mrs. Mary O. Augusta certain property in the District of Columbia. It is a bill which has passed the House of Representatives and was unanimously reported favorably by the Committee on the District of Columbia.

MR. PASCO. I hope cases on the Calendar will be allowed to be taken up in their turn. Was this case passed over heretofore?

MR. HUNTON. I will say to the Senator that the bill will only require a non-act.

MR. COCKRELL. I call for the regular order. We shall reach the bill referred to by the Senator from Virginia in a few moments, and I must object to taking it up out of its order.

MR. HUNTON. Very well.

THE PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next bill on the Calendar will be stated.

NATIONAL CEMETERY NEAR PENSACOLA, FLA.

The bill (S. 407) making an appropriation for the improvement of the road to the national cemetery near Pensacola, Fla., was announced as next in order, and the Senate as in Committee of the Whole proceeded to its consideration. It proposes to appropriate $10,000 for the purpose of shelling or otherwise improving the roadway from Pensacola, Fla., to the national cemetery near that city, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SENATE PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS.

The concurrent resolution to print 4,000 copies of the new edition of the Senate election cases was announced as next in order.

THE PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution is before the Senate and will be read at length.

THE SECRETARY. The communication reported by Mr. GORMAN from the Committee on Printing, December 14, 1893, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, the House of Representatives, and the several States, that there be printed 4,000 copies, in cloth, of the new volume of the new edition of the Senate election cases; 1,000 copies to be for the use of the members of the Senate and State, goes for the use of the members of the House of Representatives, the Senate will be able to take the book as follows:

Senate Privileges and Elections.
Volume I.
Election Cases.
Taft.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments heretofore submitted by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the word "cloth," in line 3, it is proposed to insert "in volume 1" and to strike out the words "of the first volume of."

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not want that amendment agreed to in this way.

Mr. HOAR. I think it will be well, before adopting the verbal amendments, as they are all substantially one, to let the Secretary read the concurrent resolution as it will read after the amendments have all been adopted.

Mr. COCKRELL. The amendment was read to insert "in volume 1," instead of "in one volume."

Mr. HOAR. I think we should understand the resolution better if the Secretary will read it as it will read if all the proposed amendments are agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the resolution as it will read if the amendments are agreed to.

The Secretary read as it is now:
Resolved, That the clerk of the Senate, in the first volume of the new edition of the Senate election cases, and of precedents relating to the privileges of the Senate, 1,000 copies to be for the use of the members of the Senate, and 500 copies to be for the use of the members of the House of Representatives, be and they are hereby ordered to be printed as follows:

Senate Privileges and Elections.
Election Cases.
Taft.
Precedents
to Privileges.
Furber.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. From what committee does the resolution come?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. From the Committee on Printing.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I desire to inquire whether this proposed publication includes a history of the three cases recently disposed of from Washington, Wyoming, and Montana? I refer to the three cases of temporary appointment by the governors of those States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator reporting the resolution is not now in his seat.

Mr. HOAR. I suppose it would not be convenient to insert those cases as part of the text of the volume without sending it back for the preparation of a new index. The volume is stereotyped, and was in the index the way in which the Secretary volume was prepared before the cases referred to by the Senator from Oregon were decided. This resolution is merely to print an additional number of copies; but I think it might be well to add to the concurrent resolution a section requiring the printing of the cases referred to as an appendix, so that they may be in the new edition.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I think that would be quite satisfactory, and I think it should be done.

Mr. HOAR. Yes; I think that should be done.

Mr. COCKRELL. Those cases ought to be included in the volume, and I shall oppose the resolution unless they are included.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. So shall I.

Mr. COCKRELL. The edition should be brought up to date. I wish to call attention to the way in which the Secretary volume resolution, which I do not understand corresponds with the amendments which have been proposed. It should read "Senate Privileges and Elections in one volume." The way it was read it would be "in volume 1," which would indicate that there is to be a subsequent volume to come out.

Mr. HOAR. The original publication, which I think was prepared very carefully, is very well done indeed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts will allow the Chair to state to the Senator from Missouri that the resolution reads "in one volume," not "in volume 1."

Mr. COCKRELL. It was not so read the last time by the clerk, so I feel sure observed the reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair so understood it to be read the last time, and the clerks now inform the Chair that it reads "in one volume," not "in volume 1."

Mr. HOAR. This originally was a compilation containing solely contested-election cases, and was published eight or ten years ago. From a new edition was prepared, and there was a new volume added containing the precedents and other historical matter relating to the privileges of the Senate. The resolution as reported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections proposed to have two volumes, one to be entitled "Contested-Election Cases," and the other "Privileges," but the Committee on Printing thought it would be better to have but one volume instead of two. So they propose this amendment. That is the history of it. That is the way the phrase got in.

Mr. GEORGE. I desire to ask the Senator from Massachusetts if the proposed publication includes all the contested-election cases up to date?

Mr. HOAR. This is not a proposed publication in the ordinary sense in which those words are used. It is a document which was completed and reported to the Senate at the beginning of the extra session of Congress last summer, and then printed with indices, and so on. This is merely a resolve for additional copies. The volume was then printed and stereotyped. I understand. Now, the Committee on Printing propose to have certain additional copies printed. You can not incorporate in this volume in the ordinary way the cases in regard to appointment by the governors, which were disposed of during the extra session in the spring, without reengraving and reprinting the volume, putting them in their proper places under the matter of the appointment by governors, and making a new index. All the matter would have to be gone over again, and it would not correspond with the other copies which have been printed and distributed. So when the Senator from Oregon suggested including those cases I suggested that they had better be put in an appendix. Then, when a new edition comes hereafter, if there is one, they can be put in the body of the volume. The Senator from Oregon agreed that that would be all that could be done.

Mr. GEORGE. In a supplement or appendix. That will do. But I think it ought to be in one or the other.

Mr. HOAR. I think so, too. I think the resolution should be amended so as to read that there shall be added to said volume as an appendix all cases decided by the Senate up to date.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I suggest to the Senator from Massachusetts this amendment, to come in at the proper place:

Provided further, That the clerk of the Committee on Privileges and Elections—

If that is the proper person—shall, under the direction of such committee, prepare a full statement of the proceedings in committee and Senate of all election cases up to date—

Mr. HOAR. All cases since?

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Yes; all election cases determined since the preparation of the volume as an appendix thereto, and that the same shall be printed in this volume as an appendix thereto.

Mr. HOAR. Very well; that will do. Of course, the Senator will understand that that will delay the circulation of the volume for six months or some such time, but I presume there will be no great harm done.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The several amendments that have been offered have not yet been acted upon. The Secretary will state the first amendment.

The SECRETARY. After the word "cloth," in line 3, insert the words "in one volume."

The amendment was agreed to.

The SECRETARY. In line 3, before the word "new," strike out "of the first volume of."

Mr. COCKRELL. The word "of" at the end of the phrase proposed to be stricken out should remain.

The SECRETARY. Strike out the words "of the first volume of."

Mr. COCKRELL. That will do. Do not strike out the word "of," if you do, you make it imperfect.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SECRETARY. After the word "cases," in line 4, insert: And of precedents relating to the privileges of the Senate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SECRETARY. In line 9, strike out the words, "Volume I."

The amendment was agreed to.

The SECRETARY. After the word "Taft," in line 11, insert:

Precedents
to Privileges.
Furber.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I move to add at the end of the resolution the following proviso:

Provided further, That the clerk of the Committee on Privileges and Elections shall, under the direction of such committee, prepare a full statement of the proceedings in committee and Senate of all election cases since determined and the same shall be published as an appendix to the foregoing publication.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Oregon if it is his purpose to have the clerk proceed in regard to those cases on a different theory from that in which the volume is made up in regard to the others? The theory on which the volume is made up is to have the clerk make a statement of the case, putting in such specially important matter of the dis-

He also presented the memorial of George M. Breakey and E. S. Agnew, of Alma Center, Wis., remonstrating against an increase of the tax on distilled spirits; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of Cigar Makers' Union No. 182, of Madison, Wis., remonstrating against an increase of the internal-revenue tax on cigars; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. LODGE presented the memorial of Hugo L. Flohr and 14 other employees of Wait & Bond, cigar manufacturers, of Boston, Mass., remonstrating against an increase of the internal-revenue tax on cigars; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of Charles F. Perkins and 21 other members of the Francis Higginson Colony, No. 100, United Order of Pilgrim Fathers, praying that fraternal society and college journals be admitted to the mails as second-class matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. McMILLAN, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. 450) for the relief of Bryan Tyson, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. SHOUP, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred a petition of citizens of California, praying for the passage of the bill to amend the Indian depredation act, asked to be discharged from its further consideration and that it be referred to the Committee on Indian Depredations; which was agreed to.

Mr. CALL. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4838) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes, to report it with amendments. I give notice that I shall endeavor to call up the bill for consideration on Tuesday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Meanwhile the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. ROACH, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1532) to ratify and confirm an agreement with the Southern Ute Indians in Colorado, and to make the necessary appropriations for carrying the same into effect, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PETTIGREW, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred an amendment submitted by himself February 23, 1894, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported it favorably without amendment, and moved that it, with the accompanying papers, be printed and referred to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas introduced a bill (S. 1803) authorizing the construction of a wagon road on the Hoopa Valley Indian Reservation, in the State of California, and making appropriation therefor; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. QUAY introduced a bill (S. 1804) for the correction of the military record of Patrick Moss; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas introduced a bill (S. 1805) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to examine certain claims of persons who owned or occupied buildings on the Hot Springs Mountain Reservation, which had been condemned by the Hot Springs Commission and afterwards burned, and to fix a reasonable value for each of said buildings from the evidence now on file in the Interior Department; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. RANSOM introduced a bill (S. 1806) for the relief of the Cape Fear Steamboat Company; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 1807) for the relief of Thomas S. Lutterloh; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. PETTIGREW introduced a bill (S. 1808) to amend the act of June 22, 1892, entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at the city of Yankton, S. Dak.," which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 70) to authorize the subtreasury at New York to receive certain moneys for the Cherokee Indians; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

AMENDMENT TO APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

PAPERS WITHDRAWN AND REFERRED.

On motion of Mr. POWER, it was Resolved, That the papers relating to Senate Resolution No. 100, for the payment of a bounty to W. F. Spillington, a contractor for furnishing beef to the Indians, pending in the Fifty-eighth Congress, be withdrawn from their files, and be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House of Representatives.

DEATH OF LOUIS KOSSUTH.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following resolutions, which were considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to:

Resolved, That the Senate of the United States has heard with deep regret the death of Louis Kossuth, the illustrious patriot and lover of liberty, formerly the chief of the American people.

Resolved, That the Vice-President be requested to communicate the respectful condolence of the Senate to the family of the deceased.

SIMULATION OF COINS.

Mr. SHERMAN. I submit a resolution and ask its adoption.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary is instructed to examine and report whether the simulation of coins of the United States by coins of the same weight, metal, and fineness, except as authorized by law, is made criminal by the acts defining and punishing the counterfeiting of coins of the United States in other countries, and if not to report a bill to prevent and punish such simulation.

Mr. SHERMAN. My attention has been called to a possible defect in the law with respect to counterfeiting as to whether it would embrace the simulation of coins by putting in a counterfeit or simulated coin the exact weight, metal, and fineness required for a genuine coin. Doubts have been suggested in newspapers as to whether the existing statutes cover such a case. My own opinion, hastily formed, is that the existing law contained in sections 5457 and 5461 of the crimes statute will cover the case. Still doubts have been expressed about it, and to show that the inquiry is imminent, I ask leave to have read a telegram which I cut from a newspaper.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

SEARCHING FOR A PRIVATE MINT—IT HAS COINED HALF A MILLION AND HAS MADE BIG PROFITS FROM SEVEN CENTS EACH.

OMAHA, NEBR., March 10.

Four special Treasury secret-service men, in addition to the regular force employed at division headquarters and the forces of the United States marshals' office, are working in Omaha in a vicinity to unearth a private mint which is alleged to have turned out over a half million standard silver dollars, using the same amount of silver and alloy as the Government. The plan is to come some time in the future, and it is said impossible to detect the difference between the money made by the counterfeiters and the genuine turned out by the Federal mints. The profits of the gang are made from the seepage, which is said to give to the makers a take-off of 8 cents on each dollar made.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution. There can be no objection to it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? The Chair hears none, and the question is on agreeing to the same.

Mr. ALLEN. The Senator from Ohio is not audible on this side of the Chamber. I should like to know from what paper the extract which has been read was taken.

Mr. SHERMAN. I cut it from the Cincinnati Commercial.

Mr. ALLEN. It is simply a press dispatch?

Mr. SHERMAN. I cut it from the Cincinnati Commercial of yesterday or day before yesterday. I can not hear the Senator from Nebraska very well.

Mr. ALLEN. He simply clipped a press dispatch from some newspaper?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; it is a press dispatch from Omaha, stating what had been done by certain officers of the United States in the endeavor to detect and prevent this crime.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to ask the Senator from Ohio if he has any other evidence showing a violation of the law in this respect aside from that contained in the dispatch which has been read?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; I have seen the statement in other papers. The fact is well known that in France, Great Britain, and Germany the same thing is being done with their minor coins. Their laws no doubt punish it as counterfeiting. It is counterfeiting, and it ought to be punished. I think myself, under the statute as it now stands it is sufficiently covered, but I can see that there are points probably which no one contemplated at the time the law was passed. The law was passed in 1866, and it contemplated a disparity of metal in the two coins.

Mr. COCKRELL. The resolution is all right.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to ask the Senator from Ohio if he proposes to confine the inquiry to subsidiary or token coinage like the nickel coinage, or if the principal offense be in counterfeiting our legal-tender coins of silver.

amendment I offered on behalf of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DOLPH. For the purchase of the Mahone lot?
Mr. CAREY. For the selection of the Mahone lot.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair so understands.
Mr. QUAY. Is the question now being taken on the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming offered in my behalf or upon his own amendment?

Mr. CAREY. On the amendment I offered on behalf of the Senator.

Mr. DOLPH. One further inquiry. I should like to ask the Senator from Pennsylvania if the provisions of the amendment for condemnation and the construction of a building are similar to those of the bill itself?

Mr. QUAY. I think so. My understanding is that this amendment is offered as a substitute for the bill reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and is exactly the proposition which was so ably supported in the last Congress by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Vest], the present chairman of that committee. If I am in error in this statement he will correct me. The bill supported at the present time by the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds is the one which he so ably opposed in that Congress.

Mr. DOLPH. The amendment involves simply the question of a site?

Mr. QUAY. Of a site.
Mr. VEST. Mr. President, the amendment now proposed by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Carey] on behalf of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Quay] does not contain the provisions in the substitute reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. The amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania leaves out entirely the provision in regard to the construction of the building under the supervision of the Chief of Engineers, Gen. Casey. It simply provides for the purchase of a site, and is the same as the bill which, as the Senator from Pennsylvania is pleased to observe rather facetiously, was supported by me at a former session of Congress. If it affords the Senator any pleasure to allude to that fact he is entirely welcome to it.

I have given my reasons for making the report of the committee in favor of a different site. The circumstances have entirely changed, as I had occasion to remark before. We have been warned by a terrible disaster in an insufficient building, occupied and owned by the Government in a different part of the city, that a recurrence of such a disaster must be avoided. It is the essence of this discussion that we should as soon as possible provide accommodations for the people in the Public Printing Office, who are to-day suffering not only discomfort, but who are threatened with actual danger.

Mr. President, permit me to call the attention of the Senate to one single fact. The Senator from Wyoming told us several days ago that if we selected either the Mahone site or what is known as the Carroll site, both of which are entirely vacant, a building sufficient to accommodate the Public Printing Office could be put up in a few months. Mr. President, unless we possessed an Aladdin's lamp, our experience teaches us that nothing of the sort could be done. We commenced the construction of the city post-office here in June, 1840, and we are now barely up to the second story. We commenced the construction of the building for the Congressional Library over five years ago, and Senators can look at it to-day and see what progress has been made, though the work has been pressed by Gen. Casey as rapidly as possible.

I am warranted by my experience, and other Senators know that it is a fact, that to commence the construction of a building ad initio for the Public Printing Office will take from three to five years. If it were a private undertaking of course it would be different; but under the system adopted in regard to public buildings, where it is made the interest of every workman and contractor to protract the building as long as possible, it takes from two to three or five times as long to put up a building for the United States Government as for private parties.

If Senators want to take the responsibility in the face of the recommendations of the Public Printer, in the face of our past experience of keeping 2,500 or 3,000 employees in a dangerous and insufficient building, when we can give them relief under the bill of the committee inside of six months, let them do it.

I care for no charge of inconsistency. I have done my duty honestly. After examining every site, after considering the condition of the Treasury, and, more than all, considering the condition of the employees in the old Printing Office, I am entirely satisfied with what I have done.

Mr. STEWART. I am very much impressed with the necessity for speedy action in securing a new Printing Office building. That is the reason why I am in favor of the Mahone lot. The ground proposed to be purchased at the old site is covered with buildings, and it would take considerable time before work could be commenced on any new structure. It may be a question, too, whether there will not be considerable time expended in getting a foundation in that low land. The Mahone lot is free from obstruction; a good foundation can be easily made there upon hard ground; while before the old debris can be taken from the land surrounding the present Printing Office and work started a new building might be well under way on the Mahone lot. One of my principal reasons for getting new ground is that a good foundation may be secured on land which has practically settled, where the building can be commenced immediately and prosecuted vigorously without any obstruction.

Mr. BUTLER. Is there not another reason, if the Senator will allow me, and that is that the Government printing may go on in the old Printing Office until the new building can be completed on the Mahone lot, so that there will be no delay in the public business.

Mr. STEWART. Certainly: the public printing can proceed in any new site is selected.

Mr. BUTLER. I should like to make another inquiry. Is it not impossible on the ground adjacent to the present Printing Office to secure the 40 feet required for a public building erected for the use of the Government? I understand the policy of the Government is not to erect a public building within 40 feet of any other building. If I understand the dimensions of ground around the old Printing Office, a building there would have to come almost in contact with other buildings and with the street, which would be avoided, I understand, by adopting the Mahone lot.

Mr. STEWART. If it is a necessity to have the Public Printing Office at the old site, the Government ought to buy the entire block. There is no doubt about that. To have the building cramped in there will not answer for all future time. There is not land enough in the proposed purchase, and it will involve a greater purchase. Besides, on recurring to the question of expedition, if laborers are employed in tearing down the old buildings and preparing to erect new structures about the Printing Office, it will interfere with the operations of the Printing Office much more than would be the case at a short distance from there, where their work would not disturb the employees of the Government. It would make it exceedingly uncomfortable for the employees during the hot weather to have the buildings torn down, and it would interfere with the work of the Printing Office. The dust, etc., there would be a great nuisance while the buildings are being constructed. If a new building is constructed on the Mahone lot, when you get a portion of it constructed it can be made immediately available, as well as on the present site.

Mr. VEST. Will the Senator be kind enough to answer me a question, if he pleases?

Mr. STEWART. I will answer it, if I can do so.

Mr. VEST. Will the Senator give me his opinion as to how long it would take to put up a building for occupation on the Mahone lot, commencing from the foundation up?

Mr. STEWART. I think that it could be done much more expeditiously there than at any other place. It seems to me if there was business skill brought to bear upon it a sufficient building might be erected very speedily to receive the heavy machinery. That need not be delayed until the entire structure is erected. The trouble about the building down here is that the use of heavy machinery is liable to knock it all down at any time and make a great great catastrophe.

Now, in an emergency like this it seems to me the Government might construct a sufficient building, or a portion of the building, where the heavy machinery can be put with expedition, much quicker on the Mahone lot than at any other place. Besides, the Mahone lot is cheaper when you take into consideration the quantity of land and the accommodations there. It is more suitable. There is room there for all time.

I believe it is the general opinion of those who have visited all these places, that the Mahone lot is the most desirable of all. I have been thoroughly convinced of that, not only by personal observation, but from observation of the debates that have taken place in the Senate, and I see no good reason to change my opinion. In point of cheapness, in point of sufficient land for accommodations for all time, and in point of expedition I believe the Mahone lot has a decided advantage over any other place which has been suggested.

Mr. BUTLER. In reply to the suggestion of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Butler] in regard to the occupation of the old building while a building on the Mahone lot is being erected, I call the attention of the Senate to a letter of the Public Printer, which was read in the preceding debate, dated August 11, 1893, and addressed to the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Gorman], who is chairman of the Printing Committee. Mr. Palmer, the Public Printer, recommends the erection of a building which can be finished inside of six months, and which will give absolute relief to the present Printing Office and remove all danger to be apprehended from its present condition. In concluding the letter he says:

When a building shall be erected which will cover the whole of the proposed new site, the H street and North Capitol street wings (which are believed to be the only portions of the present structure which are unsafe) will be torn down and rebuilt. The Government will then have a building which will be of sufficient capacity to meet its needs for many years to come.

The proposition we now make is to put up a building inside of six months which will give absolute security and remove the chance of disaster which is now threatening the employees in the present building. But if the Senate chooses to take the responsibility of keeping the employees there until a large structure can be put up elsewhere, then Senators must assume that responsibility for themselves. Here is a report of a public officer that the public printing building is insecure and dangerous. We know what has happened in this city within the immediate past, when lives were sacrificed and property of the Government was lost, against all the laws and rules that should govern the preservation of human life.

We are asked now under personal solicitations to take this risk as to the public printing building, and to disregard the question whether those 3,000 people are to be kept in that insecure building in order to purchase ground elsewhere.

There is another consideration that I have never urged here, but which will no one has some weight. Many of the employees of the Government Printing Office have their little homes outside of the present Printing Office site. They own them and occupy them, and they would be compelled to give them up or else be subjected to the inconvenience and expense of making their way each day to their work at a distance [Mr. SHERMAN] argued against the lot which is now being selected by the House of Representatives, immediately contiguous to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, but, because, he said, the locomotives running along the road would attract the attention of the employees, not only uncomfortable and sparks would render the building as having a branch of the Metropolitan Railroad. The lot along its eastern line exactly as the Baltimore and Ohio runs along the lot submitted to us by the House of Representatives. The very same argument applies to one as to the other. If we adopt the lot here, the expenditure is very inconsiderable. The site is ample; all the mains for gas and water purposes are already available, and I say deliberately that in my judgment under present exigencies it is all we can do.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask the Senator from Missouri a question before he sits down?

Mr. VEST. Certainly.

Mr. BUTLER. I do not remember the figures which were brought into the Senate in some former discussion, but if I am right in my recollection the present Public Printer stated, in connection with two other commissioners, that 150,000 square feet of ground would be required for this public building. Now he says in this letter that the amount of land which will be secured by the purchase he proposes, 51,000 square feet, will run it up to 11,245 square feet.

Then he proposes to add 12,353 square feet, covered by two alleys, one 30 feet wide, running east and west, and the other 14 feet wide, running from the 30-foot alley south to G street. That would make about 137,000 square feet. I have been under the impression that the report heretofore have stated that not less than 150,000 square feet of ground would be enough for this public building. I understand the Public Printer now comes to me and recommends a smaller amount of ground. I do not quite understand that, if it is a fact.

Mr. VEST. There was a statement of that sort, as I recollect, when the Public Printer, in connection with the Architect of the Capitol and the Secretary of the Treasury, made a report in the Capitol of what is known as the baseball lot. But the Public Printer has since changed his opinion in regard to the matter, and he makes the recommendation contained in the letter, and I am of the opinion that the quantity of land he has stated is sufficient.

I wish to state, in reply to a neglected notice, in regard to from South Carolina which was neglected to notice, in regard to the 40 feet upon which the eastern portion of this proposed site, if the recommendation of the committee be adopted the 40 feet, if necessary, can be obtained at a very inconsiderable expense. The property there is not at all high priced, and $100,000 certainly not exceeding $12,000, would buy the additional 40 feet if it should be thought necessary to obtain it.

Another argument in favor of the present site is that there is an immense area of very cheap ground, relatively cheap, which can be obtained by the Government at any time.

I wish to state now, although I do not desire to violate any parliamentary rule at all, that, in my judgment, it is simply impossible to secure the assent of the coordinate branch of Congress to the purchase of the Mahone lot. They have deliberately put their judgment upon the lot which is immediately north of the Capitol and near the Baltimore and Ohio depot. The Mahone lot was fully discussed in the House committee; it was visited twice by us; all the arguments were considered, and I will state frankly that with very great reluctance I gave up my opinion in favor of that lot as heretofore expressed. But the opinion is in favor of immediate relief and the necessity for economy in necessity for immediate relief and the necessity for economy in the present condition of the Treasury of the United States, outweighed with me every other consideration.

Mr. BUTLER. I understand the proposition of the Senator from Missouri is to patch up the old building, which is entirely unsafe. The Senator from Missouri to read my report he would have seen there is nothing of that sort proposed.

Mr. TARNER. May I ask the Senator from Missouri what led to the Public Printer's recommendation? The Senator refers to a letter from the Public Printer, but I did not hear it.

Mr. VEST. If the Senator from Tennessee will listen to the letter from the Public Printer he will see what I have referred. I ask the Secretary to read it, although it has been read before.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC PRINTER, Washington, D. C., August 11, 1893.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 3d instant, suggesting that I ascertain if it is possible to secure an option upon vacant property in the same block in which the present Government Printing Office is located to meet the requirements for additional rooms. I reply I have to state that options have been secured, covering ground for the North Capitol and G streets, which is a lot that is adjacent to the United States on G street, will equal a lot of the present Government Printing Office. This ground, comprising about 61,000 square feet, can be had by the due tint on the accompanying drawing, and is offered at all the improvements thereon, for the sum of $100,000. The lot is situated on the corner of North Capitol street and G street, fronting to the North Capitol street, a lot of 100 feet wide, and 100 feet deep, to the immediate necessities, a two-story building, with brick walls, to be built by iron rafters, will cost $100,000; and for a six-story building, having the same ground dimensions, $150,000.

I respectfully beg to suggest that the lot on North Capitol street, be erected. Such a building, if erected, would afford space equal to several times the present building. The building, as I have stated, will give immediate relief, and at a future time Congress can make an appropriation to discontinue the purchase of the ground. The Government Printing Office will be made, and the lot will be 115,435 square feet. There should be added to this site will be 12,353 square feet, running from the 30-foot alley south to G street, and the other 14 feet wide, running from the 30-foot alley south to G street. The other should remain open for a driveway and to proposed building site. The other should remain open for a driveway and to proposed building site. The other should remain open for a driveway and to proposed building site.

The cost of August 30, 1890, appropriated $250,000 for a site for the Government Printing Office. I respectfully recommend that this appropriation be made available, with an additional appropriation of $50,000, to be made immediately available, for the purchase of the site and erection of the building referred to.

When a new building shall be erected which will cover the whole of the proposed new site, the H street and North Capitol street wings (which are believed to be the only portions of the present structure which are unsafe) will be torn down and rebuilt. The Government will then have a building which will be of sufficient capacity to meet its needs for many years to come.

Very respectfully,

F. W. PALMER, Public Printer.

HON. A. P. GUERMAN,
Chairman Committee on Printing, United States Senate.

Mr. QUAY. Mr. President, I have understood that in the discussion of this measure it was alleged that the report of the committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended that the impression of the committee. I rise to correct that impression. The report certainly is in accordance with the judgment of the committee; it certainly is not in accordance with the judgment of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAYSE], nor with that of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. BRICE]. I suppose it represents the opinion of the majority of the committee, and the majority only. In other words, it is not a unanimous report, although there were no views of the minority submitted.

Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. President, one of the few matters for personal congratulation in connection with the pending bill, so far as I am concerned, is that I do not feel the grave sense of responsibility which was imposed upon me when this matter has been up in its different forms heretofore. I am glad that so able an advocate of that which is best is now in charge of the bill; and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] on Public Buildings and Grounds has assumed control of this matter, but I feel like extending to him at the same time a little of my sympathy, for he knows now there is life in himself.

For the last ten years the danger to the occupants of the Public lie Printing Office building has been very great. The Committee on Printing, having in charge to some degree that great office, have repeatedly visited the building. They have recognized the presence of great danger, with probable loss of life. They have done what they could to put the building in safer condition. It has been propped up and supported and strengthened so that the great weight upon its floors might be maintained without crushing the lives and limbs of those who are employed in the building. These, however, have been but temporary makeshifts, and the building is, in my opinion, more dangerous than Ford's Theater was even after the excavation was under way which at last brought it tumbling about the ears of those who were in it. The Committee on Printing have always recognized this danger. In report after report from the Public Printer he has cried aloud for relief for those who were under his care.

I do not wish to delay action upon the bill by going into ancient history, but still I think it due the subject that I should say that no better action has been taken by any committee of either House upon this subject than that which was adopted by the commission years ago to select a site for a new Public Printing Office building. That commission was composed of the Public Printer, Mr. Palmer; the Secretary of the Treasury, then Mr. Windom, and the experienced Architect of the Capitol, Mr. Clark. It reported unanimously. One notable thing is that every report that has been made by other committees which have had this subject in charge has been unanimous, and there has not been a divided committee, such as now presents itself here upon this report.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask the Senator from Nebraska a question?

Mr. MANDERSON. Certainly.

Mr. BUTLER. I inquire of the Senator if he can explain, because I am asking for information, what produces the causes of danger in the present public building?

Mr. MANDERSON. It is because the building was never constructed for the purpose of carrying the great weight that is now imposed upon it. Its walls are not sufficient; its floors are not sufficient.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask further whether that might not be obviated by removing the heavy weight to the ground floor?

Mr. MANDERSON. No; because there is not space enough on the ground floor to hold the different presses, and the vast accumulation of material, finished and partly finished, and the crude material that is there.

Mr. BUTLER. Then it would seem to be the part of wisdom to relieve the building of some of that enormous weight by renting some adjacent building and putting the weight of this building for the time being. I can see no earthly reason why the lives of the employes should be jeopardized when there is plenty of room in the neighborhood to relieve the building of that enormous pressure.

Mr. MANDERSON. That has been done repeatedly. Buildings outside have been rented, and rent has been paid for them, for the purpose of storing some of the material of the Public Printing Office.

Mr. President, the commission to which I have referred, entering upon the performance of its duty, selected from all the numerous sites that were offered that which stands to-day a vacant piece of property and the very best that can be used for a Public Printing Office, and that is what is known as the baseball lot. The report of the commission would undoubtedly have been acceptable to the Congress of the United States, if the present printing building would now be upon it had it not been for me. I was about to say the indecent, and I do not know that the term is too severe—the almost indisputable fight that has been precipitated in the two Houses of Congress by the different real-estate speculators, who desire to make profit from this necessity of the Government.

The baseball lot is beyond question located better than any other for the purposes of the Printing Office. It is a proper form, being almost a square. I shall not go into the details of the matter and show its dimensions, but it is ample as to area; it is near the Capitol; it is near the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, so that tracks could very easily be run into it.

In the effort that the Government should be compelled to purchase some other site there came those who were very desirous that great care should be exercised in looking out for the foundation of the new structure, and an attack was made upon the baseball lot. It was said that Tiber Creek ran through it, that it is filled ground to such an extent that no building of great dimensions and great weight can be placed upon it with safety. The Joint Committee on Printing took a great deal of testimony upon that question. It caused pits to be dug, to see just what is the character of the soil. The inspector of buildings of the District of Columbia, Mr. Entwistle; the Architect of the Capitol, Mr. Clark; the superintendent of construction of the new public Library building, Mr. Green, and Gen. Meigs, an architect of renown and great reputation, all, after thorough and careful examination, declared that the baseball lot is ample and sufficient to afford a solid and lasting foundation for this building. There was no two-sided trust question, and yet, under the attack which declared that some other piece of property might be purchased, Congress turned aside from it and refused to ratify or act upon the report of this able commission that so faithfully did its duty.

When the time shall come for such an amendment I shall propose to amend the bill by substituting the baseball lot. I think as long as I have given this subject as much, if not more investigation and thought than any other has ever received, and in any way, and in my opinion it stands beyond question, by reason of its location, its proximity to a railroad, and the character of the soil as the very best for the purposes of the Government.

Now, what is the second best? I believe it to be the Johnson lot. It is almost a square; is situated on the main line of the Baltimore and Ohio road, and is ground that is high and dry, and where you include the parking that can be used in part and the vacation of the alleys that run through it, it is ample, I think, for the purposes of a new Public Printing Office.

Mr. President, I have lost very largely desire for particular locality in my still greater desire that imminent danger should be averted from these people and that we shall have a new building.

Mr. McMILLAN. I should like to ask the Senator from Nebraska a question there.

Mr. MANDERSON. Certainly.

Mr. McMILLAN. Does the Senator think that a building for the purpose of holding 3,000 employes should be made six stories high? Does he not think such a high building would endanger the lives of the employes? Would it not be better to buy land enough in which to spread the building over a great deal of ground, so that it would not of necessity be higher than three stories? Does not the Senator think that would be the safest plan?

Mr. MANDERSON. I think that with the improved methods in the construction of buildings, with the employment of structural iron that has come so largely into use, a six or eight story building is just as good, just as firm, as solid, and as secure, even for the purpose of carrying upon it great machinery, as a three-story building of the old style of construction.

Mr. McMILLAN. I was alluding more to danger from fire. It is well known that all printing establishments, as indeed all manufacturing establishments, are very inflammable. From the fifth or sixth story of a printing establishment in case of a fire it is almost impossible to get persons out, even in a small building, let alone an immense establishment such as this.

Mr. MANDERSON. I understand the proposition is that any building which is to be constructed is to be made fireproof or a slow-burning building. With the experience we have had in the great conflagrations I do not know whether any building can be said to be a fireproof building; but by the modern uses and appliances they are built of such a character that the combustion is so slow, that it is very easy by the necessary fire escapes, stairways, etc., to empty the employes from a six or even an eight story building.

Mr. QUAY. Will the Senator from Nebraska pardon me for an interruption?

Mr. MANDERSON. Certainly.

Mr. QUAY. I was not in the Chamber when the Senator from Nebraska made his remarks; but I would ask him where the baseball lot is located and what are its dimensions.

Mr. MANDERSON. The baseball lot is almost at the foot of the hill. It is on North Capitol street. It is known as lot 678, and it contains 170,648 square feet, being almost a perfect square. It is two blocks this side of the present Printing Office and on this side of North Capitol street.

Mr. President, I was about to say that I have lost any pride of opinion in this public building shall be placed. If the Senate shall vote down the amendment that proposes the purchase of the baseball lot and shall vote down the amendment that proposes the purchase of the Johnson lot, then, believing that the third best thing to do is to extend the Public Printing Office where it now stands, I shall vote for the proposition submitted by the majority of the members of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator inform me as to the difference in cost between the three propositions to which he has just referred?

Mr. MANDERSON. I will state my recollection on that point. I may not be entirely accurate in my statement, because it has been some time since I looked this matter up and I have had to glance very hurriedly over some information before me to reach the result desired. The baseball lot of one hundred and seventy three and six hundred and eight feet, was offered to the Government on condition that it was conveyed by the commission to which I have referred, and that the National lot consisting of 15,000 square feet, was offered to the Government at $200 a lot, and I am not positive but that there was an additional $25,000 proposed to be appropriated for the purchase of this lot. If so, that would make it $275,000.

Mr. QUAY. That is the Mahone lot?

Mr. MANDERSON. The Mahone lot.

Mr. QUAY. It was offered I think at $1.17 a foot. I do not remember the figures.

Mr. MANDERSON. I probably think that. The Johnson lot that is proposed to be purchased contains 106,000 square feet and it was offered at a dollar a square foot, or $106,000. The parking that might well be used permitted such an increase that nearly 150,000 square feet were available that could be purchased for the sum of $106,000. The additional land desired by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds and as given to the present Printing Office can, I believe, be purchased for the sum of $175,000. So the prices for these different lots or localities range from $106,000 for the Johnson lot up to $250,000, if not more, for the Mahone lot.

Mr. HARRIS. What is the relative position of the Johnson lot to the present site of the Printing Office?

Mr. MANDERSON. The Johnson lot is farther removed than the baseball lot. It is probably three square miles to the north and east of the present public printing building site.

Mr. CULLOM. On the east side of the Baltimore and Ohio road.

Mr. MANDERSON. It adjoins on the corner the Mahone lot. That is to say, the Metropolitan Branch of the Baltimore and Ohio road runs along the east side of the Mahone lot and on the west side of the Mahone lot the main branch of the Baltimore and Ohio, which takes its course along Delaware avenue, being on the east side of the Johnson lot.

As to the Mahone lot, which is the lot proposed to be purchased by the pending amendment, I realize that when the lot, whatever may be its number or designation, is mentioned as the Mahone lot it is given a term that commends it to many members of the Senate and the people who do not know it does. There is no man upon that floor who would go further to help a distinguished gentleman who is interested in that lot and who has given it his name than I would; and if I could bring myself to believe that it is for the best interests of the Government to buy that lot even at the price at which it is offered or more, I would be heartily glad to do it.

But I think there are such grave objections to that lot as should rule it out of consideration. In the first place, it is not so near to the Capitol as it should be, which objection probably applies to the Johnson lot as well; but I do not think that it is the proper shape for the use to which it is proposed to be put. It is 2 1/2 feet in width by 782 feet in length. Most of it is good ground and would afford a fair foundation. Through the lot, however, starting in as I now recall the figures, from 20 to 50 feet from the corner on the one side, a main sewer runs, running out of the lot at a distance of nearly 200 feet from the corner on the opposite side is one of the main sewers of this city, and that part of the lot was filled. It may be that this lot has sufficient dimensions; that for present purposes it would not be necessary to utilize that part of the lot through which these sewer runs; but unquestionably as needs shall require, and as the country and the future of this city, the grade and the use of that lot will be needed for public building purposes.

Another objection that I have to the lot is that beyond a peradventure in the immediate future and I am informed that if it had not been for the financial depression and trouble of the last year the fact already would have been accomplished, the Baltimore and Ohio road will combine its two branches, the one known as the Metropolitan branch, running along B street, I think, and the other, the main branch, running along Delaware avenue, and have an elevated road running into a new depot, perhaps located where the present one stands. The Mahone lot would, by that process, be cut off from its proximity to a railroad.

I have felt, Mr. President, as I have frequently expressed myself on this floor, that a true economy should require that the new Printing Office should be so situated that railroad tracks could run in front of the building, the grade and the use could be carried in by rail, lessening the cost to the Government, and that the finished material which is to be distributed throughout the country by the medium of the mails should be placed upon the mail cars upon that ground, to a saving, as was estimated at one time by the Public Printer, as I recall it, of at least $150,000 per annum.

But to reach some conclusion here, to get some building secure, safe, and adequate for the purposes of the Government, I am ready to meet the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, or the majority thereof; and if the baseball lot or the Johnson lot can not be purchased by the action of Congress, then I am ready to extend the present building. It is true that no railroad can be carried there, for I do not think Congress would submit for a moment to the crossing of North Capitol street by a railway track. It is not good economy; but the necessity is so great, and I think, too, that the proposition made a few days ago by the Senator from Missouri as to the present necessities and needs of the Government in a financial way are such, that we had better perhaps catch on to that which we have rather than embark upon a new one. However, I shall continue faithfully vote persistently and always against any proposition that proposes to foist upon the Government what is known as the Mahone lot for the abundant reasons I have suggested.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, the necessity for making some provision for additional accommodations at the Government Printing Office has been perfectly well understood and recognized by this body. Eight years ago, I think, the matter was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, or brought to the attention by the Committee on Printing, of which the distinguished Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] was chairman. After a thorough examination by the Committee on Appropriations, with the full consent at that time, I understand, of the Committee on Printing, a provision was inserted in the sundry civil appropriation bill for the purchase of ground adjoining the present site. Then came the rejection of that bill. It was afterwards having no other consideration except the advancement of their personal interests, had sufficient power elsewhere to prevent such an amendment from becoming a part of the law of the land, this body, however, always inserting a provision for the purchase of property adjoining the present site.

Then came the contest which was so well described by the distinguished Senator from Nebraska, Mr. MANDERSON, as to the owner of a square or lot who desired to sell it to the Government at a high price or a fair price came forward with a proposition. The result was the appointment of a commission, and finally the rejection of their report. Then came a resubmission of the question to the Committee on Printing, who finally recommended the Johnson lot. In that report, while concurring in the general policy of the measure, as mentioned in the statement of the Senator, they consented to it in their judgment and I so stated to the Senate—the only business way to adjust the matter in the interest of the Government and in the interest of economy and with a view to the speedy relief of the people who are employed in the present old dilapidated building, is to acquire a sufficient quantity of ground adjoining it and put up a wing there, and then tear down the old H street side.

After the examination of this question, looking at it and coming to a conclusion as I would in my own case if the property belonged to me, I assert, without the fear of contradiction, that there is not a business man in this body or out of it who, if he owned that property, equipped as it is now, would hesitate one moment as to the course he would pursue, and that would be to acquire a small slip of ground by the side of the present building, to change the structure of the building, and to transfer to it from the old building the operatives and the machinery, and the machinery would then be right by the side of the present engine which drives it all. The plan is to simply attach that machinery and go on with the work. That would be more economical and more speedy, and it is the only feasible way by which we can, within the next two years, relieve the people who are here and the people who are to be put there. The requirement of a new square and the construction of a new building involve an expenditure of $2,000,000 and three and a half years of time.

Mr. GEORGE. What would be the cost?

Mr. GORMAN. One hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, and the expenditures to be made for a wing, which would at once relieve the congestion, would not exceed three or four hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. VEST. If the Senator from Maryland will permit me, I will state that the bill reported by the committee requires an appropriation of only $51,000 by utilizing or making available the $250,000 we have already appropriated for a site. One hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars of that $321,000 would be used for a site and the balance in the construction of a building which would be ready to occupy in the next year.

Mr. GEORGE. How much of the old building can be utilized?

Mr. GORMAN. More than one half of it.

Mr. VEST. Yes, quite one-half of it.

Mr. CULLOM. Permanently.

Mr. GORMAN. Permanently. The portion of the building that fronts on H street was constructed by Mr. Cornelius Wendell, who had a contract for the public printing away back in the '50s. It was afterwards bought by the Government. We have added to it more than one-half of the present area of the building, which was constructed under the direction of the Architect of the Capitol. That portion of the building is good. A great part of it is fireproof and can be utilized.

Now, the Senate having three times, I remember, after mature deliberation, in the past eight years, inserted in appropriation bills the provision for doing precisely what the bill now before us requires, the acquisition of this additional property, and in view of the late disaster which occurred at Ford's Theater, and having myself frequently made personal examination of this building, feeling for the past eight years that it is an outrage to keep those people in a place which is liable to fall down and whose case in a fire their lives would be absolutely in jeopardy, something should be done and done speedily.

I went again after the Ford Theater disaster, to look at this matter as it then stood, and then of the Committee on Printing, having succeeded in distinguishing it from the House bill, I then addressed a communication to the Public Printer, to ascertain what might be done to relieve those people; for the distress of mind was greater than Senators can imagine, compelled as they were for their daily support to go to work in a building where every man felt his life was in jeopardy and knew not whether he would reach his family at night. Every sensible man who examined it shared in that apprehension.

I say I addressed a communication to the Public Printer to ascertain what might be done to relieve them; what temporary arrangement could be made even to transfer them from the building and secure another, relying upon Congress to make an appropriation to meet such an expenditure, and also to see what could be done in the way of permanent relief. The Public Printer had expressed heretofore views as to the desirability of a new Government Printing Office building, a grand establishment of fine proportions and architectural beauty. He looked forward, as it was natural at that time, to acquiring a square where all the conditions could be utilized and such a building could be erected; but as a practical, sensible man, with a great responsibility upon him, with a perfect knowledge of the insecurity of the present building, with a desire to relieve those people at once, he merited his views, and said the only thing that can be done to give speedy relief is to acquire this property as proposed by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. GEORGE. How long would it take to erect a wing which would relieve the old building?

Mr. GORMAN. If you acquire the property proposed by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, within a year and a half we can have the wing erected and the relief furnished. Then the old part, that is about to fall down, on H street, can be abandoned and torn down and a new structure built at the convenience of Congress.

Mr. President, I am thoroughly satisfied that no other provision can be made, as was so well stated by the Senator from Missouri when he addressed the Senate on a previous occasion, in the present condition of our finances. We know perfectly well that it will not be feasible to enter upon the construction of a building that is to cost $2,000,000 at this time. But there is a condition which confronts us and has confronted us, that is greater and more serious even than this, and that is the unenviable struggle of every man who has a lot for sale in the District who has been pressing Congress to do something in action upon a measure of this importance, simply because his interests were not subserved, each striking at the other and all uniting to prevent this relief, which ought to come speedily without regard to the desire of any man, no matter how high or how low he may be, who wants to make money out of the transaction. Both Halls of Congress have been plying with these people. It is almost a natural probability that they should do it; indeed I think it is the custom, and I do not object to it. They have been begging members of this body and the other to favor this project and that.

Mr. President, the time has come now to act; and I hope the Senate, and I trust Congress, in the interest of humanity, in the interest of the people who are compelled to labor daily in this great office, who can not afford to surrender their little places, who for once say to the people who desire to sell property, "This is no time to favor your interests." This is a measure agreed upon, after due consideration by two great committees of the body, which rises above that consideration and becomes an act of humanity. Yes, sir; it is a public duty. In view of what has occurred and in view of what every Senator who has examined the question officially has stated to the Senate, there is nothing else to be done if you intend to give relief to these people.

As I said a moment ago, I united with the Committee on Printing when it was thought that the sense of the Senate was that a new lot should be taken, and I at that time dissented from each purchase. So I repeat to the Senate as a Senator, as a member of the Committee on Printing, whose duty it is to inquire into the affairs of the Government Printing Office, the recommendation of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to acquire this site adjoining the present site and upon that to erect an addition is the only feasible thing that can be done; and I assert again, and desire to impress upon the Senate the assertion, I venture that no man who owns a printing establishment in the United States, or who is engaged in a public enterprise of any sort, who had the waters of his own private affair, would hesitate for a moment about what should be done in the case of such a building, and to afford facilities for the next twenty or thirty years, and in view of the cost of the work.

All of those considerations point inevitably to the report made by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds; and I therefore appeal to Senators to dispose of this matter as they would dispose of any personal private business enterprise, to dispose of it in the interest of the people who are now compelled to go into an unsafe building, and at the same time to give the Government an establishment which will answer its purposes for fifty years hence, and at a cost one third only of that which is proposed by the amendments which are presented to us.

Mr. CAREY. Mr. President, it is somewhat interesting to hear the reasons given for buying a piece of land near the present site. The argument of economy may be very good unless you strip it of the surrounding circumstances. Now, it is proposed to buy 32,000 feet at the present site of the Public Printing Office, and give how much for it? I have found, four times five thousand dollars. You can buy the Mahone lot, nearly three times as much, for $240,000; you can buy the Duddington property for $200,000, or you can buy for $100,000 twice as much land as you get up at the old Printing Office.

It was sorry that the chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds did not state that the other House were just as much opposed to the present site as they are opposed to these other sites. The plan seems to be to get the matter out of both Houses of Congress and into a conference committee, so that the lot near the Baltimore and Ohio depot can be purchased.

I think a question that was asked by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMICHAEL] is a very important one, whether it is wise to build a manufacturing building high in the air; whether it is not better to build a low building, or a number of low buildings, so far as the convenience and the comfort and the safety of the employes are concerned.

We do not want a building to cost two or three million dollars. There is not a manufacturer in the United States who would not go to work and within nine or twelve months, at a cost of three or four hundred thousand dollars, erect a building well adapted to do such business as is to be done in this building, and build it substantially, and build it in every way adapted to this kind of work.

I can only repeat what I said a few days ago, that before you can clear off the buildings surrounding the Public Printing Office, by purchase and by condemnation, you can take any one of these three or four large blocks of land and erect a building upon it to accommodate the employees of the Printing Office, where they will be in absolute safety, and where the entire cost of ground and building will not exceed the cost of the proposed addition at the present site if you value the Government Printing Office site on the same basis, which is $2 a foot.

If it is a question of economy, then buy one of these large lots; if it is a matter of convenience for the employees of this Government, take one of these large lots of ground; if you are looking forward to the future, then buy a large lot of ground where you will have an opportunity not only to erect a large building for to-day, but to erect large buildings for the future.

I acknowledge that there is a great deal of solicitation on the part of the persons who have ground to sell in this city. It is but natural that those who have large holdings of real estate should desire to unload it at fair prices, but it is not dishonorable at all for one who owns property to want to sell it; it is not dishonorable for a person who has property to offer it to the Government. The question for us to decide is what is best for the Government of the United States, which we are supposed to represent.

I wish to call attention in brief to what figures we have. The baseball lot will cost $240,000, containing 32,000 feet, which is said to be well adapted for this purpose. The Mahone lot contains 213,815 feet, which can be purchased for $1.17 per foot, and will cost $275,000. The Duddington lot, which has 211,000 feet, can be purchased at 97 cents a foot, and will cost $200,000. The block near the Baltimore and Ohio station, where only 99,400 feet can be obtained, will cost $300,000. A statement has already been made with reference to the land adjoining the present site of the Government Printing Office.

This is all I have to say. The few facts which I have stated should, I think, govern in the disposition of the pending bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PAULKNER in the chair). The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY].

Mr. CAREY. I understand the question is first on the amendment in reference to the Mahone lot, which I offered on behalf of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. Then my amendment will be next in order.

Mr. VEST. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wyoming on behalf of the Senator from Pennsylvania to purchase the Mahone lot.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on that amendment.

Mr. CAREY and Mr. DOLPH called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CALL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote.

Mr. QUAY (when Mr. CAMERON's name was called). On this question my colleague [Mr. CAMERON] is paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN].

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL]. I do not know how he would vote on this question, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote. I should vote "yea," if I were not paired.

Mr. MILLAR (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER]; but he told me when leaving the Chamber that he was in favor of the bill and against the pending amendment. I am also in favor of the bill, and a pair for the Senator from New Hampshire has been arranged with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. I vote "nay."

Mr. MITCHELL (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER]. If he were here, I should vote "yea" and he would vote "nay."

Mr. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. PASCH (when his name was called). On this vote I am paired with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. PALMER]. If he were present, I understand he would vote "yea." I should vote "nay."

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to know if the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CAMDEN] has voted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The junior Senator from West Virginia has not voted.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I am paired with that Senator, and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. SHOUP (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. I am informed by his colleague [Mr. PERKINS] that if present he would vote "yea." I therefore vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MANDERSON. I desire to announce a pair between the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. The Senator from Vermont, if present, would vote "nay" on this proposition, and the Senator from Idaho would vote "yea."

Mr. McMILLAN. I transfer the pair I have with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE] to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BEYER], and vote "yea."

Mr. BEERY. I have arranged a pair between my colleague [Mr. JONES of Arkansas] and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON], which will enable the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. McLAURIN] to vote, and my colleague will stand paired with the Senator from Rhode Island. If present, my colleague would vote "nay."

Mr. HUNTON (after having voted in the negative). When my name was called, I voted "nay." I have since decided the absence of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], with whom I have a general pair, and who, I am informed, would vote "yea," if present. I therefore desire to withdraw my vote.

Mr. POWER. Has the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY] voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana has not voted.

Mr. POWER. I am paired with that Senator, and withhold my vote.

Mr. WILSON. I have a general pair with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUHITT], but I will transfer that pair to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. WILSON. I am informed that a pair with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] had been announced before I made my announcement. I therefore withdraw my vote.

Mr. CALL. I understood a pair was announced by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. That being so, I shall withdraw.

Mr. MANDERSON. I will state that I announced, at the request of the Senator from Vermont, a pair between him and the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CALL. Then I shall vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. VEST. I have not given myself any trouble about the matter, but I understood that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COLQUHITT] was paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS]. The Senator from Georgia spoke to me about the matter and told me to pair him, but on inquiry of his colleague [Mr. GORDON], he told me that the Senator from Georgia was paired with the Senator from Idaho. I have not been around myself to see the Senator.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I will state that the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] has a general pair with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH]. He did not leave any word when he went away to vote on this question. I was requested to pair him in favor of the Mahone amendment, and it was so arranged.

Mr. MANDERSON. I desire very much that this matter may be understood. My action in announcing the pair between the Senator from Vermont and the Senator from Idaho was simply at the request of the Senator from Vermont, who was taking his luncheon at the time, and who had been requested by some one on the floor, as he told me, to so pair him.

Mr. PROCTOR entered the Chamber.

Mr. HARRIS. I will say to the Senator from Nebraska that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] is now in the Chamber, and he may be able to solve the difficulty.

Mr. MANDERSON. I desire to state in the hearing of the Senator from Nebraska that I have been requested by him, but it appears that the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] had already been paired.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. The Senator from Idaho has a general pair with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. MANDERSON. So the Senator from Vermont is at liberty to vote.

Mr. HARRIS (after having voted in the negative). I desire to change my vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. POWER. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY] to the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE], so that I may vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. VEST. Has not a pair already been announced with the Senator from California?

Mr. POWER. I understand not.

Mr. VEST. I have given that I am content to the pairs on this matter, but I heard the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHOUP] announce that he was paired with the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. STEWART. The Senator from Idaho announced that he and the Senator from California were on the same side, and consequently he would vote. He had been paired, but there is no pair on this vote. This leaves the Senator from California unpaired.

Mr. VEST. Who is authorized to announce that the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] would vote in favor of the pending amendment?

Mr. DOLPH and others. His colleague.

Mr. VEST. There is something strange about this matter. The Senator from California, in conversation with me, stated that he was in favor of the bill.

Mr. DOLPH. I would suggest that if the pairs be stated before the result is announced it may save trouble hereafter.

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 22, as follows:

Mr. DALZELL. This bill is almost identical in terms with a House bill which has been favorably reported. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the Senate bill.

It was read, as follows:
Be it enacted, etc., That the Glenwood Highway Bridge Company, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, its successors and assigns, be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge over the Monongahela River, from a point on the north shore of said Monongahela River at or near where Second avenue in the Twenty-third ward of the city of Pittsburgh is crossed by the Pittsburgh and Connellsville Railroad, to a point directly across said river, on the south shore thereof, above said feet, more or less, below the mouth of Streets Run and above the foundation of the old coal tipples at Hays Station, all within the county of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania. That said Glenwood Highway Bridge Company shall not commence the construction of its bridge, bridge piers, abutments, causeway, and other works over or in said Monongahela River until the location and plan of the same shall have been submitted to and approved by the Secretary of War.

Sec. 2. That any bridge authorized to be constructed under this act shall be built and located under and subject to such regulations for the security of the navigation of said river as the Secretary of War shall prescribe; and to secure that object the said company or corporation shall submit to the Secretary of War, for his examination and approval, a design and drawing of the bridge and a map of the location, giving for the space of one-half mile above and one-half mile below the proposed location the high and low water lines upon the banks of the river, the direction and strength of the currents at low and at high water, with the soundings accurately showing the bed of the river, and the location of any other bridge or bridges, such map to be sufficiently in detail to enable the Secretary of War to judge of the proper location of said bridge, and shall furnish such other information as may be required for a full and satisfactory understanding of the subject; and until the said plan and location of the bridge are approved by the Secretary of War the bridge shall not be commenced or built; and should any change be made in the plans of said bridge during the progress of its construction, such changes shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of War. Provided, That the channel span of said bridge shall be not less than 500 feet in length in the clear, and the height of the superstructure shall not be less than 55 feet above the level of the water at pool-full in said river.

Sec. 3. That said bridge herein authorized to be constructed shall be so kept and managed at all times as to afford proper means and ways for the passage of vessels, barges, or rafts both by day and by night, and there shall be displayed on said bridge, at the corners thereof, from sunset to sunrise, such lights and other signals as the Light-House Board may prescribe; and such changes shall be made from time to time in the structure of said bridge as the Secretary of War may direct, at the expense of said bridge company, in order the more effectually to preserve the free navigation of said river.

Sec. 4. That this act shall be null and void if actual construction of the bridge herein authorized be not commenced within one year and completed within three years from the date of the approving this act.

Sec. 5. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

INSIGNIA OF THE RED CROSS.

Mr. COGSWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 5580) to protect the insignia and the name of the Red Cross.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. COGSWELL] asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill which the Clerk will report, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection to its consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas, on the 24th of August, 1864, at Geneva, Switzerland, plenipotentiaries respectively representing Italy, Baden, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, France, Prussia, Saxony, and the United States, and the federal council of Switzerland, agreed upon ten articles of a treaty or convention for the purpose of mitigating the evils inseparable from war; of suppressing the needless severity, and ameliorating the condition of soldiers wounded on the field of battle; and particularly providing, among other things in effect, that persons employed in hospitals, and in affording relief to the sick and wounded, and supplies for this purpose, shall be deemed neutral and entitled to protection; and that a distinctive and uniform flag shall be adopted for hospitals and ambulances, and convoys of sick and wounded, and an arm badge for individuals neutralized; and

Whereas said treaty has been ratified by all of said nations, and by others subsequently, to the number of thirty-six or more, including the United States;

Whereas article 7 of said treaty specifies the adoption and use of a special insignia, which shall be the distinctive sign of the Red Cross alone, under which insignia and for the purpose of the said treaty, shall be carried into effect, the same being a red Greek cross on a white ground, and which shall constitute the military hospital flag of all the nations within the treaty and under which all persons serving under the said nations shall be entitled to be used throughout the world; and

Whereas the unauthorized use of said insignia in all countries within the treaty has become a source of embarrassment and serious danger to the military and naval sanitary service of the country in time of war; and

Whereas intricate and perplexing complications arise by the indiscriminate unauthorized use of the Red Cross in calamities and catastrophes in time of peace; and

Whereas all nations most interested in the development of this treaty and its humane and provident work have already taken action to forbid the unauthorized use of its name and insignia; and

Whereas, from the international character of the treaty, it becomes necessary that there be in every nation under the treaty one body or organization in which the power to regulate the use and protect the rights of the said name and of the Red Cross shall rest, and that power be established by custom in every nation under the name and known as the central committee of that country, and through which body alone the international relations and communications with that government. Now, therefore, for the purpose of extending the same protection to this international and universal insignia in the United States of America that is extended to it by other nations;

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act it shall be unlawful, except as hereafter described, for any person or association of persons within the jurisdiction of the United States of America, to give, sell, distribute, or display the symbol of the Red Cross, or emblem designated, or any colorable imitation of semblance thereof, or to assume or use the said emblem or mark, or as a designation, or a part of a designation, the words "Red Cross," or any expression liable to be mistaken for the words "Red Cross," or any expression liable to be mistaken for the words "Red Cross," or any person not directly connected with the American National Red Cross or with the said permission granted by the central committee of the Red Cross is hereby forbidden and prohibited from wearing, using, or in any way displaying the sign of the Red Cross, hereinbefore described, or in anything liable to be mistaken for such name and insignia, and every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished for each and every offense by a fine of not less than $50 or more than $500, or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment; the fine so collected shall be paid to the American National Red Cross, to be used by it as it shall consider the best interests of said organization; and all persons who have adopted or are using the Red Cross as a trade-mark, shall, within one year after the passage of this act, discontinue the use of the same or be liable to a fine of not less than $500 or more than $500 and costs, and to the forfeiture of whatever description, unless the central committee of the American National Red Cross gives them special written permission to do so, for which privilege a certificate of not less than $500 shall be paid to the said committee; and any collection of merchandise, etc., shall be turned over to the American National Red Cross, to be used as it considers appropriate. Any person or association not directly connected with the American National Red Cross making or attempting to make collections of money or goods for or in the name of the Red Cross shall be liable to a fine of not less than five or more than one hundred dollars, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year: Provided, however, That this section shall not be held to apply first, to the officers or agents of the United States of America especially authorized by law to use the same and such officers and agents of the said organization as may be designated to aid in the work for which such organization was incorporated under the Government of the United States; and second, to the agents of any Red Cross association of any foreign state acting with the knowledge and consent of the government thereof. That this section shall not apply to the members of the Knights of the Templar, Masons, or the badge of the Sixth Corps of the Army, who adopted a red cross insignia prior to the 24th day of August, 1864.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. COGSWELL] for the present consideration of this bill?

Conferees on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the statement of the committee of conference.

The statement was read, as follows:

STATEMENT.

The Senate concurrent resolution provided that there be printed 6,000 copies of all papers and messages sent to Congress by the President since January 1, 1883, relating to Hawaiian affairs, the arranging and printing to be done under direction of the Committee on Foreign Relations of Senate. The House amended said resolution by striking out "Committee on Foreign Affairs" and inserting "Secretary of State." The Senate disagreed to this House amendment. The conferees have agreed, and recommend that the House recede from its amendment and agree to the Senate resolution providing that the work be done under directions of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the report of the committee of conference.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. I would like to have some explanation of the matter.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The statement which has just been read is as explicit as I could make it. The concurrent resolution of the Senate provided for the printing of these messages and directed that it be done under the direction and control of the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs. The House in considering the resolution struck out so much as provided that it should be done under the direction of that committee, and provided that it should be done under the direction of the Secretary of State.

The Senate would not agree to that amendment of the House, and the conferees met and learned that they already had the work done. It has been carefully prepared, as we are informed, by the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, and is ready to be printed. They are content with the matter as it has been arranged by that committee, and inasmuch as it was all ready for printing, the House conferees agreed that the House should re-

DONATION LAND CLAIMS.

Mr. DOLPH. Yesterday morning I reported from the Committee on Public Lands House bill No. 69, which is purely a local matter, and I ask unanimous consent that it may be considered now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be announced by title. The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 69) prescribing limitations of

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read at length for information.

Mr. DOLPH. As the bill is reported with an amendment in the nature of a substitute, striking out all after the enacting clause, I ask that the amendment simply may be read, which is the bill to be acted upon.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. The committee on Public Lands report to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill, and to insert:

That in all cases in which persons under the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to locate and settle surveyors-general of the public lands in Oregon, and to provide for the surveyors to make donations of certain of the public lands," approved September 27, 1850, or the laws amendatory and supplementary thereto, have acquired title to settlement of lands from the United States, Washington, or Idaho, and have not yet executed and filed the proper land office proof of their continued residence on and cultivation of the lands so settled upon and claimed, and have not filed their final proof, such claimants shall have, and they are hereby given, until the 1st day of January, 1880, the right to make and file their own proof, and fully establish their rights to donations of lands under the act of Congress, and so longer, and all claimants who shall fail to make and file their proof and perfect their claims to land, as donations under the act of Congress, on or before the 1st day of January, 1880, shall thereupon be held to have forfeited their claims to the lands in question in their respective States. That as soon as practicable after the passage of this act, all individuals, who have been named in the original entries, or in any subsequent grants, where their names and residences are known, or can be ascertained, shall be notified by the register and receiver of the local land office, by mail, at least one week for four consecutive weeks in advance, to cause a proper general declaration to be published in their local newspapers, in which they shall declare their claims to the lands, and all persons making claim to such donation claims, describing such claims, to appear and make final proof for such claims within the time herein provided, and the time for doing so, and that if such declaration should be made, and such claimant should fail to make such declaration, should be restored to the public domain and shall be subject to disposal under the then existing laws governing the disposition of the public lands. Provided, That where any such donation claimant, or any part thereof are claimed by descent, devise, judicial sale, grant or conveyance, in good faith under the original claimant, and are at the date of this act, and for twenty years prior thereto have lived in the United States, and their claims, such heirs, devisees, grantees, or purchasers, or those under whom they claim, such heirs, devisees, grantees, or purchasers, have been in possession of the land so claimed, and such persons, or those under whom they claim, shall be entitled to patents for the land so claimed and occupied by them. Provided further, That where any portion of any such abandoned donation claimant's claim, or any part thereof, has been acquired by a bona fide residence by such settler where final proof shall not be made by the original claimant, such settler has acquired title to, and a hereditament right, such settler may, within ninety days from the 1st day of January, 1880, with the register of the land office of the district within which the lands are situated, file his claim, and establish his title, and if he does so, and establishes his title, the facts of his bona fide settlement, occupancy, and improvement of said lands and pay to the receiver of the public land office $1.25 per acre for the land so settled upon, occupied, and improved not exceeding 160 acres, and shall thereupon receive a patent therefor.

SEC. 3. That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to deprive the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under the regulations governing entries, in final cases, or his right to allow or direct the surveyors to file final proof of a donation claimant, who has assumed the lands claimed in the public domain, or at the Commission, when it is proven that such a claimant has failed to comply with the provisions of the act of Congress, or that he has abandoned the lands as a part of the public domain; but if it is proven that such settler has acquired title to the land so claimed, and such persons, or those under whom they claim, shall be entitled to patents for the land so claimed and occupied by them. Provided further, That where any portion of any such abandoned donation claimant's claim, or any part thereof, has been acquired by a bona fide residence by such settler where final proof shall not be made by the original claimant, such settler has acquired title to, and a hereditament right, such settler may, within ninety days from the 1st day of January, 1880, with the register of the land office of the district within which the lands are situated, file his claim, and establish his title, and if he does so, and establishes his title, the facts of his bona fide settlement, occupancy, and improvement of said lands and pay to the receiver of the public land office $1.25 per acre for the land so settled upon, occupied, and improved not exceeding 160 acres, and shall thereupon receive a patent therefor.

SEC. 4. That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to deprive the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under the regulations governing entries, in final cases, or his right to allow or direct the surveyors to file final proof of a donation claimant, who has assumed the lands claimed in the public domain, or at the Commission, when it is proven that such a claimant has failed to comply with the provisions of the act of Congress, or that he has abandoned the lands as a part of the public domain; but if it is proven that such settler has acquired title to the land so claimed, and such persons, or those under whom they claim, shall be entitled to patents for the land so claimed and occupied by them. Provided further, That where any portion of any such abandoned donation claimant's claim, or any part thereof, has been acquired by a bona fide residence by such settler where final proof shall not be made by the original claimant, such settler has acquired title to, and a hereditament right, such settler may, within ninety days from the 1st day of January, 1880, with the register of the land office of the district within which the lands are situated, file his claim, and establish his title, and if he does so, and establishes his title, the facts of his bona fide settlement, occupancy, and improvement of said lands and pay to the receiver of the public land office $1.25 per acre for the land so settled upon, occupied, and improved not exceeding 160 acres, and shall thereupon receive a patent therefor.

Before the reading of the amendment was concluded,

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, how is the bill now before the Senate?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH] asks the unanimous consent of the Senate for the present consideration of the bill, and the bill is being read for information.

Mr. TURPIE. I object. I object to the further reading.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOLPH. I desire unanimous consent to say to the Senator from Indiana that it is purely a local measure, and it is required by the Land Office to wind up some old claims that were settled on forty years ago. It is nothing of general interest.

Mr. TURPIE. The bill is exclusively brought to go before the Senate, and being here in the Senate, it has no privilege to be made special or to take the place of the unfinished business.

Mr. DOLPH. I can not hear a word the Senator says.

Mr. TURPIE. I object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOLPH. The bill being objected to, I move that the Senate proceed to its consideration. It is merely a local matter and the amendment has been half read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Oregon, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Public Lands, which has been read.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was then ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, I do not think anything but a perusal of this bill is necessary to show the objections to it upon its face. The fourth section relates wholly to the disposition of land right of entry under the entry laws of the United States.

It proposes to make adverse possession and to make the proofs of adverse possession under the act conclusive evidence in the issuing of patents.

All entries made under the land laws of the United States are presumed to be lawful entries. If they are not lawful, then the question of their legality is one for the courts and not for this body to admit that it would be a great deal more expedient and much easier to get a majority vote here on the trial of land cases than to take them into the courts of the States where the lands are situated and try them there; but I do not think such is the theory of our Government. We have all along insisted on the division of the Government into different departments, the executive, the legislative, and the judicial. The legislative decides no case; it determines no rights; it does not perform, and shall not perform, any of the duties of the executive.

The principal section of the bill converts this Senate into a court for the purpose of trying and determining ejectment cases and for the purpose of quieting title.

I take it that there can be no consideration and has been no such consideration of this bill and no evidence in relation to the facts to be determined in it submitted here upon which the Senate could properly base a decision. The bill is purely local and estate. That is the reason I think the interest, as the Senator from Oregon says, in this bill is purely local. As I remarked, it is exclusively local; it does not belong to the Congress of the United States at all; it belongs to the courts and the juries of the States of Oregon, Idaho, and others which are recited in this bill, to determine the questions apparent in it upon the principal points.

I hope, therefore, the bill will not pass.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH], the Senator from Florida [Mr. PASCOR], and the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] were the subcommittee having charge of this bill.

Mr. DOLPH. Mr. President—

Mr. BERRY. I see the Senator from Oregon is present, and I wish the floor to claim to explain the provisions of the bill.

Mr. DOLPH. Mr. President, this bill is to carry out the recommendations of the Land Department of the Government. It relates only to claims which were taken up forty years ago and segregated from the public domain, and affects not a foot of the public domain aside from these claims.

The principal object of the bill is to get rid of abandoned claims, that is of claims of twenty years where the donation act of September 27, 1850, went upon land in Oregon and gave notice of settlement, and then failed to make their final proof of four years residence and cultivation, which is required by the act. The main object of the bill is to get rid of those claims and have them declared abandoned, so that the land will be restored to the public domain and made subject to settlement. All the other provisions of the bill are to provide a means by which the original claimant who has neglected to make his final proof, as the original law provided no time in which that should be done. So here is a provision that after notice all these claims shall be declared abandoned and restored to the public domain, that is providing the final proof is not made within the time named in the bill.

Then follows a provision that if a man has resided upon and held the floor to claim to explain the provisions of the bill, and under a judicial sale or deed from the original claimant, who may now be in his grave, shows a chain of title from the original donation claimant, he may show these facts in lieu of the special proof that the original claimant resided four years upon the land. This provision applies only to the case of a cultivated farm now worth probably from $10 to $40 an acre; and there is

Mr. GEORGE. Has the Interior Department recognized the boundaries fixed by that survey from that time up to the present?

Mr. TELLER. It has, unquestionably. The survey was approved; there is no question about it. It is entered upon the records of the Land Office, and it there is recognized as if a patent had been issued. I am, so far as the boundaries are concerned, and that was the land the claimant claimed was granted to Gomez by his grant.

Mr. President, I wish for a moment to get back to section 2. In addition to what has been read is a provision that the court may inquire into the issue of a patent. If at the time Mr. McGarrahan had known the fact, which I do not know that anybody will deny, that President Lincoln had signed the patent, and had gone to the Land Office and asked for it, he would have got it. There would have ended all controversy, and the case would have been forever settled. Whether President Lincoln did sign a patent or not has been a disputed question. There can really be no question of the fact. Mr. Caleb Smith left on record the fact that the patent was to issue; that the case had reached a point where it was determined that McGarrahan was entitled to the patent. The order was made, and it is in writing on the record. Mr. John P. Usher, afterwards Secretary of the Interior, testified before a committee of the House that the patent did issue. Mr. Beard, a clerk in the office, testified that it was understood before the patent had issued. Mr. Stoddard, who was the clerk who signed the patent, testified that he did so sign. The Supreme Court, in the only case where the patent was ever brought into controversy, admitted that the patent had been signed by the President of the United States, but declared it had not been countersigned by Mr. Stoddard, and therefore because it lacked that it was not an effective and valid patent.

When the court passed upon the patent, in the case the Senator referred to, in which he said the court had decided that the patent was not valid, let us see upon what ground it did decide it. Here is the conclusion the court arrived at:

We are of the opinion that because this record does not show the patent countersigned by the recorder, it is not sufficient to prove title in the party under whom McGarrahan claims. This makes it unnecessary to consider the other questions which have been argued, and the judgment is affirmed.

Mr. DAVIS. I should like to ask the Senator if Stoddard's testimony was before the court in that case.

Mr. TELLER. I can not say whether it was or not. It was before the committee. I have the testimony here. I do not know whether it was before the court. I have not that testimony, and I can not say. At all events Mr. Stoddard signed as secretary and did not countersign as recorder. That is what the countersigning means. The court said he must have signed in two capacities. He must say I am secretary to the President to sign patents, or to prove the President's signature if the President did sign it to witness it, and then he must sign as recorder also.

Mr. HUNTON. My friend is mistaken in that respect. The recorder of the Land Office countersigned, and not the private secretary to the President.

Mr. TELLER. Whoever it was, it was not countersigned by the recorder. That is the point they make. Stoddard was the private secretary and not the recorder. So everything has been clear. It was a mere formal transaction, and if that had been a mere nothing, then of course the title would have been perfect and complete. Now, we say that that is to be gone into by the courts, because we contend, and it has always been contended by McGarrahan, that the patent was also approved by the recorder and entered upon the records of the Department.

Mr. President, if any Senator had the curiosity to go and examine this matter I think he would be willing to admit that the contention of the claimant that the record has been tampered with is a true claim. There is not any doubt whatever about that in my judgment. It is not worth while years afterwards to go into an examination of how these things were done. The testimony shows that there is a difference in two sheets of that patent, a difference in the texture of the material which ought not to have existed.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I should like to ask the Senator from Colorado how the while Secretary of the Interior, looked into that matter and found it to be as he says it now?

Mr. TELLER. As Secretary of the Interior it became my duty to pass upon this question with reference to the issuing of a patent to a claimant inside of this survey. I went into it as a great many other men have gone into it, with the belief that it was one of those old trumped-up claims. I found it was not in my province to grant relief to this claimant. I have never had since my examination a doubt about the justice of his claim. I have never had a doubt that he was a chapter connected with it the most disgraceful in the history of this or any other country. I do not for the credit of my country and its administration care about developing it and bringing it out. The Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON] yesterday touched upon it, and gave notice to the Senate when he said that thirty-five men who had held public offices and had contested this claim in their capacities as public officers, turned up as the paid officials of the New Idria Mining Company in its contest against this patent and this claim. Nothing will be gained by going into that matter and discussing it.

Mr. GEORGE. Is that settled beyond controversy?

Mr. TELLER. In my judgment it is. The question is whether there is around this case enough to make the people of the United States believe, as thousands of them do believe, that the Government of the United States has used its great power and its great influence to give to a great corporation that which belongs to an humble citizen of the United States. That is what I believe, Mr. President. All we ask now is that after a lapse of forty years that the evidence Mr. McGarrahan has accumulated from time to time at the expense of his own fortune and his health and his life shall be accepted by the court, with such weight and such value as an intelligent court would give to it, to be reviewed ultimately by the highest judicial tribunal in this country. That is all. Heretofore we provided for a judgment. In my judgment that is what we ought to have done now. I think that when the court says there is a claim, the court should render against the Government of the United States a judgment, and that it should be paid. Senators object to that, and we have omitted it from the pending bill, as we have left it so that there is no obligation on the part of the Government to pay a cent, although the fact shall be established beyond question according to the claim of the claimant.

The President of the United States vetoed the bill passed in the last Congress for the relief of Mr. McGarrahan. We have removed from the bill every objection that he mentioned in his veto message. We have guarded the bill in such a way that no harm can come to the Government of the United States. We provide that the Attorney-General shall look over the claim; we provide, also, that counsel may be employed in addition to look after the claim and to see that no hurt comes to the Government of the United States.

Mr. President, it seems to me we ought to be willing when the interest of the Government of the United States is called into question to trust our own tribunal, to trust our own Attorney-General, to trust our own agencies that we provide for the settling of these claims between individuals. Nobody doubts our power.

Mr. President, I am tempted by the fact I read out was said by a distinguished member of this body when his claim of like character was before the Senate. I read it because in my judgment it expresses exactly what ought to be the position of the Government of the United States upon such questions. I read from the speech from the Senator then representing in part the State of Florida, Mr. Jones. I adopt what I am about to read because it is better than I could say it. It was a case that was before the Senate coming from the Committee on Claims called the Warren-Mitchell claim. The Senator from Florida said:

Mr. President, I am not unimpaired of the character of the tribunal that I am addressing to-day. I am not here before a court which strains itself in a tug-of-war to measure the phraseology of a sentence in a statute. I am here before a body representing the sovereignty and the power of a great people. I am here before a body that has authority to set aside the law if the interests of justice or humanity demand it. I am not addressing myself to the creature of a statute. I am making no appeal to the Court of Claims or to any other tribunal which has no power to move or to alter the law. I find it in the authority of the written law. I am here addressing myself to the great power of the Senate, representing in part the sovereignty of the people. However there is no appeal.

This question has been argued as though it was a question of law presented to a court limited jurisdiction, bound down and tied down by the narrow and technical rules of jurisprudence. We are in no such body, sir, and this I would say to my much esteemed friend from Alabama [Mr. McCLAIN] in my judgment, the kind of a case in which it can be said that the Supreme Court has made the law on the subject, as I understand him to assert.

Mr. President, that is the character of this tribunal. We are here with ample power to do justice. We must do it in accordance with established rules of law, because there is no other method that we may be sure and certain will bring out truth. So we come here and say now, without reference to the lapse of time, without reference to what may have been done, we submit this question to our tribunals to sift it and determine and report to us what are the facts in this case. That is all this bill does.

If the Senate of the United States or if Congress is afraid thus to trust the tribunals of its own creation, in my judgment, there would hardly be much respect entertained for the court.

Mr. President, I promise the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] that I would offer an amendment, which I will now offer. I ask that it may be adopted, as it is but an enlargement of the words that are at present in the bill. In section 3, after the word "land," in line 33, he asked me to move to insert the following:

Are possessed and claimed under laws of the United States, or.

Now let the Secretary read the clause as it would read if amended.

THE SECRETARY. In section 3, line 33, after the word "land," insert:

Are possessed and claimed under laws of the United States, or.

So as to read:

To forthwith ascertain in such manner as may seem to him the most certain and expeditious ways that tracts of land are possessed and claimed under laws of the United States, or have been conveyed or disposed of by the Government to other persons, etc.

Mr. TELLER. That is for the purpose of protecting the rights of any squatter that may be upon any of this land, because, under the provisions of the bill, if the court should find that the grant was a valid grant, that Mr. McGarran is the legal successor in interest of Gomez, then the court will enter a decree, and so far it becomes final as to the land. The land is to except from it everything that has been occupied, or shall be occupied, up to the time the judgment shall be rendered.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The pending question is upon the amendment proposed yesterday by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Let the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado be adopted now.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado? The Chair hears none, and the amendment will be considered agreed to.

Mr. TELLER. Now, I want to say one word as to the amendment of the Senator from Vermont. It cuts out the real equity of the bill. It requires of this claimant proof that will be impossible for him to procure. It requires him to produce the evidence of more long time, dead, or if not dead, long since departed from the regions where he formerly found them.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Is the Senate ready for the question on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont? Mr. MORRILL. Mr. President, I hardly think there is a quorum present.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Davis,	Kyle,	Roach,
Berry,	Faulkner,	McMillan,	Shoup,
Blackburn,	Frye,	Martin,	Smith,
Brice,	George,	Mitchell, Oregon,	Squire,
Caffery,	Gorman,	Morgan,	Stewart,
Call,	Gray,	Morrill,	Stockbridge,
Campden,	Hansbrough,	Murphy,	Teller,
Cassell,	Harris,	Nease,	Turpie,
Cole,	Hawley,	Platt,	Vilas,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Power,	Washington,
Daniel,	Huntin,	Pugh,	Wilson,

Mr. HARRIS. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. BATE] is absent under the order of the Senate.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], which will be read.

THE SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend section 3 by striking out after the word "expedients," in line 14, down to the proviso beginning in line 22, in the following words:

And that the survey made by the United States surveyor-general for the State of California and approved by said surveyor-general on the 11th day of September, 1862, which survey was approved by the Secretary of the Interior [December 1, 1862], and is now on file in the General Land Office, shall be considered as forming part of the lands embraced within said boundaries.

The amendment was rejected.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL] will be read.

THE SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all of section 3 after the word "forthwith," in line 32, and insert:

Cause a survey to be made of the tract of land aforesaid, under and in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to expedite the settlement of titles to lands in the State of California," approved July 1, 1844, and upon the return and approval of such survey by him it shall be his duty to ascertain, in such manner as may seem the most certain and expeditious, what tracts of land, if any, within the boundaries so ascertained, have been conveyed and disposed of by the Government to other persons than the said William McGarran, and for the residue of said land embraced within said boundaries shall issue to the said William McGarran, as hereinafter provided.

Mr. MORRILL. I shall not call for the yeas and nays, but ask for a division. I want to see whether the United States is to have any chance at all, and if there are any friends of the United States here.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. VILAS. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BLACKBURN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. If he were present I am informed that he would vote "nay." I should vote "yea."

Mr. FAULKNER (when his name was called). On this bill I am paired with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], who, if present, would vote "nay" on the pending amendment. I should vote "yea" if at liberty to vote.

Mr. GRAY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT].

Mr. HANSBROUGH (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. PALMER]. I should vote "nay."

Mr. McLAURIN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. MORRILL (when his name was called). On the bill and amendment I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VOORHEES], and therefore I withhold my vote.

Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. McPHERSON. I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. CHANDLER. During the present week I am paired with the junior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. CAMDEN. I am paired with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW].

Mr. CHANDLER. With the consent of the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] I transfer my pair with my colleague [Mr. BATE] to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. FOXES].

Mr. HARRIS. It is perfectly agreeable to me to make the transfer.

Mr. CHANDLER. I vote "nay."

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I inquire if a quorum has voted.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. A quorum has not voted.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Then I feel at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. COCKRELL (after having voted in the affirmative). Has the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] voted?

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not know how he would vote on this question. I am paired with him and withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 1, nays 36; as follows:

YEAS—7.
Caffery,	Frye,	Pasco,	Vilas.
Dolph,	Haile,	Stewart,

Cockrell,	Irby,	Perkins,

	Jones, Nev.	Proctor,

So the amendment was rejected.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The question now is upon the amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. The amendment will be read.

THE SECRETARY. It is proposed to add at the end of section 1:

Nothing herein contained shall be construed as acknowledging any liability on the part of the United States to pay for the land, substances, and materials referred to in this section or as assuming any obligation in that behalf.

Mr. MORRILL. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Colorado why this provision should be put into the bill unless it is to lay a valid claim for the claimant hereafter to come to Congress with another claim against the United States?

Mr. GEORGE. I will answer the question propounded by the Senator from Vermont in this way: I desire to remove any shade of a doubt about the meaning of the bill. I believe that the bill means the same thing without the amendment as with it, but to remove all doubt on the subject, on consultation with some friends I offered the amendment for that purpose, so that, when the report came from the court, if it ever did, fixing the value of the land and the materials and the minerals, it could not be argued that we had by implication foreclosed the free deliberation of the Senate upon that subject, and when that question shall come, if it ever does, the Senate may be entirely free to acknowledge the liability or to refuse its acknowledgment.

Mr. TELLER. I think that is the present status of the bill. As far as I am concerned I do not object to the amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the amendment be read again.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be again read.
The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add at the end of section 4, on page 6:

But nothing herein contained shall be construed as acknowledging any liability on the part of the United States to pay for the land, substances, and materials referred to in this section, or as assuming any obligation in that behalf.

Mr. MORRILL. Here it is proposed to subject the New Idria Mining Company to an examination. It seems to me that there is no machinery provided by which the examination can be made, and if it is to be made, it is to be made to furnish a claim that may amount to $5,000,000 when it is in fact based upon a speculative claim. Instead of being established, as the Senator from Colorado stated, in 1857 it was sold out by Gomez. One half of it was given to one Mr. Ord, an attorney, for his services as attorney; and then the other half was sold out to McGarrahan for $1,100. If this provision is put in for anything at all it is put in as a basis for a claim hereafter to be presented that may amount to $5,000,000 or more. Of course nobody objects to the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLPH. I move to strike out in line 14, section 3, the words "as set forth in said expediente," and to insert in lieu thereof the words "of said grant." Let the Secretary state the amendment and then I desire to state my reasons for offering it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.
The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out in line 14, section 3, after the word "boundaries" the following:

As set forth in said expediente.

And to insert in lieu thereof:

Of said grant.

So as to read:

And when shall cause a patent to be issued therefor, to said William McGarrahan, as the successor of the said Vicente P. Gomez, or his heirs or assigns, for the land embraced within the aforesaid boundaries of said grant, etc.

Mr. DOLPH. The expediente was the application of the original grantor, or supposed grantor, for a grant. It does not follow that a grant was given him according to his application. It might be with boundaries very much less. This is a fair sample of the way the bill is drawn. It is provided that if the court finds that there was a valid grant and finds that the title to the grant has been transferred to McGarrahan, the claimant mentioned in the bill, the court shall then proceed to adjudge to him not the lands granted to him, not the lands within the boundaries of his grant, but the lands described in his application, his expediente. That is the reason why it is provided in the bill with so much care that the original expediente shall be admitted in evidence. Evidently the draftsman of the bill supposed without proof as to its genuineness. That was the first view taken by the Senator from Colorado.

But, Mr. President, as it seems this bill is to pass, I want to tell the Senate what was done by the vote just taken on the amendment of the Senator from Vermont. A court of California was imposed upon. We heard the history of it from the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS]. A confirmation of this grant was made, or an order was made, and the minutes entered. In pursuance of that fraudulent judgment a survey was made—a survey according to the boundaries of the grant as confirmed in that fraudulent judgment. But the court ascertained it had been imposed upon. The court stayed the entry of judgment. An appeal was taken from that to the Supreme Court of the United States and there the action of the court was sustained and the fraudulent judgment was set aside. But the Senate has just said that, so far as the boundaries of this grant are concerned, that judgment shall be reinstated and made in force. Under a pretense of referring to the court the validity of the title and the lands granted by it, to ascertain what lands are granted, the bill takes that question from this court and says it shall receive as conclusive a survey made in pursuance of the fraudulent grant of a district court of California, afterwards set aside and held to be fraudulent by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, there never has been any question about the expediente and the survey being absolutely the same thing, no matter what the Senator from Oregon may say.

Mr. DOLPH. But the expediente is not the grant. It is the mere application for it.

Mr. TELLER. It is the foundation for the grant, and the grant followed it.

Mr. DOLPH. Why not prove the grant?

Mr. TELLER. We do prove the grant.

Mr. DOLPH. Then why say that the expediente shall confirm the land in the application?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

Mr. DOLPH. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FAULKNER (when his name was called). I am paired on all questions upon the bill with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL].

Mr. McLAURIN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON]. I should vote "nay" if he were present.

Mr. McPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL]. If he were present I should vote "yea" and he would vote "nay."

Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. I should vote "yea" if he were here.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. McMILLAN. I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE].

Mr. HARRIS. I will announce for all that my colleague [Mr. BATE] is paired with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES]. I do not know how either Senator would vote if present.

Mr. COCKRELL. Has the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. AL- LISON] voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am paired generally with him, and not knowing how he would vote on this question, I shall not vote. I should vote "yea" if he were present.

Mr. CAMDEN. I will announce my pair with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW].

Mr. McMILLAN. Understanding that there is lack of a quorum, I will vote "yea."

Mr. McPHERSON. I will vote to make a quorum. I vote "yea."

Mr. COCKRELL. As my vote will not change the result, I will cast it. I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 11, nays 34; as follows:

YEAS—11.
Caffery,	Dolph,	McPherson,	Stewart,
Cockrell,	Frye,	Pasco,	Vilas,
Cullom,	McMillan,	Platt,

NAYS—34.
Aldrich,	Gibson,	Martin,	Smith,
Allen,	Gorman,	Mitchell, Oregon,	Squire,
Brice,	Hinsburgh,	Mitchell, Wis.	Stoolbridge,
Harris,	Morgan,	Teller,
Call,	Murphy,	Turpie,
Coke,	Norton,	White,
Davis,	Kyle,	Pugh,	Wilson.
Dubois,	Lodge,	Roach,
George,	Mundt,	Shoup,

NOT VOTING—43.

Allison,	Dixon,	Jones, Ark.	Proctor,
Bate,	Faulkner,	Johnson, Nev.	Quinn,
Blackburn,	Gallinger,	Lindsay,	Ransom,
Blair,	Gordon,	McLaurin,	Sierman,
Boies,	Gray,	Mills,	Vance,
Campden,	Hale,	Morrill,	Vest,
Cameron,	Higgins,	Palmer,	Wheeler,
Canby,	Hill,	Peffer,	White,
Chandler,	Hoar,	Reid,	Woolcott,
Daniel,	Irvine,	McMillan,

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HARRIS. This morning I asked the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] to withdraw a motion that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next. I made the request because of the consent agreement. The Senator at whose instance that agreement was made desires the matter to go over. I therefore now move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

For subject see index.

Mr. LODGE presented the petition of B. H. Welsh and 24 other citizens of Somerville, Mass., and the petition of Charles S. Gibbs and 17 other citizens of Lawrence, Mass., praying that fraternal society and college journals be admitted to the mails as second-class matter; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. COCKRELL presented resolutions adopted by Sub-Lodge No. 32, of the Brotherhood of Toolmakers and Iron Shipbuilders of America, and endorsed by the Industrial Council, of Kansas City, Mo., remonstrating against the passage of the bill pending in the House of Representatives providing for friendship. I move that the memorial be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PASCO presented the petition of B. F. Hall and 22 other orange and lemon-growers of Florida, praying that such provision be made in the pending tariff bill as will enable them to overcome the difference in the values of labor between the old country and the new, and which will preserve their industry from destruction, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. DOLPH. I have received a communication from a constituent of mine, residing at Bly, Klamath County, Oregon, inclosing a resolution favoring a reform in spelling, and for the calling of an international convention to effect that end. I do not like to introduce a bill to be printed, but I should like to have the matter go before the Committee on Education and Labor. I present the communication and accompanying resolution, and move that they be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PROCTOR presented the petition of R. M. Pratt and 29 other citizens of Dummerston, Vt., praying for the enactment of legislation to enable the States to enforce State laws regulating the sale of substitutes for dairy products; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the petition of Dr. Philip S. Wales, late medical director, United States Navy, praying that he be granted certain relief by Congress, asked to be discharged from its further consideration and that it be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs; which was agreed to.

He also, from the Joint Commission of Congress to Inquire into the Status of Laws Organizing the Executive Departments, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 831) to improve the methods of accounting in the Department of the Treasury, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report thereon, and moved that the bill and report be referred to the Committee on the Organization, Conduct, and Expenditures of the Executive Departments; which was agreed to.

Mr. BERRY. I am instructed by the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3135) granting to the University of Utah a site for the public domain, to report it back and recommend that it be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. The bill relates to a reservation which has not been abandoned and properly belongs to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Committee on Public Lands will be discharged from the further consideration of the bill, and it will be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. BERRY, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1127) for the relief of Francis M. Ten in, reported it without amendment.

Mr. ALLEN, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred an amendment submitted by himself on the 15th ultimo, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, relating to the resurvey of the lands of Grant and Hooker Counties, Nebr., reported it favorably with amendments, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed; which was agreed to.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1583) for the relief of Wesley Montgomery, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PUGH, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred an amendment submitted by Mr. KYLE on the 28th ultimo, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, asked to be discharged from its further consideration and that it be referred to the Committee on Public Lands; which was agreed to.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 680) conveying to Rafael Seguro, of Iberia Parish, La., the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to certain lands in said parish of Iberia, asked to be discharged from its further consideration and that it be referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims; which was agreed to.

He also, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 684) for the relief of the heirs of the late Mrs. Catherine P. Culver, reported it with amendments and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. DOLPH. I report, by direction of the Committee on Public Lands, the bill (S. 76) for the relief of William P. Keady, which may be indefinitely postponed, as such action has been taken in the Interior Department as renders the passage of the bill unnecessary.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. DOLPH. Also, by direction of the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 889) for the relief of William P. Keady, I report it back, and for the same reason I move that the bill be postponed indefinitely.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DUBOIS, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by him on the 28th ultimo, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, providing for an appropriation for surveys and resurveys of public lands, reported it favorably, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I am directed by the Committee on the District of Columbia to report a substitute for the bill (H. R. 3740) to amend an act entitled "An act regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors in the District of Columbia," heretofore reported from that committee and now on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be printed, under the rule.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1772) extending the time for the completion of a railroad bridge over the Columbia River at or near Vancouver, in the State of Washington, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1808) to amend the act of June 22, 1892, entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at the city of Yankton, S. Dak.," reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5041) to extend the time authorizing the St. Louis and Birmingham Railroad to build a bridge across the Tennessee River at Clifton, Tenn., reported it with an amendment.

Mr. VILLAS, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by Mr. PUGH on the 28th ultimo, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported it favorably and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed; which was agreed to.

BOOK-MAKING IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. McMILLAN. I am directed by the Committee on the District of Columbia to report an amendment in the nature of a substitute for the bill (S. 1580) more effectually suppress gambling in the District of Columbia, heretofore reported by the committee. I ask for the present consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Michigan reports an amendment, from the nature of a substitute. The proposed amendment will be read for information.

The SECRETARY. The Committee on the District of Columbia report to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and insert:

"That the provisions of the act of Congress approved the 31st day of January, 1893, entitled 'An act to more effectually suppress gambling in the District of Columbia,' and also the provisions of the act of Congress approved the 21st day of March 1891, entitled 'An act to prevent bookmaking on horse races, and to regulate the business of bookmakers in the District of Columbia,' and not apply to bookmakers who open and sell meetings at the Congress Hotel, or at any other place, and who are not organized or incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia. Provided, That such meetings shall be approved by the Council of the District of Columbia, and shall not exceed a period of seven days each. And provided further, That there shall be but one spring meeting and but one fall meeting at each of these places during one year."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Michigan asks for the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. PEPPER. I object to the consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection to the request of the Senator from Michigan.

AGRICULTURAL REPORT FOR 1893.

Mr. GORMAN. I am directed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. Res. 139) to print the Agricultural Report for 1893, to report without amendment; and I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution. It proposes to appropriate $300,000 to print 500,000 copies of the Annual Report of the Secretary of Agriculture for the year 1893; 10,000 copies for the use of the Senate, 300,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 30,000 copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. HARRIS. I should like to ask the Senator from Maryland why it is that only 10,000 copies are appropriated for the Senate and that there are 300,000 copies provided for the House of Representatives? My recollection is that with respect to the printing of documents generally, one-half of the number usually given to the other House is given to the Senate.

Mr. GORMAN. The Senator from Tennessee is quite correct in his statement as to the usual order, but in the matter of the agricultural report, after a very long controversy in both Houses in years past, this proposition was finally determined upon, and it was so laid in the printing bill which passed the Senate in the last Congress and is now pending in the other House. The joint resolution is in exact conformity with the numbers ordered printed in the last two or three years.

Mr. HARRIS. I shall raise no question in regard to the matter.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL WOOLGROWERS' ASSOCIATION.

Mr. GORMAN, from the Committee on Printing, reported the following resolution: which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That there be granted for the use of the Senate 2500 copies of Senate Miscellaneous Document No. 121, Fifty-third Congress, second session, bearing "Appeal of the National Woolgrowers' Association, etc."

Mr. GORMAN, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a concurrent resolution submitted by Mr. POWER, March 6, 1894, providing for the printing of 500 copies of Senate Miscellaneous Document No. 77, a memorial of the National Woolgrowers' Association, reported adversely thereon, and moved its indefinite postponement; which was agreed to.

Mr. GORMAN. I present reports to accompany the joint resolution and the resolution just pass d, and ask that they be printed in the usual form.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 1817) providing for an international humane conference; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. CULLOM. The bill is accompanied by a number of petitions of boards of trades in its behalf. I introduce the bill without knowing whether it is right in every particular, and therefore do not care to be entirely responsible for it. I move that the bill, with the accompanying papers, be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PLATT introduced a bill (S. 1818) to increase the pension of Caroline B. Andrews; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. MITCHELL, by request, introduced a bill (S. 1819) to incorporate the American College of Musicians; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. QUAY introduced a bill (S. 1816) to establish a department of public health; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. GRAY. I ask that the bill, with the accompanying papers, be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HARRIS. It is a bill proposing to create a department of public health. Every bill or petition upon that general subject since the winter of 1875-76 has been referred to the Committee on Epidemic Diseases, and I move that this bill take the same direction. That is the committee which has had jurisdiction of the subject-matter for a number of years, and there is no other committee of the body which can legitimately take charge of the bill.

Mr. GRAY. I wish merely to state my reasons for asking the reference of the bill to the Committee on the Judiciary. I, of course, know there is such a standing committee as the Committee on Epidemic Diseases, and certainly intended no disrespect to that committee, but it occurred to me and to those who are interested in the bill, that inasmuch as it has no reference to any of those pests which are generally supposed to occupy the attention of that committee, and does contemplate the creation of a new department in the Government, to wit, a secretary of public health, making a new department, just as the Department of Agriculture, it ought to be considered gravely by the committee to which we refer all bills that propose to make any material or serious change in the organization of our Government. I introduce the bill at the request of respectable medical authorities and societies, and not as my own bill or as a small respects representing my own views; and for the reasons I have stated I think it ought to have the consideration of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator from Delaware allow me to suggest to him that there are two bills already introduced upon the same subject and for the same purpose that have gone to the Committee on Epidemic Diseases? That committee has charge of the subject-matter now by the introduction and reference of two bills during the present session of Congress.

Mr. CHANDLER. I am not now a member of the Committee on Epidemic Diseases, but I certainly think the Senator from Delaware ought to consent to leave the bill go in the first instance to that committee. If it should turn out in the consideration of the question that there are grave legal matters or matters connected with the organization of the Departments of the Government that it ought to go to the Committee on the Judiciary, I know the Senator from Tennessee well enough to believe that when he reports the bill to the Senate he will himself ask that it shall have further consideration before the Committee on the Judiciary.

If the Senator from Delaware were to introduce a bill to create a Department of Agriculture, he would not think of sending that bill in the first instance to the Committee on the Judiciary. It would necessarily first go to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry for consideration by that committee, and if it were thought advisable it could be further considered by the Committee on the Judiciary or any other committee of the body. The bill for the creation of the Department of Agriculture was considered and reported by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. If the Senator from Delaware makes objection to the reference I will move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Epidemic Diseases.

Mr. GRAY. That motion has already been made. I will state that I have no personal feeling in regard to the reference of the bill to the Committee on the Judiciary rather than the Committee on Epidemic Diseases. I am inclined to believe that the Senate is that it ought to go to the latter committee in the first instance, and therefore I will accede to the proposition made by the Senator from Tennessee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee that the bill be referred to the Committee on Epidemic Diseases? The Chair hears none, and the bill is so referred.

Mr. MCMELLAN introduced a bill (S. 1811) to provide that all persons employing female help in stores, shops, offices, or manufacturing establishments shall provide seats for the same when not actively employed; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. QUAY introduced a bill (S. 1812) granting a pension to Eliza E. Reed; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also, by request, introduced a bill (S. 1813) to authorize the Port of Philadelphia and Camden Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Delaware River, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. WOLCOTT introduced a bill (S. 1814) granting an honorable discharge to Jacob L. Neigharger; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. ALEXANDER introduced a bill (S. 1815) granting a pension to Isaac D. Gregg; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DOLPH introduced a bill (S. 1816) granting a pension to J. M. Swift; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 1817) for improving the Yamhill River; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CHANDLER introduced a bill (S. 1818) granting a pension to Julia Weeks; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PELKINS introduced a bill (S. 1819) for the relief of H. A. Eldred; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. HIGGINS introduced a bill (S. 1820) making an appropriation to complete the appraisement of improvements of intruders in the Cherokee Nation and to ascertain and adjudicate their rights therein, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. HIGGINS. I desire to say that I have not prepared the bill and do not wish to be held responsible for all its provisions. But it is a subject that needs consideration and I have consented

SENATE.

TUESDAY, April 3, 1894.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 1686) granting a pension to Margaret English; and

A bill (H. R. 4606) to amend sections 5365 and 5366 of the Revised Statutes.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 1919) authorizing the Texas and Arkansas Fort Smith Railway Company to bridge Caddo Lake at or near Mooringsport, La., and Cross Bayou, near Shreveport, La.; and it was thereupon signed by the Vice-President.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. HARRIS presented the petition of W. H. Mendow, W. P. Rogers, and 20 other citizens of Waverly, Humphreys County, Tenn., praying that building and loan associations be exempted from the operation of the proposed income tax; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I present a petition of the chiefs, headmen and members of the Yankton tribe of Sioux Indians, praying the passage of the bill affecting their treaty with the United States Government for the relinquishment of their surplus land, which I move be printed as a document to accompany the bill (S. 1535) to ratify and confirm an agreement with the Yankton tribe of Sioux or Dakota Indians in South Dakota, and to make appropriations for carrying the same into effect, which is now on the Calendar.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PETTIGREW presented a petition of citizens of Alexander, S. Dak., praying that fraternal society and other journals be admitted to the mails as second-class matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Mr. DAVIS presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of St. Paul, Minn., praying for the speedy settlement of the tariff question; which was ordered to lie on the table.

counsel of the two Governments of the United States of America and Great Britain.

"And now, a Frenchman may be permitted to use a word which his ancestors employed when they sang the lay of their great Emperor, and to say to all of you, 'Gentlemen, may you retain a kind remembrance of sweet France!'

"Lord Hannen, then addressing the president, said:

"Mr. de Courcel, on behalf of your late colleagues I have to express my great regret that the absence of the President of the French Republic and Mr. Deville from Paris prevents our waiting upon them before leaving this city, where we have been so kindly treated. We must therefore beg you, as the French member of the late Tribunal of Arbitration, to convey to the President and to the French Government the expression of our sentiments of profound gratitude for the gracious reception and generous consideration which they have extended to us. Our thanks are especially due to Mr. Besselièvre, who, so much to his own inconvenience, has provided us in this palace with so splendid a domicile, and we offer him our apologies for having so long, though involuntarily, trespassed on his kindness.

"And now, Mr. de Courcel, I have to discharge a duty which gives me peculiar satisfaction. I have to express to you our high appreciation of the manner in which you have presided over our deliberations. The public has had the opportunity of witnessing the sagacity, the learning, and the courtesy with which you have guided the proceedings during the arguments. Your colleagues only can know how greatly those qualities have assisted us in our private conferences. Let me add that our intimate relations with you have taught us to regard you with the warmest esteem and affection. Permit me to say that you have won in each of us an attached friend.

I must not conclude without an allusion to the remarkable occasion which has brought us together. We trust that the result will prove that we have taken part in a great historical transaction, fruitful in good for the world. Two great nations, in submitting their differences to arbitration, have set an example which I doubt not will be followed from time to time by others, so that the scourge of war will be more and more repressed. Few can be so sanguine as to expect that all international quarrels will be speedily settled by arbitration, instead of by the dread arbitrament of war. But each occasion on which the peaceful method is adopted will hasten the time when it will be the rule and not the exception.

"One of our poets has said that every prayer for universal peace avails to expedite its coming.

"We have done more than join in such a supplication; we may hope that we have been the humble instruments through whom an answer has been granted to that prayer which I doubt not ascended from the hearts of these two kindred nations that peace may for ever prevail between them.

"I bid you heartily farewell."

"Senator MORGAN then addressed the following remarks to express his share in the sentiments which Lord Hannen had just interpreted:

"The arbitrators on the part of the United States most sincerely unite in the very happy expressions that have fallen from Lord Hannen of grateful appreciation of the splendid hospitality of the French Government and people. We have been their guests for many months, and have been under the shelter of their laws and in the presence of their grand and beautiful civilization, and during all that time we have felt that our welcome did not cease to be cordial.

"If we should take a narrow view of the results of this arbitration, the United States would have a regret that the important judicial questions we have been considering were not stated in a broader form in the treaty upon these great powers. The opportunity was offered when the treaty was in process of formation to have presented in a more equitable light the rights of the nations to whose islands and coasts the fur seals habitually resort for places of abode and shelter in the summer season to control and protect them under the legal rules and intentions that apply universally to the animals that are classed as domestic, or domesticated animals, because of their usefulness to man.

"My colleagues and I concurred in the view that the treaty presented this subject for consideration in its broadest aspect. Our honorable colleagues, however, did not so construe the scope of the duty prescribed to the tribunal by the treaty. They considered that these questions of the right of property and protection in respect to the fur seals were to be decided upon the existing state of the law, and, finding no existing precedent in the international law they did not feel warranted in creating one. As the rights claimed by the United States could only be supported by international law in their estimation, and inasmuch as that law is silent on the subject, they felt that, under the treaty, they could find no legal foundation for the rights claimed that extended beyond the limits of the territorial jurisdiction of the United States.

"This ruling made it necessary to resort to the power conferred upon the tribunal to establish, by the authority of both Governments, regulations for the preservation and protection of the fur seals, to which the treaty relates. In this new and until a field of experiment much embarrassment was found in conflicting interests of an important character, and yet more difficulty in the uncertainty as to the facts upon which regulations could be based that would be at once just to those interests, and would afford to the fur seals proper protection and preservation.

"The United States will fully understand and appreciate those difficulties, and will accept the final award as the best possible result under existing conditions. A very large measure of protection afforded by the regulations adopted by the tribunal to the Alaskan herd of fur seals, and the virtual repression of the use of firearms in pelagic sealing is an earnest and wise guaranty that those common interests may be pursued without putting in serious peril the peace of the two countries.

"It is a pleasure to the arbitrators appointed on the part of the United States that they can bear the highest testimony to the ability, integrity, patience, industry, and judicial impartiality of their colleagues in this tribunal.

"Our labors have been arduous and protracted, but have been attended with uniform courtesy and good feeling on the part of all the members of the tribunal.

"We hope for still broader and better results from the foundations we have laid in this new field of international agreements.

"To the president of the tribunal we owe a debt that we gratefully acknowledge, that he has so patiently and with such distinguished ability discharged the difficult duties of his position.

"The agents of the respective governments have prepared, at great expense of labor and with unusual skill and industry, every available fact that would throw any light upon the matters in controversy, and the counsel have dealt with the great masses of evidence so prepared with that marked ability for which they have become renowned upon other occasions. Counselors of having done all we could to reach conclusions that are just and will be salutary, we close our labors in the hope that they will be acceptable to all nations.

"The president of the tribunal said that he cheerfully accepted the mission to transmit to the President of the French Republic and to Mr. Deville the thanks of the members of the tribunal.

"He thanked personally Lord Hannen and Senator MORGAN for the sentiments which they had expressed concerning himself."

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, the Senate will see there an expression on the part of the American arbitrators of their very high appreciation of the best and hospitality of France toward the arbitrators, the guests of that Republic. The Senate will also see the amicable spirit which characterized the close of that very protracted examination, differing somewhat in that respect from a former occasion of great magnitude in which the two Governments, the United States and Great Britain, had participated. We have had many arbitrations with Great Britain, and in most of them I believe the communities of both Governments have been practically satisfied.

What the judgment of the American people may be upon this award it is not for us to say, but it is to be said that we have been very agreeably surprised that the award has so far escaped severe criticism at the hands of publicists in the United States or among the American States or of Europe; from which I infer that it is reasonably satisfactory as a solution of the question that was committed to the tribunal.

I have ventured to put these facts upon the record to-day with a view of giving to the Senate and the people of the United States an accurate statement of the manner in which the award found its way into the possession of the respective Governments, and the conclusive effect of it, according to the treaty of the 29th of February, 1892, in being so delivered into the hands of the agents of the Governments. The award became operative instantly upon its being so delivered in all the breadth and scope in respect of which the tribunal had any authority to speak anything whatever. That award, however, contemplates some additional action by legislation, as I consider, and it seems that the Government of Great Britain has the same opinion, because I am informed that at this hour perhaps a bill similar in its substance is pending in the Parliament of Great Britain. I think when this bill is passed we shall have a very firm assurance that the award will be carried out to the satisfaction of both the great Governments, and that this long-existing and very irritating subject will have had its final solution and perfect repose. I ask that the bill be put on its passage.

The bill was passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

discharge to William B. Barnes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PERKINS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. COKE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

BERING SEA AWARD.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask that the vote be reconsidered by which an order was made yesterday to print certain papers coming from the President of the United States in regard to the Bering Sea tribunal; and I ask that the papers may be allowed to be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations without an order to print, as they have to be edited before the printing can be done.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Alabama? The Chair hears none, and it will be so ordered.

TOWN SITES IN OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I ask an order from the Senate for the Vice-President to appoint the conferees that were directed yesterday at the further conference upon the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 3606) to require railroad companies operating railroads in the Territories over a right of way granted by the Government to establish stations and depots at all town sites on the lines of said roads established by the Interior Department.

By unanimous consent the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. BERRY, Mr. BLACKBURN, and Mr. PETTIGREW were appointed.

ISSUE OF BONDS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no further morning business that order is closed and the Chair lays before the Senate a resolution of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER], coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. PEPPER March 28, 1894, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be, and it is hereby, instructed to prepare and report as soon as practicable a bill to repeal all laws authorizing or permitting the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the Government, and to prohibit any and all persons in future without express authority by act of Congress first had and obtained.

Mr. McMILLAN. Yesterday, on my request, the Senate took up the bill (S. 1630) to more effectually suppress gambling in the District of Columbia, and after the bill and the amendment reported by the committee had been read its further consideration was objected to by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. McPHERSON], and it went over until this morning. The Senator from New Jersey has withdrawn his objection, and as the bill is short and has been read I ask that it may now be considered.

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for that purpose.

BOOKMAKING IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill I have indicated.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1630) to more effectually suppress gambling in the District of Columbia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill has been read at length, and the question is on the amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia, which was read yesterday.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Hampshire rise to the amendment?

Mr. GALLINGER. No; but I desire to discuss the merits of the bill, and I can do that, perhaps, quite as well upon the question of the passage of the bill if the amendment shall be adopted.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment will be considered as agreed to.

Mr. TELLER. What is the amendment?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and insert:

That the provisions of the act of Congress approved the 31st day of January, 1885, entitled "An act to more effectually suppress gambling in the District of Columbia," and also the provisions of the act of Congress approved the 21st day of March, 1891, entitled "An act to prevent bookmaking and pool-selling in the District of Columbia," shall not apply to bookmaking at the spring and fall meetings at the Benning and Ivy City race tracks when such meetings are held by organization duly incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia. Provided, That such meetings shall be held only between the 1st day of March and the 15th day of December in any year, and shall not exceed in each year six days each. And provided further, That there shall be but one spring meeting and but one fall meeting at each of the above named tracks in any one year.

Mr. TELLER. It seems to me that amendment ought to be printed, and then we ought to have an opportunity to examine it. If the consideration of the bill can be objected to now, I shall object.

Mr. McMILLAN. The bill has been twice read, yesterday and the day before, and the amendment has been read. It is necessary for the bill to pass the House of Representatives, and if passed at all it should be done at once.

Mr. TELLER. If I understand it, the bill comes in with an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. McMILLAN. Yes; and the amendment has been printed for two days.

Mr. DOLPH. Is it a committee amendment?

Mr. McMILLAN. It is a committee amendment. The purpose of the amendment is to regulate racing in the District of Columbia, so that bookmaking will be allowed on the tracks and nowhere else, and it prohibits winter racing in the District of Columbia. The committee has carefully considered the subject, and thinks it very important that the bill should pass.

Mr. DOLPH. Do I understand the amendment which has been read is a committee amendment, to be substituted for the bill?

Mr. McMILLAN. Yes.

Mr. TELLER. I do not know much about this bill, but it seems to be an important one. I did not know of the amendment until this morning.

Mr. McMILLAN. The subject has been given a great deal of care by the committee, and they have gone over it two or three times. The committee think the bill covers the ground thoroughly.

Mr. HARRIS. I think I can make a brief statement to the Senator from Colorado that will be satisfactory to him.

Mr. TELLER. All right.

Mr. HARRIS. This bill simply authorizes racing by organized associations on the spring and fall meetings, extending beyond eighteen days, and but the two meetings annually at each of the race tracks in the District known as Benning and Ivy City. That is all of the bill except that it authorizes pool selling on the track pending the races.

Mr. TELLER. I shall withdraw my objection; for I do not know anything about the bill and will let it go.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment which has been read.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator rise to the question of concurring in the amendment?

Mr. PEPPER. I object to the amendment. I objected to the consideration of the bill in the first place, but concluded to withdraw my objection with the expectation of repeating my reasons for it when the bill should be presented to the Senate.

I am not sufficiently familiar with the nomenclature of the race track to express myself intelligently perhaps upon the bill, but as I regard it Mr. President, it proposes to divide the classes of gamblers from the operation of existing statutes relating to the general subject of gambling. That being my understanding of the object of the bill, I should not feel that I was doing my duty properly if I sat quietly by and let such a bill pass without entering my protest against it.

I do not believe that the respectability of a gambler should shield him from the due penalties of the law. The little fellow who gambles for $10 or $20 around about the hotel corridors we send to prison, we ostracise him from society, we regard him as a man not worthy to be associated with; but men who will gamble for hundreds and thousands and even for millions of dollars are esteemed honest. It seems to me that the whole country is becoming debauched with this spirit of gambling, and I simply enter my protest against the passage of a bill which in any way recognizes it.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, a few weeks ago the Committee on the District of Columbia, of which I have the honor to be a member, ordered reported a bill very similar to the bill that is now under consideration. I took exception to the report at the time and filed a minority report in behalf of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] and myself, which I shall ask to have read in a moment as part of my remarks.

I do not think that the present bill in any wise overcomes the objection I then found to the bill, but the committee acted favorably upon, and I will say that the vote in committee on the present bill, or the amendment to the bill that was then ordered to be reported, was taken at a time when I was absent from the committee by my own fault, it is true, and I had not an opportunity to enter my protest against this report when it was made.

I shall now ask that the views of the minority of the Committee on the District of Columbia be read, after which I desire to add a single word.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as indicated.

The Secretary read the views of the minority, submitted March 13, 1894, as follows:

The undersigned, a minority of the Committee on the District of Columbia, beg leave to respectfully dissent from the favorable report on the bill (S. 1868) to more effectually suppress gambling in the District of Columbia for the following reasons:

On the 31st day of January, 1883, an act was approved which provides—

"That every person who shall in the District of Columbia keep or keep open a gambling table or any house, vessel, or place on land or water for the purpose of gaming, or gambling device commonly called A. B. C. faro-bank, E. O. roulette, equality, keno, timbles, or [unclear] or any kind of gambling table or gambling device adapted, designed, or [unclear] for the purpose of playing any game of chance for money or property, or who shall induce, entice, or permit any person to bet or play at or upon any such gambling table or gambling device, or who shall [unclear] or [unclear] thereof, shall, on conviction, be a judged guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by imprisonment for a term of not more than one year, and shall be [unclear] in force, and [unclear] [unclear] much toward suppressing gambling in the District of Columbia."

On the 31st day of March, 1891, an act was approved entitled "An act to prevent bookmaking and pool-selling in the District of Columbia," the first section of which provides—

"That it shall be unlawful for any person or association of persons in the District of Washington and Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, or within said District within one mile of the boundaries of said cities, to set, make, or make book or pools on the result of any trotting race or running race of horses, or boat race of any kind, or on any election or any contest of any kind, or game of bascule."

It is claimed that the intention of the last-named act is to permit bookmaking and pool-selling on race tracks located more than one mile from the boundaries of the cities of Washington and Georgetown, and the language of the act seems to justify that construction. It did not, however, modify or repeal the act of January 31, 1883, and bookmaking and pool-selling continue to be prohibited under that act. The present bill in its amended form will modify the act in question sufficiently to permit gambling on race tracks situated one mile from the boundaries of said cities.

We are of opinion that the principle embodied in the act of January 31, 1883, is wholesome and wise, and that it is a necessary and proper remedy by crime and otherwise in all parts of the District of Columbia. The poor man who is caught at a game of policy, keno, roulette, or any other of the devices of the casino, is a victim of his own folly, and is punished severely; but in the face of that the present bill, misnamed "A bill to more effectually suppress gambling in the District of Columbia," proposes to legalize gambling on race tracks, and thus to destroy the principle of the present law, and to bring about a general license for gambling in the District of Columbia. We believe the proposed legislation is vicious in principle, and for that reason dissent from the report of the committee. We recommend that the adverse action be taken on the bill when it comes before the Senate for consideration.

J. H. GALLINGER,
REDFIELD PROCTOR.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I desire to occupy the attention of the Senate but a single moment in further opposition to the pending bill. My views are so clearly expressed in the minority report that it is unnecessary for me to add more than a single word.

We have in the District of Columbia a very strict and efficacious law against gambling. It prohibits the poor man from engaging in games of chance under very severe penalties. I have reason to believe that the law is being very successfully diminished, and that the vice of gambling is becoming more common in the District. The law applies not only to the ordinary games such as policy, and roulette, and keno, and I suppose poker (games with which other Senators are perhaps more familiar than I am, but it likewise prohibits gambling on race tracks, gambling by rich men, the society men and women, the people who stake large sums of money upon the chance of horse races, not one race in a hundred of them very likely being honest, but conducted, which encourages vice and, in my judgment, does more to sap the foundations of morality so far as this question is concerned than all the gambling that is engaged in by the poor men of this District.

It is proposed by the pending bill to name two certain associations which may for the space of thirty-six days in each year permit gambling on race tracks, and hence to that extent it is a repeal of the existing statute. I do not believe the people of the District of Columbia are prepared to encourage legislation of this kind. There has been no petition praying for this change in the law. The citizens of the District have not asked for it, and I do not believe the citizens of the District desire it. But, certain racing corporations, certain men who are interested in trials of speed, more particularly as I look upon it for the reason that it encourages what they call a good time and permits, if this legislation is enacted, gambling in its worst form, are here urging that the law shall be amended as is proposed. New Jersey has driven from its borders this class of men. Almost every State in the American Union is prohibiting this sort of thing.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Will the Senator from New Hampshire name any State in the Union of forty-four States, except New Jersey, that prohibits it?

Mr. GALLINGER. I am very clear that I could do so if I should refer to the statutes. I know that my own State prohibits it.

Mr. PLATT, And Connecticut.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think Connecticut prohibits it, and I am very sure almost all the States of the North do. New Jersey has driven from its borders this class of men. They came here a few months ago and flaunted before the citizens of the District their purpose to conduct winter racing here in violation of law. The very track they occupied is included in the bill, and it is proposed now to legalize this gambling device.

Mr. President, I believe it is vicious legislation; I believe it is wrong legislation, and I believe the Senate of the United States ought not to give it its approval. It is proposed that the races shall occur in May and December each year, which comes very near being winter racing, and that even the racing fraternity, I believe, concede ought not to be permitted. I read in the Star on evening of two ago, I think last evening, an editorial bearing on this question; and I submit that the newspapers of the District are very fair in dealing with all matters which concern the welfare of the city of Washington and the District of Columbia. The editorial to which I refer is as follows:

Members of the National Legislature who are really interested in the welfare of the District of Columbia have in some of the recent modifications of the race track bookmaking bill, aimed at by limiting the track to months suitable for racing, December is unfit; so, finally, is it wrong legislation, and I believe the Senate of the United States ought not to give it its approval. So as to make the bill read:

Recessed. The Senate meetings may be held only between the 1st day of April and 1st day of September in each year within the District of Columbia, and shall not extend to periods longer than days each.

That, I understand, would leave the present law in force against bookmaking and prohibition of gambling upon the race tracks and in connection with racing. I know of no reason why a monopoly of racing in the racing season should be conferred upon some corporations organized under the laws of this District.

Mr. BLAINE. Will the Senator from Nebraska allow me to interrupt him for a moment?

Mr. ALLEN. Certainly.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Neither of the racing associations named in the bill was organized under the laws of the District. They were chartered by act of Congress.

Mr. ALLEN. I stand corrected. I meant to say that they were chartered by act of Congress. I know of no reason why Congress should grant a monopoly of horse-racing to those associations. It strikes me that about the only thing Congress should do with reference to horse-racing is to prohibit gambling in connection with it, to prevent cruelty to the animals engaged in it, and to hedge in that kind of amusement by laws making it as harmless as possible. The amendment would leave the existing laws in force in the District so that they could be enforced against bookmaking and all species of gambling in connection with race tracks.

Mr. LODGE. I ask for the reading of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state the question. The question is upon the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. ALLEN) to the amendment agreed to as in Committee of the Whole. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the amendment so as to make the bill read:

Recessed. The Senate meetings may be held only between the 1st day of April and 1st day of September in each year within the District of Columbia, and shall not extend to periods longer than days each.

Mr. McPHERSON. I wish to inquire of the Senator from Nebraska if the amendment he proposes will leave the present law intact. I understand that the law now prohibits pool-selling anywhere in the District of Columbia, and these race tracks are located within the District.

Mr. ALLEN. That is precisely right.

Mr. McPHERSON. The amendment allows race meetings simply and purely.

Mr. ALLEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. McPHERSON. And confers upon the associations no power to sell pools or conduct book-making at the race tracks?

Mr. ALLEN. It prohibits book-making and every species of gambling in connection with racing.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska to the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. ALLEN called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. If he were present I should vote "yea" on the amendment.

Mr. SHOUP (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. QUAY. I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], who is absent.

Mr. DUBOIS. I ask if the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] has voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted; the Chair is advised.

Mr. DUBOIS. Unless his colleague [Mr. McPHERSON] can tell me how he would vote I will withhold my vote.

Mr. McPHERSON. I can not inform the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. DUBOIS. I withhold my vote.

Mr. PUGH (after having voted in the negative). I inquire if the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] has voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed that he has not voted.

Mr. PUGH. I have a standing pair with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], and as I do not know how he would vote, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. CAREY (after having voted in the affirmative). I should like to inquire whether the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. EMMY] has voted.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted; the Chair is informed.

Mr. CAREY. I ask permission to withdraw my vote. I am paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. EMMY]. The result was announced—yeas 21, nays 21; as follows:

So the bill was passed.

Mr. HARRIS. I beg the Senator from Alabama to withdraw the motion for a single moment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama insist upon his motion?

Mr. MORGAN. I do not.

Mr. ALDRICH. I did not understand what the Senator from Alabama said.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from Alabama has withdrawn the motion.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Chair asked whether the Senator from Alabama insisted upon his motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair was perhaps unable to hear the Senator from Alabama distinctly.

Mr. MORGAN. I withdrew my motion in favor of the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. HARRIS. The pending bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole and has not been read. When I asked that the formal reading be dispensed with, it was objected to. I now ask that the reading of the bill may proceed.

Mr. ALDRICH. Pending that, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HARRIS. Upon that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HALE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM].

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. HILL]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS], who is absent. I do not know how he would vote, and I do not know how I should vote if he were here.

Mr. SHOUT (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. I transfer my pair to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES], and vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CHANDLER. Upon this question I am paired with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. MURPHY].

Mr. GALLINGER. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS], whom I do not see in his seat. Hence I have not voted. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. FRYE. I am paired with the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN].

Mr. COCKRELL. I am paired generally with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], but I have paired him with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON], who is now absent, and they will stand paired. I vote "nay."

Mr. HARRIS. I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MERRILL], who I see is absent. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] announced a pair. Will it be convenient to him that we transfer our pairs and both vote?

Mr. GALLINGER. I have no objection.

Mr. HARRIS. I vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER. I vote "yea."

Mr. CALL. I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. BLACKBURN. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON]. In his absence I will transfer my pair to my colleague [Mr. LINDSAY], and vote "nay."

Mr. DANIEL. I am paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE]. If he were here, I should vote "nay." If any Senator on the other side of the Chamber wishes to transfer pairs, I shall be glad to know it.

Mr. ALDRICH. Did the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] announce that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] is paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]?

Mr. COCKRELL. I did.

Mr. ALDRICH. The junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] is paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON], and was so paired this morning. Both Senators from Iowa were paired with the Senator from Georgia this morning upon one vote.

Mr. GALLINGER. The junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] informed me to-day that he was standing pair with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON].

Mr. COCKRELL (after having voted in the negative). I was told by our friend who keeps the list of pairs that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON] was not paired with anybody, and therefore I announced the pair. I withdraw my vote.

Mr. CAREY (after having voted in the affirmative). I should like to inquire whether the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. LEBY] was voted.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted, the Chair is advised.

Mr. CAREY. I am paired with that Senator, and withdraw my vote.

Mr. McPHERSON (after having voted in the negative). I voted "nay," but I am reminded that I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS], who does not seem to be present. I wish, therefore, to withdraw my vote.

The result was announced, yeas 18; nays 18; as follows:

YEAS—18.		NAYS—18.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. No quorum has voted.

Mr. ALDRICH. No quorum appearing, I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. HARRIS. Upon that motion I ask for the yeas and nays; and I shall not take the time to suggest that I did not suppose the filibustering would commence so early.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Tennessee is out of order. I did not suppose this disorder would commence so early.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to state that debate is not in order.

Mr. ALDRICH. Debate is not in order, but the Senator from Tennessee has debated the question, and I wish to state that there is no filibustering on this side of the Chamber.

Mr. BLACKBURN. By what name do you call it?

Mr. ALDRICH. The absence of a quorum on the other side has forced the situation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island, that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was not agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the call of the roll take place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The roll will be called for the purpose of ascertaining whether a quorum is present.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Daniel,	Harris,	Perkins,
Allen,	Dolph,	Hawley,	Pettigrew,
Bate,	Hoar,	Hoar,	Pugh,
Berry,	Jones, Ark.,	Jones, Ark.,	Ransom,

Cole,	Hale,	Parker,	Washington,
Cullom,	Hausbrough,	Peffer,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question recurs upon the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business; on which the yeas and nays have been ordered. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CALL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. CHANDLER (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. MURPHY].

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS]. Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. HILL], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS].

Mr. POWER (when his name was called). Has the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFEY] voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted, the Chair is advised.

Mr. POWER. I am paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFEY], and withhold my vote.

Mr. RANSOM (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. I should vote "nay" if he were here.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HARRIS (after having voted in the negative). I voted inadvertently. I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], who is absent. The junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] announced a pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL]. Will it be agreeable to him to transfer our pairs?

Mr. LODGE. I am perfectly willing to transfer my pair to the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

Mr. HARRIS. Then I will let my vote stand.

Mr. LODGE. I vote "yea."

Mr. RANSOM. The Senator from Montana [Mr. POWER] announced his pair with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFEY], and I announced mine with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. I propose that we transfer our pairs.

Mr. POWER. Very well.

Mr. RANSOM. I vote "nay."

Mr. POWER. I vote "yea."

Mr. GIBSON. I have a general pair with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. ST. CROIX]. I transfer my pair to the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD], and I vote "nay."

Mr. CAFEY. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IBBY], and I withhold my vote.

Mr. McPHERSON. While I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS], I am permitted to vote upon such questions, and I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 11, nays 22; as follows:

Abdrih,	DAVIS,	Hoar,	Power,
Allen,	Dolph,	Lodge,	Washburn.
Cullom,	Hansbrough,	Peckham,

Chandler,	Hunt,	Murphy,	Vilas,
Cockrell,	Ivey,	Pettigrew,	White,
Dawson,	Jones, Nev.	Platt,	Wilson,
Dubois,	Kyle,	Proctor,	Wolcott.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The roll call discloses the lack of a quorum.

Mr. HARRIS. It is obvious there is no voting quorum here at present, and there is but one of two things that we can do with propriety, as it seems to me, at this hour of the evening—either to move that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators or to adjourn. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 37 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, April 7, 1894, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, April 6, 1894.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. E. B. Bachry.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

REPORT OF EXCISE BOARD, WASHINGTON, D. C.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the report of the excise board for the District of Columbia, transmitted in compliance with section 2 of the act approved March 3, 1883, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 1680) to amend an act approved January 31, 1883, entitled "An act to more effectually suppress gambling in the District of Columbia," etc.; in which the concurrence of the House was requested; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

PAN-AMERICAN MEDICAL CONGRESS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following concurrent resolution of the Senate:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth, of the proceedings of the Pan-American Medical Congress, held in Washington City, in September, 1893, under the authority of a joint resolution of Congress, approved July 18, 1892, in observance of which 2,000 shall be for the use of the Senate, 4,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,000 for distribution by the Department of State; the same to be indexed under the title "List of the Committee on Printing."

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask consent for the present consideration of that resolution.

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and agreed to.

On motion of Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. CAUSEY, for three days, on account of important business.

To Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland, for to-morrow, on account of important business.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER, HASTINGS, MINN.

Mr. HALL of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 581) to authorize the city of Hastings, Minn., to construct and maintain a wagon bridge over the Mississippi River.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read at length.

The committee recommend the following amendment:

On page 1, section 1, line 8, after the word "Minnesota," insert "or at such point in said city which said city council thereof, with the approval of the Secretary of War, may direct."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was accordingly considered, the amendment agreed to, and the bill as amended ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and being engrossed it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HALL of Minnesota, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

NOTIFICATION TO PENSION CLAIMANTS.

Mr. BRODERICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a joint resolution which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The title of the joint resolution will be read. The Clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (H. R. 161) requiring attorneys and claim agents having offices in the District of Columbia who have undertaken or shall undertake to prosecute claims for pensions, to advise each of the claimants once every three months as to the condition of his or her claim.

The SPEAKER. The joint resolution will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objection.

The joint resolution was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this resolution?

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the gentleman if this resolution has been referred to and reported by a committee?

Mr. BRODERICK. No, sir. I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

Mr. SAYERS. This seems to be a very important resolution. I think it ought to go to a committee so as to have a report upon it.

Mr. BRODERICK. I hope there will be no objection, but if there is I suppose it should go to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

The SPEAKER. That would be a proper reference.

Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. SAYERS. There is.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 5293) concerning leases in the Yellowstone National Park.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowered to lease to any person, corporation, or company, for a period not exceeding ten years, parcels of land in the Yellowstone National Park, of not more than 100 acres in extent for each tract and not in excess of 50 acres in all to any one person, corporation, or company, on which such leasehold shall be subject to the following conditions: That such lease or leases shall not include any of the geysers or other objects of curiosity or interest in said park, or exclude the public from free and convenient approach thereto; and that such lease or leases shall not convey either expressly or by implication, any exclusive privilege within the park except upon the premises held thereunder and for the time therein granted. Every lease hereafter made for any property in said park shall require the lessee to ob-

in the ordinary boarding houses that I have been compelled to frequent since I have been in Congress. And although in my efforts to secure better light I have bought burners which were larger than those furnished by the boarding-house keepers, yet so far as my individual experience has gone, I can say that our efforts to secure better light in the boarding houses are very poor, and I would willingly exchange them for the old tallow candle or the grease lamp in the corner of the jamb.

Now I think the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio is a proper one to be adopted. All of us want light of good quality at a reasonable price; and I believe it is a matter of experience, confirmed by the testimony of gas companies in various cities, that 20 candle-power gas can be furnished at $1 per thousand cubic feet, and sell at 40 per cent profit on the investment. This I believe is a fact from the statements of those engaged in the business, and if this be true there is no reason why Congress should not so legislate as to secure to the people of this District better light at a reasonable price.

I understand the bill of the committee proposes a 15 candle-power light, while the amendment is for a 22 candle-power light, at $1 per thousand cubic feet. Without taking time to discuss the subject in detail, I believe from statements of those engaged in this business, that while it is the interest of citizens that such an amendment should be adopted, it will still leave a large profit to the gas company.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. OUTHWAITE, it was agreed to.

No further amendments being offered to the first or subsequent sections, the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HEARD, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

NEW TICKETS ON STREET CARS, ETC.

Mr. HEARD. I now call up the bill (S. 443) to provide for the sale of new tickets by the street railway companies of the District of Columbia.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, That from and after the passage of this act no street railway ticket received by the street railway in the District of Columbia shall again be sold to any passenger, but shall be cancelled by the company issuing such ticket.

SEC. 2. That any street railway company doing business in the District of Columbia which shall violate the provisions of this act shall be liable to a fine not to exceed ten dollars for each offense, to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Mr. HEARD. I ask that the amendment reported by the committee to the first section be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 1. That from and after the first day of January next a blank insert be following:

That from and after the passage of this act each street railway and street car transportation company in the District of Columbia shall issue its own tickets, annual, portable, issued by any other company. Such tickets shall be printed and sold in sheets of six tickets each, and after having been once used shall be cancelled by the company which issued the same.

Mr. HEARD. This amendment in the form of a substitute for the first section makes the provisions of the bill applicable to the herdie lines as well as the street-car lines.

Mr. DINGLEY. Will the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HEARD] explain the necessity for this measure?

Mr. HEARD. The purpose of the bill is to require the street-car and herdie companies to sell their tickets in clean new sheets and to provide that when tickets have been once used they shall not be sold again. Under our present system tickets sold originally in clean sheets are, after being thus used, put again in envelopes and sold again, and again until they become filthy and unfit to handle. There are some companies in the city that sell tickets in new clean sheets and do not sell the tickets after having been once used. The object of this bill is to compel all the street-car and herdie companies to do the same.

Mr. DINGLEY. Will not this measure necessitate the preparing of tickets on much thinner paper?

Mr. HEARD. Not at all.

Mr. DINGLEY. The expense of furnishing tickets on card-board must be considerable.

Mr. HEARD. The railroad companies now print their own tickets, I believe. The herdie companies have not been in the habit of doing so, but have been using tickets printed by the street-car companies. Now, it is the opinion of persons qualified to know that disease is frequently communicated by the handling of old and filthy tickets. The requirement of this bill will be no great tax upon the railroad and herdie companies. They should furnish their customers with clean tickets, which should be canceled when once used.

Mr. DINGLEY. I notice that the bill takes effect from its passage or approval. It would not give any time for the preparation of these tickets.

Mr. HEARD. They will have time enough.

Mr. POST. They are all ready now.

Mr. FUNK. Will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. HEARD. Certainly.

Mr. FUNK. Do you know of any case where any disease has been communicated from the handling of unclean street-car tickets?

Mr. HEARD. I do not know of any such record. I am neither an expert nor a physician; but many men of good sense and information believe that disease is communicable by filthy tickets. I do not see why it is not. I think it is conceded by all that disease is sometimes communicated by handling unclean paper money.

Mr. FUNK. I apprehend that the street-car companies have an interest in furnishing the community with respectably clean tickets. I do not believe they will impose on the public by re-issuing their tickets until they become filthy or diseased, impure, or unfit to be circulated. I have never seen any street-car tickets but what were fairly clean. In other words, it seems to me to be an imposition on the street-car companies and an unnecessary hardship to them to comply with this law.

Mr. BOWERS of California. I want to say that everyone that travels on the cable road here, as I do every day, knows that he gets these little packages of unclean, dirty tickets over and over again. There is nobody who does not know it. They are used again and again, and come back to the company and are put up in these little packages and again sold to the public; whereas if you go up on the F street line and call for a package of tickets, you get new tickets every time. They do not use them but once. They are punched then, and are kept or destroyed by the company; whereas on the cable line you are very apt to get these dirty tickets that have been used so often that they are not fit to handle.

Now, occasionally you do get a package of clean tickets, or a strip of them, on the cable road, which shows that they are able to print their own tickets and have the facilities. It does not impose, then, any hardship on the cable company or the other street-car companies, for they all print their own tickets anyhow. They ought to be required to furnish clean tickets and the chief reason for this is in the world why the bill should not pass. [Clashes of "Vote," "Vote,"]

The question being taken on the amendments proposed by the committee, they were agreed to.

The bills as amended were ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HEARD, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ADOPTION OF CHILDREN IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. HEARD. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. COBB], who desires to call up a bill which was agreed to by the committee, and a report authorized upon it, but which has not been formally reported at this time.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. I ask unanimous consent to consider and pass the bill which I send to the desk, the bill (H. R. 3711) to authorize the adoption of children in the District of Columbia.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, That jurisdiction is hereby conferred on any judge of the supreme court of the District of Columbia to hear and determine any petition that may be presented by a person residing in the District of Columbia, praying the privilege of adopting any minor child as his or her own child, and make such order in relation to such petition as he may think proper upon the hearing of such petition; that the petitioner is a proper person to have custody of such child, and that the parent or parents or guardian of such child has given his or their consent for such adoption, he shall enter an order on the records of his court legalizing such adoption and making such child an heir at law of such petitioner, the same as if such child was born to such petitioner. If the child has no parent or guardian the judge may appoint a guardian for the child.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. CULBERSON. I would like to have an explanation of this bill.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. The only object is to provide, as is provided in most of the States, that children may be adopted and made heirs at law of the petitioner.

Mr. CULBERSON. Did not notice that anybody was required to have notice of the proceedings?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. The guardian or parent, and if there be none, the court appoints a guardian ad litem.

Mr. CULBERSON. I would like to have that bill read again. The bill was read at length.

Mr. CULBERSON. I do not observe that there is any notice provided for.

Mr. SPRINGER. It requires the consent of the parent or guardian.

Mr. COLBERSON. Suppose it is an orphan.

Mr. SPRINGER. Then the court appoints a guardian ad litem.

Mr. PICKLER. Where has the jurisdiction been heretofore?

Mr. SPRINGER. There has been no power to do it.

Mr. BROSIUS. I would like to ask whether there has been any legislation in the District on this subject heretofore?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. None in the District.

Mr. SPRINGER. There is no law on the subject.

Mr. BROSIUS. Certainly then some such provision should be enacted.

Mr. RAY. I would ask the gentleman from Alabama if the bill could not be so amended as to permit a man and wife both to adopt a child?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. That, I think, would be covered by the provisions of the bill as it is reported.

Mr. RAY. As I understand it, the bill says "any person" may adopt a child.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Anybody who has the qualification for adoption.

Mr. RAY. But the bill is in the singular. It says "any person."

Mr. SPRINGER. That would mean person or persons.

Mr. RAY. I know in New York State we have a similar law, and it reads almost like this, "any person," and this question has come up.

It is applied to the court within the last month, in behalf of a man and wife, that they might both adopt a child, so that it might become the child of both, and inherit the property of both.

Mr. POST. Move an amendment.

Mr. RAY. The question was raised by the court, and the court held that under our statute the child could only be adopted by one. I think it very wise, in cases where the husband and wife both desire to adopt the child, so that it shall be the child of both, and be adopted by the survivor in case of the death of one, and so that it may inherit the property of both, that there should be a provision that the child may be adopted by both. If there is any doubt about the bill in that respect, I should like to have it amended.

Mr. SPRINGER. The committee have followed the legislation of the States. Perhaps a judicial construction has made it necessary that this amendment should be adopted. Certainly there is no objection to it.

Mr. RAY. If the bill is broad enough to cover that, I am heartily in favor of it.

Mr. WANGER. I move to strike out the word "may" in the last line and to insert the word "shall."

Mr. SPRINGER. That means the same thing. The courts have construed that.

Mr. WANGER. That would make it more clear.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. We do not object to that amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 16 strike out the word "may" and insert in lieu thereof the word "shall," so that it will read, "the judge shall appoint a guardian ad litem."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAY. Now, I offer the amendment which I suggested.

In line 5, after the word "person," insert the words "or husband and wife."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 3 after the word "person," insert the words "or husband and wife."

Now, in line 7 after the word "or," insert "or their" so that it will read:

"That jurisdiction is hereby conferred on any judge of the supreme court of the District of Columbia to hear and determine any petition that may be presented by a person or husband and wife residing in the District of Columbia, praying the privilege of a loving any minor child as his or her or their own child, and make such minor child an heir at law."

Mr. BROSIUS. I ask that the bill be reported again, as it will read when amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection the Clerk will report the bill as it will read if amended by the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY].

The bill, as proposed to be amended, was read.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. We accept the amendment.

The amendment offered by Mr. RAY was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. COBB of Alabama, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent to publish some letters and a statement, in addition to what I have already published, in reference to a personal explanation I made some time ago.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HUNTER]?

There was no objection.

The letters and statement referred to are as follows:

COMMITTEE ON MINES AND MINING,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., March 22, 1894.

DEAR SIR: My attention having been called to the statement that you voted against the Alderson amendment to increase the duty on diamonds, in justice to you I will simply state that, being interested in the fate of the amendment, I took pains to notice the vote, and can say I know you voted in favor of the Alderson amendment to increase the duty.

I am, very respectfully, yours,
GEO. P. IKIRT,
Member, Eighteenth Ohio District.

HON. A. J. HUNTER.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., February 18, 1894.

I was present at the time of passing through the tellers on the question of increasing the tariff on diamonds, and my recollection is that the Hon. A. J. HUNTER passed through the tellers with me, and thereby voted in favor of increasing this tariff.

Very respectfully,
U. S. HALL,
Member of Congress, Second District of Missouri.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., February 16, 1894.

MY DEAR SIR: I am much surprised to learn that some question has been raised as to your vote on the amendment raising the duty on diamonds from that proposed in the Wilson bill. I was sitting near you at the time, and was specially attracted to the question and I do not hesitate to say that you voted for it, and do not think I can be mistaken in my recollection.

Truly, your friend,
H. S. G. TUCKER,
Member, Tenth Virginia District.

HON. ANDREW J. HUNTER.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES UNITED STATES,
WASHINGTON, D. C., February 20, 1894.

MY DEAR SIR: In response to your inquiry as to my recollection as to how you voted on the question known as the Alderson amendment to the Wilson bill, I have to say that when the vote was taken by tellers you went down the aisle with me and passed between the tellers as I did. On that vote I am positive that you voted for the amendment increasing the duty on diamonds. And from frequent conversations with you during the pendency of the bill I know that your inclinations and sympathies were in perfect accord with that of the majority.

Sincerely yours,
ARTHUR H. TAYLOR,
Member Congress, First District of Indiana.

HON. A. J. HUNTER.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES UNITED STATES,
WASHINGTON, D. C., February 21, 1894.

DEAR SIR: Referring to the question of your voting for the Alderson amendment to raise the rate of duty on diamonds, I am surprised that anyone should question the fact. Sitting next to you while the amendment was pending, I remember that you voted for the amendment, and favored it with more than ordinary care during the close vote that threatened for a time the defeat of the amendment.

HENRY A. COFFEEN,
Member Congress for Wyoming.

HON. A. J. HUNTER.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I voted to reduce the duty on farm implements, the tools of the carpenter, blacksmith, brick-mason, painter, plasterer, plumber, the tools of all mechanics and laboring people to a revenue duty. I voted against making any discrimination between taxpayers. I hold that the people should pay taxes according to the amount of property they own; that wealth, not want, should pay the expenses of the Government. I believe that taxation should be uniform. In every instance I have voted for a tariff for revenue only, as commanded by the people and directed by the Democratic platform. The people can judge from this record whether I am a Democrat or a demagogue.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE RULES.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask leave to introduce a rule, and that it be referred to the Committee on Rules, and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] asks leave to introduce a rule, and that it be printed in the RECORD, and referred to the Committee on Rules. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The proposed amendment is as follows:

I move that the letters be laid on the table with the petitions and other matters relating to that subject.

The motion was agreed to.

METLAKAHLTA INDIANS IN ALASKA.

Mr. MANDERSON, I appreciate that some of the Senate are familiar—but I know that other Senators are not familiar—with the history of a settlement in Alaska known as New Metlakahla. I think there is nowhere an account of greater self-abnegation, indeed of utter self-sacrifice than that of William Duncan, an Englishman, who nearly forty years ago went to a barbarous tribe of Indians in British Columbia and started the work of their reformation and civilization; nor is there anywhere an account of greater religious bigotry and of staid-laced oppression than some persons in high places in British America were guilty of toward Duncan and these interesting Indians which compelled them to take refuge in Alaska.

The Government of the United States granted to the Indians what is known as Annette Island, and they have formed there a prosperous Christian community. There are no better people in the district of Alaska than the Metlakahla Indians. While they have been permitted to acquire the land upon the island and to embark in many industries, even extending their saw-mill and cannery establishments to places outside of Annette Island, by the construction of the law by the courts of Alaska they have been refused admission to citizenship, for the enjoyment of the rights of which and the performance of the duties of which they are so well fitted.

I have in my hand a communication from Dr. Sheldon Jackson, a gentleman of repute, who has devoted many years to excellent service in Alaska among the natives, setting forth briefly the action of the courts in this regard and giving a brief history of this most interesting people, and important subject-matter. I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to have the paper printed as a document and that it be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, with instructions to that committee, if in their wisdom it seems best, to bring in a bill for the consideration of the Senate providing that those Indians may be admitted to citizenship if the present law is indeed insufficient.

The PRESIDENT, Without objection the paper will be printed as a document and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Mr. VEST, I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom were referred certain amendments intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. 4864) to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, to report them favorably. I move that the proposed amendments be printed, and that they may lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

A bill (H. R. 5111) for the relief of John J. Patman.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6556) to provide for further urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for other purposes, the pending question being on the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations to add to the bill as an additional section the following:

SEC. 2. That the act entitled "An act to amend section 3709 of the Revised Statutes relating to contracts for supplies in the Departments at Washington," approved January 27, 1894, be, and the same is hereby, so amended that the provisions thereof shall apply only to advertisements for proposals for fuel, ice, stationery, and other miscellaneous supplies to be purchased at the expense of the Executive Department, and to contracts for Government establishments therein named; and all advertisements made and contracts awarded or to be awarded thereon since January 27, 1894, in accordance with the laws in force prior to said date, are hereby declared to be legal and valid.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I trust the Senator from Missouri will make an explanation of this section which will justify its incorporation in the bill. I do not understand either the necessity of it or the wisdom of repealing section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, which forbids making purchases and contracts for supplies on services, except for personal services, unless after due advertisements therefor. The law was put upon the statute book in 1851, and has remained unaltered ever since. I do not understand that there was any good reason for changing the construction of the law.

Moreover, if the law is to be changed, I certainly should object to making valid by statute any contracts which have been made or which may be made in nonobservance of the statute. That I conceive to be a most remarkable provision to introduce into any statute. It is a statutory affirmation of the validity of certain contracts with no list of the contracts, so far as I know; with no explanation of what the contracts are that we are by statute to make and to fasten upon the Government. I may be speaking in ignorance of some list of these contracts which may have been submitted to the Senate. I have not, however, read anything in any report made to the Senate by the committee which gives us a list of the contracts which the committee want to make binding law, whether they are now lawful or not, by this amendment to a deficiency appropriation bill. If the Senator from Missouri or any other member of the committee can state what these contracts are and can show that they are wise and judicious, it may be possible that a reason can be given why we should undertake to make them valid or add something that is lacking of validity to them by statute; but as I now read the last clause of the section, it is a most singular provision to put into any law proposed for adoption by Congress.

And all advertisements made and contracts awarded, and to be awarded thereon since January 27, 1894, in accordance with the laws in force prior to said date, are hereby declared to be legal and valid.

If they are valid now, there is no need of this provision. If they are illegal now, I submit that if we are to go to making contracts valid we ought to know what those contracts are. I do not think the committee ought to task us to make valid by specific law and contract commissions we know whose the contracts are.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, I confess that I am very greatly disappointed. We all know the diligence and care with which the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire always listens to all the discussions in which he is a participant. Yes—and college journals be admitted to the mails as second-class matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented petitions of Henry Seybert Council, No. 520, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, of Abington; of Council No. 243, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, of West Lebanon; of Council No. 701, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, of Homewood, and of Wurttemberg Council, No. 213, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, of North Sewickley, all in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the inspection of immigrants by United States consuls; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. McMI- LAN presented a petition of the Brewers' Union of Detroit, Mich., and a petition of Carpenters' Union No. 689, of Detroit, Mich., praying for the governmental control of the telegraph service; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

De Pass and 179 other citizens of Florida, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the carrying on of any lottery business in the United States, and particularly recommending the passage of the bill having that purpose in view recently introduced by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. I am directed by the Committee on the District of Columbia to report back the memorial without recommendation, and ask its reference to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. PEPPER. I was requested by the American Anti-Usury Association, of Catasauqua, Pa., to introduce a bill, which I ask to be read twice, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

The bill (S. 1892) to provide for the issuing of Treasury notes to be loaned to the States, counties, townships, municipalities, incorporated towns, villages, and individual citizens, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

AMENDMENT TO SUNDEY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. GEORGE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

CLERKS IN TREASURY AND INTERIOR DEPARTMENTS.

Mr. GALLINGER. I submit a resolution, and I trust there will be no objection to considering it at the present time.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Interior be directed to transmit to the Senate in separate lists, the names of all clerks and employees appointed, promoted, reduced, and dismissed since the 1st day of January, 1893, and the State to which each such clerk or employee was assigned, also that such clerks and employees in the Service of the United States at any time during the war of the rebellion shall be designated by some distinguishing mark in each list.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the resolution be read again. I did not catch the last part of it.

Mr. HARRIS. Let it be printed and go over. Then we can look at it in print.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection to the present consideration of the resolution. The resolution will go over under the rule.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be printed.

THE REVENUE BILL.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, at the request of my colleague [Mr. McLAUGHLIN], who is necessarily absent, I desire to give notice that he will on Tuesday next, at the time when the tariff bill comes up for discussion, address some remarks to the Senate upon that subject.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED OVER.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate as part of the morning business the resolution submitted by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] on the 10th instant, proposing a hearing on the following question.

Mr. QUAY. The resolution may go over until to-morrow morning, as the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] requests this course.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the resolution will go over, retaining its place. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution submitted by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN], proposing to call for information in regard to suspended pensions.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senator from Nebraska to let that resolution go over until to-morrow morning and retain its place.

Mr. ALLEN. Very well; let it go over, retaining its place. The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

DELAWARE RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. QUAY. I move that the bill (S. 1843) to authorize the Philadelphia and Camden Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Delaware River be recommitted to the Committee on Commerce. It is a bill which I introduced by request, and I do not desire that it shall come before the Senate until I hear from the citizens and the shipping interests of the city of Philadelphia on the subject.

The motion was agreed to.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill.

By unanimous consent, the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6556) to provide for further urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending in June 30, 1891, and for other purposes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the amendments be engrossed and the bill be read a third time?

Mr. COCKRELL. The bill is open to amendment.
The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is open to amendment.
Mr. COCKRELL. I wish to make a short explanation and ask unanimous consent to have an amendment agreed to. On page 3, after line 13, I move to insert:

MINTS AND ASSAY OFFICES.

Mint at Philadelphia: For wages of workmen and adjusters, $46,000.

I will read the letter that has just come from the Secretary of the Treasury in regard to this matter:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 13, 1891.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for consideration in connection with the urgent deficiency bill now pending in the Senate (H. R. 6556), a communication from the Director of the Mint setting forth the necessity for an appropriation of $46,000 to supply a deficiency in the appropriation for wages of workmen, mint at Philadelphia, for the current fiscal year.

The very large gold operations at this mint renders this additional appropriation absolutely necessary.

Respectfully yours,

J. G. CARLISLE, Secretary.

The President of the Senate,

The Director of the Mint says:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF THE MINT.

Washington, D. C., April 13, 1891.

SIR: I have the honor to request that you will procure an appropriation of $46,000 to supply a deficiency in the appropriation for wages of workmen at the mint of the United States at Philadelphia for the current fiscal year. In explanation, I would say that the appropriation of this amount is necessary in order to continue coinage operations at that institution during the remainder of the current fiscal year. The cause of the deficiency in the appropriation for wages of workmen at the mint is the large amount of gold it was required to execute to meet the demands of the Treasury, and to date it was not only necessary to employ additional workmen and adjusters, but to do so on a large scale for the remainder of the year.

The amount of gold coined at the mint at Philadelphia from July 1, 1890, to date has been $61,577,485. In addition to this, there has been coined in subsidiary silver $1,280,000 and in minor coins $1,000,000.

There is now on hand at the mint at Philadelphia and the New York assay office gold bullion approximating $50,000,000. Of this amount it is desirable to have the mint to the close of the fiscal year less than $20,000,000, making the aggregate gold coinage of the mint at Philadelphia for the year about $82,000,000, which will be the largest coinage ever executed at any mint of the United States in any one year.

Respectfully yours,

R. E. PRESTON,
Director of the Mint.

Hon. J. G. CARLISLE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri? The Chair hears no objection, and the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. President, the bill I understand is yet open to amendment, and that of course permits the reconsideration of any action of the Senate as in Committee of the Whole upon the bill, or any action of the Senate itself since the bill was reported to the Senate.

I was addressing myself yesterday when adjournment came, to the matter of the printing and issuing of the two final reports upon Indians compiled by Special Agent Donaldson. This matter was ready many months ago. There have been published several bulletins, but the important parts of the work, the work upon the Five Civilized Tribes and the report upon Indians Taxed and not Taxed, which makes the final volume, has been in the hands of the printer, in type and electrotyped, for many months. Not only that, but both the publications not yet issued were approved by Superintendent Porter before he left the Census Office, and I take it that they are not now subject to revision unless the action of the predecessor of Commissioner Wright had been induced by fraud, misrepresentation, or some unfairness that should cause his action to be set aside.

It is claimed that there are certain illustrations in these two final publications upon which a gentleman named Lummis, in California, has a copyright. The fact is, and it will appear conclusively, from matter I have before me which I shall read in a moment, that any plates or illustrations upon which this gentleman has a copyright were published in the work I have here in hand, known as the Extra Census Bulletin on the Moqui-Pueblo Indians of Arizona. That work was issued while Superintendent Porter was in charge of the office. There is no claim on the part of any person that the illustrations as to the Five Civilized Tribes and the Indians Taxed and not Taxed, are copyrighted or are to be used in violation of copyright; so that that need not enter into consideration in the matter of the publication of the two works which are not yet published. A revision of them that shall change them materially and present a new form of publication would probably cost more than it would cost to take the matter that is now in hand and put it upon the press and issue it.

As to the character of this work, I started yesterday when interrupted to read a letter directed to Agent Donaldson by Mr. Porter, late Superintendent of the Census. He goes on to say:

It is an old saying, "that the affections of the human heart can not be measured by a foot rule." So it is with the Report on the Condition of the Indian Tribes of the United States. It is not only a report, but a point of a tabular statement or by the narrow confines of an "iron-clad schedule." As I said in the opening sentence of my letter of transmittal—

Referring to his letter of transmittal to the Secretary of the Treasury—

"The report on the Indian is unique; there is nothing like it in the census."

There can be nothing like it upon any other subject treated upon in the census, because the provision of the statute with reference to the Indian was different in its language from that on any other subject. Upon no other subject-matter was it demanded that there should be a presentation of the condition of the Indian and an opinion as to what was best for him.

There is no rule which can be applied to it except that which you have worked out so admirably, namely, "Secure all data possible and make a picture of the Indian for the artists to do with it as they think best. Your report and you will have behind you the intelligent people of both parties; pay no attention to the people who with sneers will cut down the canvas which an artist has devoted years of his life in painting to a frame. My suggestion is and always has been on the Indian report, make the frame bigger."

I have here some of the advance sheets of the final report known as the Report on Indians Taxed and not Taxed. This is the letter of transmittal of the 5th of June, written by Superintendent Porter to Hon. Hoke Smith, the Secretary of the Interior, referred to by him, in which he says:

This report upon Indians is unique.

He further goes on to say:

The office was fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Thomas Donaldson, a man abundantly equipped by his knowledge of his subject, habit of indefatigable industry, and literary skill to do justice to this very complex and important subject. Mr. Donaldson has secured the cooperation of Indian tribal authorities, and has utilized their means to such an extent that his report will stand as an unprecedented accomplishment, and as an authority for reference in all the future which lies before the Indian question.

The Indian will soon be blended with the general population. It may be that before the close of the decade events will have made such change in the Indian population that the entire census of the Indian population and the Indian population can be separately tabulated from ordinary schedules, just as the colored race has been hitherto. In this view the elaborate illustrations of the Indian will prove to be the last of the kind. It is important to report that the pictorial art might be effectively impressed into the preservation of facts soon to be out of personal experience and to be known only through records.

Mr. President, on the 20th day of March, 1891, there having come up some question as to whether there was an approval of these two reports by Mr. Porter when he was Superintendent of the Census, this letter was written by him:

NEW YORK, March 20, 1891.

MY DEAR MR. DONALDSON: On the 25th day of June, 1890, as Superintendent of the Eleventh Census, I officially approved the Final Report on Indians, Eleventh Census, prepared by Thomas Donaldson, expert special agent, under a plan approved by John W. Noble, Secretary of the Interior, and myself. Certain questions in the matter of corrections made by Judge William Hayden, my one critic, and Mr. Donaldson, the author, were left to Mr. Donaldson to insert, and he to make other prior corrections.

The final report as approved contained 39 pages of introduction and 856 pages of text, all of which were included in the final report, together with the illustrations, 269 pages in all, were also duly approved by me, and the copy of the list of the same for insertion in the final report ordered sent to the printer.

The copy for the Bulletin on the Five Civilized Tribes, 302 pages, was officially approved by me June 6, 1891, together with 32 full-page illustrations and 100 small illustrations, and was sent to the printer. Mr. Donaldson, expert special agent in charge, the author of the book, to make necessary corrections, the said corrections to be under his charge.

The above two reports, the Final Report on Indians, in type, and the Five Tribes Bulletin, in manuscript, were officially ordered by me to be delivered to Senator C. F. MANDERSON on the dates named in Expert Special Agent Donaldson's letters, commencing with the following:

If any further information is necessary, I shall be pleased to furnish you with it within my means.

With assurance of high regard, believe me, very truly yours,

ROBERT P. PORTER.

Hon. THOMAS DONALDSON,
Philadelphia, Pa.

P. S.—The plan and scope of the Five Civilized Tribe Bulletins were also approved by Secretary John W. Noble.

I have here upon my desk the final report of the Indian census. It is in type, and every page of it is electrotyped, and has been for months. The colored plates are owned by the Government, they having been contracted for by the Census Office, and the Government owns enough of the paper illustrations, not of course, owning the colored lithographic stones—but it owns enough of the colored illustrations to complete this book; it owns the plates that make the black and white illustrations, and the report is all there, and has been there for months, ready to be

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HILL presented the petition of William R. Bancroft, of West Webster, N. Y., a soldier of the late war, praying that he be granted an increase of pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. MORGAN. By direction of the Committee on Foreign Relations, I report back the bill (S. 1481) to amend the act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," approved February 20, 1884, and to aid in the construction of the Maritime Canal of Nicaragua. The committee have stricken out all of the bill submitted to them except the enacting clause, and present a substitute for the same, which I suppose is now ready for the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. MORGAN. I desire to say, before the bill goes to the Calendar, that at a later day, perhaps on Monday, I shall submit a written report in connection with the bill. I defer it now merely to enable members of the committee to have an opportunity to examine the report carefully before it is put in.

The report was subsequently submitted by Mr. MORGAN.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 217) for the relief of the heirs of James Bridger, deceased, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. CAREY. I am instructed by the Committee on Territories, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6442) to protect the animals in the Yellowstone National Park, and to punish crimes in said park, and for other purposes, to report it with an amendment, and I ask for its present consideration.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the bill be read for information.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to ask the Senator, before I decide whether to object to its consideration, if the bill proposes to change the boundaries of the park or has any relation to the controverted questions connected with it.

Mr. CAREY. This is a House bill, and is reported with an amendment.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, I object to the present consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. TURPIE. The bill is too long. It would take all the morning hour.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. TURPIE, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the bill (S. 756) for the application of the accretions of the Canadas awarded of 1868 to the new awards made in 1889 and 1890, reported it with amendments.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. McMILLAN introduced a bill (S. 1897) to regulate the laying and repairing of sidewalks in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, which was read twice by title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. ALLEN introduced a bill (S. 1898) to prevent the abuse of legal processes by United States courts and judges thereof, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also introduced a bill (S. 1899) for the relief of William Pitsch; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. PEPPER. I was requested by the Waco Workers' Political Alliance of the District of Columbia to introduce a bill, which I present, and ask to have referred to the Committee on Finance.

I suppose I need not again call the attention of the Senate to the fact that I do not agree with the philosophy of some of the bills which I introduce by request, but, as I stated once before in the presence of the Senate, I regard such bills as being somewhat in the nature of petitions, and while we may not agree with their reasoning, still they may be suggestive to us, and therefore useful.

The bill (S. 1900) to enable the public authorities to establish systems of public co-operation, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. PALMER introduced a bill (S. 1901) to remove the charge of desertion standing against the name of B. J. Kimbrough, of the One Hundred and tenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 1902) for the relief of James B. Boyd, late a private in Company B, Seventy-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers and Battery H, Fourth Regiment United States Artillery; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 1903) authorizing certain surveys to be made by the Coast Survey of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. WALSH introduced a bill (S. 1904) to amend section 719 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; which was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, as follows:

Be it enacted, That section 719 of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the words:

"Nor shall any associate justice, or circuit judge, or judge of the circuit court, except when sitting as a member of an appellate court created by law, set aside, affirm, or modify the order of the circuit court, or any other associate justice, circuit judge, or judge of the circuit court; and all applications for rehearing, or setting aside, or modifying the order, decree, or judgment made by the judge or justice presiding when the same was made or granted, except when he is disqualified; and all applications for judicial orders in the circuit court shall be made and heard in the circuit court in which the same is pending; and the offices of the circuit and the district judge of the district are both disqualified."

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. LODGE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. VEST submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

JUDGMENTS IN INDIAN DEPREDAATION CASES.

Mr. SHOUP submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Attorney-General be directed to transmit to the Senate a list of the judgments rendered in the Court of Claims in Indian depredation cases from the 1st of July, 1892, together with a statement of the date when each was rendered, in whose favor rendered, the amount in each case, and the aggregate amount.

FISH AND SPONGE INDUSTRIES.

Mr. CALL submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Fisheries, and ordered to be printed:

Resolved, That the Committee on Fisheries be, and they are hereby, instructed to inquire and report to the Senate by bill or otherwise the condition of the fisheries on the coasts and rivers of the United States, including the sponge industry, and the legislation necessary for its protection and the increase of the fish and sponges.

AMENDMENTS OF THE RULES.

Mr. HILL submitted the following resolutions; which were ordered to lie on the table, and to be printed:

RULE V.

Resolved, That subdivision C of Rule V of the Standing Rules of the Senate, and the amendments thereto, be amended as follows:

"If at any time during the daily session of the Senate a question shall be raised by any Senator as to the presence of a quorum, the Presiding Officer shall forthwith direct the Secretary to call the roll and shall announce the result, and these proceedings shall be without debate; but no Senator while speaking shall be interrupted by any other Senator raising the question of the lack of a quorum, and the question as to the presence of a quorum shall not be taken up more than once in a day, except by leave of the Senate, nor apply where the absence of a quorum is disclosed upon any roll call of the yeas and nays."

RULE IX.

Resolved, That Rule IX be amended by adding thereto the following section:

"Sec. 2. Whenever any bill or resolution is pending before the Senate as unfinished business, and the same shall have been debated on two days, amounting in all to thirty days, it shall be in order for any Senator at any time to move to fix a time for the taking of a vote upon such bill or resolution, and such motion shall not be amendable or divisible, and shall be immediately put, and if passed by a majority of all the members of the Senate, the vote upon such bill or resolution, with all the amendments thereto which may be pending at the time of such motion, shall be had at the date fixed in such original motion without further debate or amendment, except by unanimous consent; and during the pendency of such motion to fix a date, and also at the time fixed by the Senate for voting upon such bill or resolution, no other motion of any kind or character shall be entertained until such motion or such bill or resolution shall have been finally voted upon."

Resolved, That Rule XII be amended by inserting an additional clause, as follows:

"When upon a vote by yeas and nays it shall appear to the Presiding Officer upon recapitulation, and before the announcement of the result, that a quorum has not voted, he shall call upon Senators present who have not voted by name to vote, and shall direct the Secretary to add to the list of the Senators the names of those personally presenting to Congress their views with respect to pending and prospective measures of legislation; and to enter the same in the Journal; and if the whole number constitute a quorum, and I shall appear that a majority of a quorum or two-thirds of a quorum where the Constitution prescribes a majority of two-thirds) has voted on either side, the question shall be deemed to have been determined, and the result shall be announced in the same manner as if a quorum had voted."

HEARINGS ON PROPOSED LEGISLATION.

Mr. PEPPER. I submit a resolution, which I ask may be printed and lie over until Monday.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Whereas there exists in many places and on the part of large numbers of citizens, individually and in organized bodies, a disposition to visit the city of Washington for the purpose of personally presenting to Congress their views with respect to pending and prospective measures of legislation; and

Whereas many of such persons and bodies are reported to be now on their way, and are likely to follow, for the purposes aforesaid;

Therefore, to the end that these our petitioners shall have full and respectful hearing and that proceedings attending their communication with the Senate shall be conducted and not subjected to interruption by the transaction of other public business,

Be it resolved, That a select committee of nine members of the Senate be appointed by the Vice-President to be the quorum for the Senate on communication, whose duty it shall be to receive all written or printed communications from citizens or bodies of citizens visiting the Capitol or intending to visit the Capitol for the purpose of communicating with the Senate, to receive all petitions, memorials, and remonstrances of such persons and bodies and hear them orally in relation to the matters and things about which they desire to communicate; and the committee shall report fully to the Senate from time to time as often their committees report.

The Sergeant-at-Arms will set aside a convenient room in the Capitol or on the grounds thereunto for the use of the citizens and the committee and furnish the same with the necessary articles for the convenient dispatch of business.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to give notice that when the resolution comes up I shall move an amendment, making the Finance Committee of this body the committee for that purpose. It seems to me it is the proper committee.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BUTLER in the chair). The resolution will be printed and lie over.

THE REVENUE BILL.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to state that I shall, early on Wednesday next, ask the leave of the Senate to submit some remarks, occupying perhaps an hour, on the subject of the proposed tariff and the income tax.

Mr. TURPIE. I wish to give notice that next Wednesday, after the conclusion of the remarks of the honorable Senator from Vermont (Mr. MORRILL), I shall ask the courtesy of the Senate to submit some remarks upon the pending bill on the subject of the tariff.

TARIFF HEARING.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY], coming over from a previous day.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. QUAY on the 10th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate will hold a session on Saturday, 21st instant, from 10 o'clock until 12 o'clock, P. M., for the purpose of hearing the organizations of the United States in opposition to the bill (H. R. 4894) entitled "An act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. QUAY. Mr. President, I presume that the resolution had better be disposed of this morning. The workmen referred to in it are not Coxey's army, but the initial organization I believe is one of skilled workmen in the city of Philadelphia, with probable cognate organizations in the city of Baltimore.

I was not aware of their proposition until a week or two ago, when I was waited upon by a subcommittee of these people.

They said they had sent their subcommittee here to wait upon the Committee on Finance to ask for a hearing in opposition to the Wilson bill; that the committee had dismissed them with more or less consideration, and that they had determined to appeal from the Senate committee to the Senate in a sort of Committee of the Whole.

Their programme is conveyed in a circular, which has accidentally come into my hands. It indicates that on next Friday, the 20th of April, a monster convention, consisting of 10,000 delegates, made up exclusively of workmen, will meet in the city of Washington (I believe they have rented Convention Hall in this city), for the purpose of presenting and passing upon a series of resolutions and memorials. That is for the first day's business. On the following day, April 21, a week from to-day, the delegation, previous to high noon, will peacefully proceed, they say, along Pennsylvania avenue to the seat of government at the United States Capitol building, and present said resolutions and memorials to the honorable Senators therein assembled.

These gentlemen seem to me to be very much in earnest. I believe they are going to do what is proposed in this circular, and the question is what is the Senate going to do about it. I discouraged them. I said to them they might as well attempt to whistle off a pack of hounds in full view of a driven deer and in full cry, as to attempt to expostulate with a majority of this Chamber and attempt to deter them in their mad chase after the protected industries of this country and after their wages. But they said that their arrangements had progressed so far it was too late to recall them.

When I introduced the resolution I supposed that the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. HARRIS), who seems to be monarch of all the surveys, upon his benevolence allow us to conclude the weekly sessions on Friday of next week. I presume, however, that it is his intention that we shall sit next Saturday. I provided in the resolution for a session on Saturday, but that has become unnecessary, as we will undoubtedly meet on that day. The resolution should probably be amended, if it is the sense of the Senate that these people shall be heard, so that we shall take a recess on that day. I believe the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. GALLINGER) proposes some amendment of that kind, to which I have no objection.

Mr. GALLINGER. I submit an amendment in the nature of a substitute for the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The substitute will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all after the word "Resolved," and insert:

That on Saturday, the 21st instant, the Senate shall take a recess from 1 o'clock until 2 o'clock p. m., to hear a committee of the workmen's organization of the United States on House bill 984, entitled "An act to reduce taxation," etc.

Mr. QUAY. I am in favor personally of taking a recess and permitting this committee—that is, a subcommittee of 100 (which I believe they propose to constitute at the meeting), to appear on this floor and present their views in resolutions and memorials, which I presume is all they ask, in behalf of the 10,000, if they have 10,000 present, which I doubt. I believe there will certainly be two or three thousand assembled in this city, but of course they cannot all have access to the Chamber. However, I submit the resolution to the Senate for their good judgment on the situation.

Mr. CHANDLER (to Mr. QUAY). Accept the amendment.

Mr. QUAY. I accepted the amendment in advance.

Mr. HARRIS. I beg to assure the Senator from Pennsylvania that I have not the vanity to suppose nor do I suppose that I control any vote on this floor except one, and I am not absolutely sure that I always control that. But I do try to control my own vote, and I take it for granted that every Senator here does the same thing.

As to this organization, if it be an organization, I understand from the Senator that it has put, or proposes to put, in the form of printed memorials and printed resolutions the views that its members entertain, and that they propose to insist upon it. Their memorials or resolutions may be laid before the proper committee, or before this body but the idea of a mass meeting assembling in the Senate Chamber strikes me as somewhat novel and unreasonable.

Mr. QUAY. Will the Senator from Tennessee yield to me?

Mr. HARRIS. Certainly.

Mr. QUAY. My understanding of their intention is that they will present their ideas of the situation, conveying their hostility to the Wilson bill in memorials and resolutions, and that they also desire to accompany them with an oral presentation of their ideas to the Senate.

Mr. HARRIS. No precedent, I imagine, can be found from the day the Constitution of the United States was ratified and this Government organized, for any such action as is proposed by the resolution. I think the hours referred to by the Senator from Pennsylvania are a very much more profitably employed by an earnest consideration of the subject-matter by the Senate as organized in its legislative capacity than by opening our doors to a mass meeting and a general discussion in a mass meeting of questions pending before us.

I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Finance having charge of the consideration of financial questions.

Mr. GALLINGER. On that question I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. QUAY. I desire to state that this committee with their proposition has already been before the Committee on Finance, so that it is not worth while to make the decisive action of the Senate upon the question depend upon a motion of this kind. If we are to decide the question here and now negatively, it ought to be done by a yeas-and-nays vote for or against the proposition. What is asked here is not the judgment of the Committee on Finance, but of the Senate as a whole or en masse on this proposition.

Mr. HARRIS. I will withdraw the motion I have made and bring the Senate to a direct vote upon a test question. I move to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. BUTLER. Before that is done I trust the Senator will withdraw his motion for a moment. The resolution has just been called to my attention, and I should be glad—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair suggests to the Senator from South Carolina that the pending motion is a motion to lay on the table, and that it is not debatable.

Mr. BUTLER. I understand that, sir, and I ask the Senator from Tennessee to withdraw the motion for a moment in order that I may—

Mr. HARRIS. Upon the request of the Senator from South Carolina I feel constrained to withdraw the motion and open the floodgates of debate upon this great question.

Mr. BUTLER. I do not wish to debate it. I simply want to know the object.

Mr. HARRIS. Still, if I withdraw the motion for the Senator from South Carolina, I dare not fail to withdraw it for any other Senator who asks me to do so. I will withdraw it if the Senator desires.

Mr. PEPPER. I will state to the Senator from Tennessee that I wish to be heard very briefly on the resolution.

Mr. HARRIS. Does the Senator from South Carolina ask that my motion be withdrawn?

Mr. BUTLER. No, sir; I believe, in view of what has since transpired, that I shall not ask it.

Mr. HARRIS. I insist on my motion.

Mr. GALLINGER. As I offered the substitute, I trust the Senator from Tennessee will do me the courtesy to withdraw the motion for a moment. I have but a word to say.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Tennessee that the pending resolution be laid on the table.

Mr. GALLINGER. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BUTLER (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. If the junior Senator from Pennsylvania will inform me how his colleague would vote on this proposition if present, I shall be obliged to him.

Mr. QUAY. I have no doubt, without having consulted with my colleague, that he would vote in the negative.

Mr. BUTLER. Then I withhold my vote. If at liberty, I should vote in the affirmative.

Mr. CHANDLER (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. MURPHY].

Mr. DANIEL (when his name was called). I vote "yea." If I may be permitted, I wish to state that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] is absent and has a general pair with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON]. I am paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE]. I suggest that the Senator from Kentucky and the Senator from Washington may be considered paired, so that the Senator from Nebraska and I will be at liberty to vote.

Mr. MANDERSON. The Senator from Kentucky, I know, is in the building. I have been with him in a meeting of the Committee on Rules this morning, and I think he will probably be here soon.

Mr. DANIEL. If the Senator from Kentucky comes in, I shall then withdraw my vote, but I shall let it stand for the present.

Mr. MANDERSON. Very well.

Mr. DIXON (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. McLAURIN], and as he is absent, I withhold my vote.

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS], whom I do not see in his seat, and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. GIBSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. STOCKBRIDGE], but I am inclined to think that if he were here he would vote "yea," and I therefore vote "yea."

Mr. WALSH (when Mr. GORDON's name was called). My colleague [Mr. GORDON] is paired with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON].

Mr. HALE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM].

Mr. McMILLAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE], but believing that, if present, he would vote as I shall on this question, I take the liberty of voting. I vote "yea."

Mr. McPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS]. I understand he is not present, and therefore I shall withhold my vote. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. PERKINS (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. ROACH].

Mr. SHOUP (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from California [Mr. WITTER].

Mr. WILSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON] and therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BERRY (after having voted in the affirmative.) I forgot at the moment of voting that I am paired with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TOLLER]. I therefore withdraw my vote.

Mr. MANDERSON. I call the attention of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] to the fact that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] has entered the Chamber, so that of course there can not be the transfer of pairs suggested. I vote "yea."

Mr. BLACKBURN. I vote "yea."

Mr. DANIEL (after having voted in the affirmative.) I beg the attention of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER]. I understand that he is paired with the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS]. I am paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SPOFFORD]. I suggest that the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Washington may be considered as paired, and that will allow the Senator from New Hampshire to vote. I having already voted.

Mr. GALLINGER. It will be agreeable to me to have that arrangement made. I vote "yea."

Mr. DANIEL. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. HUNTON] is paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT].

Mr. GEORGE. My colleague [Mr. McLAURIN] is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON]. I have no doubt that if my colleague were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. PETTIGREW (after having voted in the negative). I have recorded my vote, but I should like to inquire if the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CAMDEN] has voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted, the Chair is advised.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I am paired with that Senator, and therefore withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 34, nays 9; as follows:

SUSPENDED PENSIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution submitted by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN], coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. ALLEN on the 10th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed and required to inform the Senate of the names and post-office address of all pensioners of the Government whose pensions have been suspended or annulled since the 1st of March, 1893, and the cause of such suspension or annulment.

Mr. ALLEN. I desire to offer what I send to the desk as a substitute for the resolution, and in doing so I wish to say that I think the substitute meets the approbation of the chairman of the Committee on Pensions.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator has the right to modify his resolution. The modification now offered by the Senator from Nebraska will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, directed to inform the Senate of the number of pensioners whose pensions have been suspended or annulled since the 1st day of March, 1893; the number of such pensioners whose pensions have been restored to the rate they were drawing at the time of such suspension or cancellation; the number, names, post-office address, and rate of those pensioners whose pensions have been partially restored since that date, and the cause of the reduction of the rate they were drawing at the date of the suspension or cancellation; and also the number of those who have been fully restored to the pension roll at the rate they were drawing at the time of suspension or cancellation, and the number, names, post-office address, and the cause of suspension or cancellation of those whose pensions have been entirely suspended or cancelled.

Mr. PALMER. Is the resolution before the Senate for consideration now, Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution is before the Senate.

Mr. PALMER. I have no disposition to oppose the passage of the resolution, but as it relates to a very interesting question, I ask that the communication which I send to the desk from the Commissioner of Pensions may be read, as it contains valuable information.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
BUREAU OF PENSIONS, FINANCE DIVISION,
Washington, D. C., April 12, 1893.

SIR: I have the honor to state, in reply to your verbal request, that pursuant to a decision of the Department dated May 27, 1892, there were 13,493 cases suspended at the end of June 27, 1892. Of this number, 1,000 cases had been reduced in 1,839 cases; 1,004 names of pensioners have been dropped from the rolls, and payment has been resumed in 9,620 cases to April 12, 1893, leaving 9,093 cases in which payment of pension is still suspended, and upon which final action has not been taken.

Under date of March 13, 1893, I issued an order directing that payment of pension be resumed in every case in which the pensioners were notified in which the papers did not show that the case was ready for final action. This work is being rapidly pushed to a completion, and I am of opinion that in the course of fifteen days final action will have been taken in every case pursuant to said act.

Very respectfully,

Hon. JOHN M. PALMER,
United States Senate.

WM. LOCHREN, Commissioner.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution of the Senator from Nebraska as modified.

The resolution, as modified, was agreed to.

CLERKS IN TREASURY AND INTERIOR DEPARTMENTS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution submitted by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted yesterday by Mr. GALLINGER, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Interior be directed to transmit to the Senate, in separate lists the names of all clerks and employes appointed, promoted, reduced, and dismissed since the 1st day of March, 1893, and the State to which each such clerk or employe is accredited; also that such of them as served in the Army or Navy of the United States at any time during the war of the rebellion shall be designated by some distinguishing mark in each list.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution may go over, retaining its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senate to proceed at this time to the consideration of House bill 6556.

By unanimous consent, the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6556) to provide for further urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for other purposes.

Mr. COCKRELL. I must be excused from my record here and from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] that he will not insist upon the proposition he has made.

For subject see index.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The reading of the bill has been called for by the Chair will state to the Senator.

Mr. HALE. That is a long and a very important bill, and I do not think we can consider it now. I think it had better go to the Calendar, so as to give us an opportunity to examine it.

Mr. MARTIN. I sincerely hope the Senator from Maine will withdraw his objection. I think, if he understood the bill, he would not make any objection to it.

The public lands in the Territory of Oklahoma are now governed and controlled by the Secretary of the Interior, and the law authorizes him to lease them. The whole sum and substance of the bill, which has the consent of the Secretary of the Interior and the endorsement of the Committee on Public Lands, is that the law be so amended as to authorize the governor and secretary of the Territory and the superintendent of the public schools for the time being to exercise the power to lease, instead of the Secretary of the Interior, until the meeting of the Legislature; and that then the whole matter shall be under the jurisdiction of the Territorial Legislature. That is all there is in the bill.

Mr. HALE. I dislike to interfere with the personal desire of the Senator, but we have had a great deal of trouble by premature and unadvised legislation with reference to just such subjects as this. Where a matter of this importance is brought to the Senate upon the report of a committee, I do not think it unreasonable to insist upon the point that it go to the Calendar and be printed, and then we may have an opportunity of examining it. I can assure the Senator, so far as I am concerned, that when that opportunity has been had and all the provisions of the bill have been examined, I shall not object any day to taking the bill up and putting it upon its passage; but I have had no opportunity, nor has any other Senator outside of the committee, to look into this matter.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection to the present consideration of the bill, and it will go to the Calendar.

EMPLOYMENT OF STENOGRAPHER.

Mr. CAMDEN. I am instructed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] in relation to the employment of a stenographer for the Joint Committee on Naval Affairs, to report it favorably and without amendment. I ask for immediate action on the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from West Virginia asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a resolution, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. BUTLER February 2, 1894, as follows:

Resolved, That the joint committee from the Committee on Naval Affairs of the two Houses of Congress be, and hereby is, authorized to employ a stenographer to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. COCKRELL. Why should the Senate contingent fund be made the separator for the expenses of a joint committee?

Mr. CAMDEN. I will state that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] is the chairman of the joint committee, and I understand that whichever body is assigned the chairmanship of such a committee defrays the expenses that are to be paid.

Mr. McPHERSON. I wish to state that it was found necessary to raise a joint committee of the two Houses for the purpose of taking up very many subjects in respect of naval matters. We were troubled with a great many subjects in both the House of Representatives and the Senate regarding the personnel of the Navy and many other matters which required adjustment. A joint committee of the two Houses was appointed, and that committee meet in the Senate committee room, the members of the joint committee on the part of the House of Representatives meeting with the members of the committee on the part of the Senate.

The expense of a stenographer can not amount to a very large sum one way or the other, perhaps not over $50 or $100 at the outside. Therefore, in drawing up the resolution, it was not deemed necessary to separate the funds out of which the appropriation should be made. It is a matter of no material consequence, and will not be very costly.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

TARIFF RATES.

Mr. VOORHEES. I make a report from the Committee on Finance, which I send to the desk, and I ask the Secretary to read the head lines, which will indicate the character of the work.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

Change in the Text and Classes of the Tariff Act of 1846 and of the Administrative Act of June, 1893.
1894.
The HILL R. R. 1893.

As it passed the House, and also as presented to the Senate by the Finance Committee, together with a table of the rates of duty proposed by the Mills bill, 1893.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask that the document be printed for the use of the Senate under the customary rule.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator allow me a question?

Mr. VOORHEES. Certainly.

Mr. HILL. Is it proposed to print the Mills bill entire with that document?

Mr. VOORHEES. I do not know that it is. The document gives the rates of duties.

Mr. HILL. For one, I should like to have the Mills bill printed entire. I made that suggestion some time ago, as the Senator will recollect.

Mr. COCKRELL. It ought not to be printed with this document, but printed separately.

Mr. HILL. All right. Let it be printed one way or the other.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask that an order be made for the printing of the document as it has been presented, and if afterwards it is found to be useful to have any further printing we can easily make the necessary order. This is a statement of the rates proposed by the Mills bill, and not a publication of the bill itself.

I ask for information. I confess I am not very well informed as to the number of copies that will be published of the matter I have presented?

Mr. DOLPH. Nineteen hundred.

Mr. MANDERSON. The usual number.

Mr. DOLPH. But the Senate only gets 400 copies of that number.

Mr. MANDERSON. There will be 1,970 copies printed in all, but they are distributed under the law to many libraries and other recipients of such literature.

Mr. VOORHEES. How many to the Senate?

Mr. DOLPH. The Senate only gets about 400 copies.

Mr. MANDERSON. Only about 400 copies out of the 1,970.

Mr. VOORHEES. Let the order be made according to the usual custom, and if hereafter it is found that the Senators need more, which I think very likely, we can increase the order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Indiana? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

SETTLEMENT OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

Mr. GALLINGER. I hold in my hand a copy of a joint report, to which I call the attention of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL]. It is to this effect: A copy of the joint report from the Secretaries of the different Departments respecting the annual settlement of the public accounts. It bears date December 6, 1816, and is signed by James Monroe, William H. Crawford, George Graham, and B. W. Crownshield.

The report discusses with a great deal of ability the question now before the Senate regarding a reorganization of the different Executive Departments. I think it will be of great interest to every Senator to see this report, and I ask that it be printed as a document for the use of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. COCKRELL. I inquire of the Senator from New Hampshire if the document from which the report presented by him is taken is referred to in the report?

Mr. GALLINGER. I think it is referred to, but I will re-examine it, and if it is not referred to, I will make such reference.

Mr. COCKRELL. The report ought to refer to the document from which it is taken, so that, if necessary, a comparison can be made with the original.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 1905) for the relief of Augustus G. Kellogg; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. MORGAN introduced a bill (S. 1906) for the relief of Isaac S. Simpson; which was twice read by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also introduced a bill (S. 1907) for the relief of the heirs of S. H. Hill, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

own tickets, and sell no tickets issued by any other company. Such tickets shall be printed and sold in sheets of 6 tickets each, and after having been once used shall be canceled by the company which issued the same.

And in section 2, line 1, after the word "railway," insert "or street herdic transportation."

Mr. FAULKNER. I move that the Senate nonconcur in the amendments of the House of Representatives and ask for a conference, the conferees on the part of the Senate to be appointed by the Chair.

Mr. COCKRELL. What is the effect of the amendments? As I understand, if I caught the reading of the amendments aright, the object is to make the street car companies exchange tickets with the herdic company.

Mr. FAULKNER. No; that is exactly the amendment I wish to secure in conference. The House amended the bill so as to include the herdic company in the requirement, which does not now issue tickets, and I think that is a very proper amendment. I wish to have an additional amendment added, and I ask for a conference in order to facilitate the action on the measure in Congress. I wish to provide that these companies shall exchange also with the herdic company, because they will not exchange tickets with the herdic company unless required to do so by a provision of law.

Mr. COCKRELL. I think they ought to be made to exchange tickets with the herdic company.

Mr. FAULKNER. That is exactly the object I propose to accomplish.

Mr. COCKRELL. If the herdic company issues tickets at six for a quarter, I wish to have them exchangeable at that rate.

Mr. HALE. Do not the street car companies exchange tickets now with the herdic company?

Mr. COCKRELL. They do not.

Mr. FAULKNER. They do not. The herdic company does not issue any tickets.

Mr. HALE. I had the impression that when we get tickets from the street car companies they are taken by the herdic company.

Mr. COCKRELL. Of course.

Mr. FAULKNER. The herdic company does take them, but it does not issue any, and if it did—

Mr. COCKRELL. The railroad companies would not take them.

Mr. FAULKNER. They would not take them. There is no exchange of tickets between the herdic company and the street car lines. That is the information we have; and we wish to have a provision put in the law that the street railways shall be required to exchange with the herdic company.

Mr. HALE. That is the object of the conference?

Mr. FAULKNER. That is the object of the conference.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to suggest to the Senator from West Virginia that what he proposes is in the nature of a new provision, and it seems to me it would be more appropriate to agree to that amendment of the House of Representatives, with an amendment securing what he proposes to provide for. Otherwise the other House will meet the Senate conferees by saying, "This is a new matter, which has not been considered in either House, and therefore it is not competent for the conference committee to deal with it." It seems to me, if the Senator has that object in view, the best way is to let the bill lie over: prepare the amendment, and then call up the bill and have the amendment made here in the first instance.

Mr. COCKRELL. That is right.

Mr. FAULKNER. I am willing to pursue whatever course will best facilitate the passage of the bill, but I supposed that as the other House had inserted an amendment as to the herdic company, we certainly had a right to add in conference as an amendment that the tickets required to be issued by the herdic company should also be exchanged by the street car companies. I think the amendment would be perfectly germane to the amendment made by the House of Representatives.

Mr. ALLISON. It may be germane, but why should we not deal with it here?

Mr. FAULKNER. If there is no objection, I will withdraw my motion and ask that the bill be printed and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the bill and amendments will be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

CONSIDERATION OF THE REVENUE BILL.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, the unanimous-consent agreement under which the Senate acted during the past week expired yesterday by its own terms. The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] and I, recognizing the fact that it would expire at that time, have conferred with respect to the matter, and he and I have agreed to ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that for the present week and until this day a week, Tuesday next, the agreement of last week be continued; that is, that the Senate meet at 12 o'clock, take up the tariff bill promptly at 1 o'clock, and proceed with its consideration until 5 o'clock without interruption; and on Tuesday next, at 5 o'clock, what is called general debate shall cease, and the bill after that shall be taken up and read paragraph by paragraph for amendment, the committee amendments being first dealt with as reached in the reading of the bill.

I desire, however, to reserve, after what is called general debate under this agreement shall have been concluded, that one Senator on this side of the Chamber shall be heard in the nature of general debate, making such reply as he may choose to make to the speeches that have gone before.

Mr. MANDERSON. Does the last suggestion of the Senator from Tennessee mean that when we come to debate the items of the bill paragraph by paragraph what he is pleased to call general debate shall not be had?

Mr. ALDRICH. I think there would be no objection on this side of the Chamber to an understanding that either on Tuesday or Wednesday some Senator representing the committee or representing the friends of the bill shall have two hours, or whatever time he pleases, for the discussion of the bill.

Mr. MANDERSON. Two weeks, if he desires it.

Mr. ALDRICH. Two weeks, as the Senator from Nebraska suggests, if he desires it. But of course that agreement does not imply that other Senators shall not have a right to speak at any time as long as they please upon the bill or any of its amendments.

Mr. HARRIS. The agreement which I seek, and which I think the Senator from Rhode Island agrees with me about is, that when the time fixed by the consent agreement for general debate shall have expired the reading of the bill by paragraphs shall begin.

Mr. ALDRICH. The only objection which I should make to the suggestion of the Senator from Tennessee would be more in the way of criticism of the phrase used, "general debate," than of the intent of the agreement. I agree with him perfectly as to that, but whether it shall be called "general debate," or whether it shall be called by some other name, is a matter about which there might be some difference of opinion. I suppose the Senator from Tennessee understands as well as I do that general debate in the Senate, in one sense, does not close until the third reading of a bill is ordered, and that even after the consideration of the bill by paragraphs commences any Senator can address the Senate at any length he pleases, or upon any subject he pleases, connected with the tariff.

Mr. HARRIS. It is a mere verbal question, if there be a difference of opinion between the Senator from Rhode Island and me. The object I have in view is to reach the earliest day possible to begin to read the bill and dispose of it. Of course under the rules debate upon amendments is as unlimited as the debate upon the bill. There can be no misunderstanding about that.

Mr. ALDRICH. That is all.

Mr. HARRIS. But I wish to reach the point where we begin to read the bill and consider it.

Mr. ALDRICH. Now, let me understand it. On Wednesday, say, at 1 o'clock or 2 o'clock, whatever time may be chosen, the reading of the bill by paragraphs, for amendment, will be commenced.

Mr. HARRIS. And on Tuesday next a Senator upon this side of the Chamber shall have such time as he may desire, not exceeding two and a half or three hours; perhaps two hours will be as much as will be wanted.

Mr. ALDRICH. That is right.

Mr. ALLISON. I shall not interpose an objection to what I regard as the material part of this agreement, which I understand to be that on next Wednesday, by unanimous consent, if that be the day, the reading of the bill shall commence by paragraphs, and that what is known as the formal reading, passing through the entire bill, shall be dispensed with. I suppose that is the object the Senator from Tennessee has in view.

The idea of closing general debate, as suggested by the Senator, of course, is an inadmissible idea in this body. No such suggestion has ever been made or thought of herebefore. The bill is open to amendment and open to debate until it is concluded. But I, of course, am just as willing as any other Senator can be that the bill shall have its reading commenced on the day suggested by the Senator from Tennessee. That a Senator on that side or on either side of this Chamber shall be allowed two hours after that time to speak is a wholly unnecessary suggestion or agreement, because any Senator, in a moment after the bill shall have had its first sentence read, can rise in his place and debate the bill if he chooses to do so. So I wish for myself to exclude absolutely, in connection with the bill, the

He also presented a petition of Maxville Lodge, No. 332, Ancient Order of United Workmen, of Maxville, Mo., praying that fraternal society and college journals be admitted to the mails as second-class matter, which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. PEPPER presented the memorial of Rev. G. Luecke, pastor, and sundry other members of St. Martin's Evangelical Lutheran Church, of Winfield, Kans., remonstrating against the adoption of an amendment to the preamble of the Constitution of the United States recognizing the Deity; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. PROCTOR presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the District of Columbia, praying for the passage of Senate bill No. 1841, providing for the seating of female help in offices, stores, etc., when such persons are not actively employed; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. ALLEN, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1301) for the relief of the legal representatives of Hiram Somerville, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. McPHERSON, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1779) authorizing certain officers of the Navy to administer oaths, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1781) to amend section 3719 of the Revised Statutes, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. VORHEES. Some time ago I offered what I intended to propose as an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill a proposition for the purchase of the oil portrait of Dolly Madison, by Mr. Andrews. I am now authorized by the Committee on the Library to report it in the form of a bill, which I ask may be read and placed upon the Calendar.

The bill (S. 1935) for the purchase of the oil portrait of Mrs. Dolley Madison, by E. A. Andrews, was read twice by its title.

Mr. FAULKNER, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1774) to amend an act entitled "An act to punish false swearing before trial boards of the Metropolitan police force and fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved May 11, 1892, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1625) to amend the act incorporating the Eekington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company of the District of Columbia, approved June 9, 1888, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

DISTRICT STREET RAILWAY TICKETS.

Mr. FAULKNER. I am directed by the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom were referred the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 443) to provide for the sale of new tickets by the street railway companies of the District of Columbia, to report two amendments to the first amendment of the House, and recommend concurrence in the amendment as proposed to be amended, and that the remaining amendment of the House be concurred in without amendment. The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments will be stated in the order.

The first amendment of the House of Representatives was to strike out section 1 of the bill and insert:

That from and after the passage of this act, each street railway and street herdic transportation company in the District of Columbia shall issue its own tickets, and sell no tickets issued by any other company. Such tickets shall be printed and sold in sheets of six tickets each, and after having been once used shall be canceled by the company which issued the same.

The amendments of the Committee on the District of Columbia to the amendment of the House of Representatives were, in line 1 of the proposed section 1, to strike out the words "from and," and in line 2, after the word "after" to insert "thirty days from," so as to read:

That after thirty days from the passage of this act, etc.

And to add to the section the following proviso:

Provided, That all street railway companies and herdic transportation companies doing business in the District of Columbia shall receive and exchange tickets with each other, and such companies shall make monthly settlements with each other, and shall redeem in money any tickets in excess of the number of tickets exchanged.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendments of the Committee on the District of Columbia to the first amendment of the House of Representatives.

The amendments to the amendments were agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment of the House of Representatives was, in section 2, line 1, after the word "railway" to insert "or street herdic transportation," so as to make the section read:

Sec. 2. That any street railway or street herdic transportation company doing business in the District of Columbia which shall violate the provisions of this act shall be liable to a fine of not to exceed $50 for each offense, to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is upon agreeing to the second amendment of the House of Representatives.

The amendment was agreed to.

COURTS IN NEBRASKA.

Mr. PUGH. I am instructed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 103) to fix the times and places for holding the Federal courts in the State and district of Nebraska, to report it without amendment and recommend its passage.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to appeal to the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH], the chairman of the Judiciary Committee. I ask that Senator to consent to have the bill which he just reported recommended to the Committee on the Judiciary. In the light of what was said, I think in the Senator's absence, in regard to the creation of a new judicial district in that State, and as I understand one of the Senators from Nebraska would like to be heard before the committee, perhaps a solution of the matter could be arrived at which would be satisfactory to all parties. I ask the Senator to allow the bill to be recommended that the matter may be heard.

Mr. ALLEN. I hope the Senator from Massachusetts will not insist upon that request. The bill as reported I understand provides for certain terms of Federal court in the State of Nebraska that are necessary and proper. I think that its passage ought not to be hampered in any way by the bill of my colleague now before the Judiciary Committee. If the Judiciary Committee see fit to recommend the bill now before them for the division of the State into two judicial districts, it will be a very easy matter by a very few words to fix the terms of the courts. If that bill for any reason should fail to be recommended or fail to pass, then this bill would be so much farther advanced upon the Calendar and could be acted upon by the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. The recommendation of the bill will not embarrass or delay the final action of the Senate one moment, I am quite sure. I take perhaps a little blame upon myself. The senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] desired to be heard before the committee and he was not heard. Under those circumstances, I suppose the unvarying course of the Senate would be, on the request of any member of the committee, to have a recommendation made. If it was in a case where the recommendation would substantially or at all delay the ultimate action on the bill.

Mr. ALLEN. If my colleague desires to be heard before the Judiciary Committee, I have not the slightest objection to the bill being re-referred. I was not aware of that.

Mr. HOAR. That is the ground which I offer.

Mr. PUGH. The bill that I reported from the Judiciary Committee relates purely to a local matter, and I consider that it ought to be under the control of the Senators from that State. It has passed the other House unanimously, and—

Mr. MANDERSON. I think the bill had better be recommended to the committee. There are matters on file in that committee which, it seems to me, must have been overlooked in the deliberation upon the bill. But it is not only for that reason, and because I had no notice that this local matter was to be heard by the committee and acted upon. Yesterday I introduced a bill which is akin to this, and I think it should be considered with it. For these reasons I think it desirable that the bill should be recommended to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts that the bill be recommended.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I hope the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary will consent to a recommendation of the bill. I have in my hand some papers handed me by the senior Senator from Nebraska some time ago, and also some papers from a member of the other House from Nebraska. I was unable to be present at the last two meetings of the committee, which was of course my own fault. For this reason I should like to have the bill recommended.

Mr. PUGH. To terminate this consumption of time, I consent to a recommendation of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the recommendation of the bill? The Chair hears none, and the bill is recommended to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRINTING OF MEMORIAL ADDRESSES.

Mr. GORMAN, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the following concurrent resolution from the House over, that the great Calumet and Hecla mine, famous the world over not only for the vastness of its product, but also for the intelligence and prosperity of its employ, was not discovered until 1855; and that previous to this date copper mining depended on chance rather than on science. In time the iron mines of Lake Superior will unquestionably outgrow the necessity of protection; but that day has not yet dawned, and should the Wilson bill become a law such a consummation must long be postponed.

THE VESSEL INTEREST.

Another, and a mighty interest, is threatened by the abolition of the serious reduction of the duties on iron ore. The lake vessel interest represents a capital of over $39,000,000. The capital invested in iron ore vessels on Lakes Superior and Michigan is nearly $11,000,000; and on Lake Erie and Lake Huron $12,000,000 more. The capital required for the rail transportation of iron ore alone from the mines to the shipping ports is $32,000,000, and from the receiving ports to the mills and furnaces, $26,000,000.

Since the Wilson bill first cast its shadow on the iron industry over $20,000,000 of capital, including the money actually invested in mining plants, has been unproductive, and 17,000 men have been thrown out of work. Shipbuilding has virtually come to a standstill, and the loss to the vessel interests alone was upwards of $1,600,000 last year.

The people of Michigan are opposed to any fiscal policy which will endanger appropriations for river and harbor improvements. The Peninsular State, with its 2,000 miles of coast line, includes within its boundaries the great water ways by which many of the staple products of the State reach their markets, and these water ways the State holds as a trustee for the nation. By immediate State direction, freight rates between the East and the West are regulated and are being constantly cheapened.

The Portage and the St. Marys Canals; the locks at Sault Ste. Marie, surpassing in size any others in the world; the Hay Lake and the Twenty-Foot Channels; the St. Clair Flats Canal, and the Kila Crossing, all are within the State of Michigan. Mr. William A. Livingston, of Detroit, has shown that up to 1891 the total cost of the river and harbor improvements on the Great Lakes was about $24,000,000, and that the saving in freight rates by water carriage when compared with the rates that were charged by the railways amounted in 1891 to $147,000,000, or over five times the entire cost of the lake improvements.

Two hundred and sixty freight trains a day would have been required to handle the freight carried by lake vessels during the season of navigation in 1891.

The policy of international arrangements has had its most signal success on the Great Lakes, where there has been provided a means of transportation costing in 1891 only one ninth the cost of the same service by rail, and bringing the farmers of Minnesota in closer proximity to New York than is the farmer of Southern Ohio.

The manufactures of the east are carried 1,000 miles west at a less expense than the same goods can be shipped 250 miles north or south; and there has been called into being a steam tonnage that in 1891 was increased by 10 per cent more than was the steam tonnage of the entire seaboard. Great as these achievements are, and beneficial as they have been to both the producer and the consumer, the triumphs of the future must far exceed those of the past, provided we here and now repudiate the policy and defeat the bill which aims to produce not a surplus, but a deficit.

FREE LUMBER BEGETS CANADIAN ENMITY.

Doubtless the framers of the Wilson bill thought that by placing lumber on the free list they would benefit the farmer and the workman. An examination of the prices of lumber as given in the report of the Senate Finance Committee shows that in spite of successive reductions in duties, and also in spite of free logs, the price of lumber has steadily advanced. In so far as Michigan is concerned, free lumber simply means that the Canadian logs which have been rafted across the lakes to be cut into lumber are manufactured in Canada, with a corresponding benefit to Canadian labor and their interest to American labor.

The value of Canadian timber limits will be increased, and the price of the product will continue to be held up by means of combinations easily formed, because of the great capital required for lumbering operations. Michigan has made the record of having manufactured more lumber in the single year 1891 to house comfortably a million people, or to load a train 2,470 times in length, and the product for 1892 is 2,794,257,575 feet was but a little more than 10 per cent in excess of the 2,520,000,000 feet of the last year. Two-thirds of the lumber now manufactured in the Saginaw Valley is cut from Canadian logs, and free lumber will result in the transfer of the mills to the Canadian side of Lake Huron.

Instead of cheapening lumber, therefore, the Wilson bill will simply lessen the demand for American labor, to the advantage of our neighbors across the border. And just here it may be noted that free staves means simply that Ontario will hereafter be called on to supply to the sugar refiners of New York the barrels which have hitherto come from Michigan. Canada, with her cheaper labor and shorter carriage will be able to undersell the Michigan stave manufacturers, whose business is conducted, as usual, on the same terms as those of the farmer. Thus the more the schedule is so far on its face, becomes simply another method for reducing the demand for labor without a corresponding diminution of prices.

FREE SALT.

Closely allied to the lumber interest is the salt industry. From the days when Great Britain held possession of the lake country salt was known to exist in Michigan; but it was not until a century later that the manufacture of that article was begun in the State. After ten years of discouragement and financial disaster, in 1830 the manufacture of salt in the Saginaw Valley became a financial success. The State bent all her legislative energies to bring about this result, and the salt manufacturers voluntarily taxed themselves to cover the expenses of State inspection.

Michigan produces about one-half of all the salt manufactured in this country, and her salt works have a capacity equal to two-thirds of the American product. In order to obtain any profit the manufacture must be conducted in connection with the lumber mills, using for fuel the refuse from the logs, and of late years the only salt blocks operated under the most favorable conditions have been profitable.

The history of salt prices shows that since 1872, when duties were reduced to the present rate of 8 cents a hundred pounds in bulk and 12 cents a hundred pounds in packages, the importations have decreased by 50 per cent, and the price has dropped from $1.45 a barrel to 35 cents, including the cost of the package, worth from 20 to 25 cents. With the transfer of the lumber mills to Canada the manufacture of salt will follow, for the salt deposits of Canada are as rich as those of the United States, and England, which now controls the trade on the Atlantic coast, will extend her markets inland, to the detriment of the producers and workers of New York and Michigan.

THE WOOL INDUSTRY.

Other Senators, and notably the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL], have given exhaustive attention to the subject of the duty on wool, and I need only allude to it briefly. Michigan, in 1884, was the fourth State in the Union in the production of wool, being surpassed by Ohio, California, and Texas. Since the census was taken I believe that Montana has come in ahead of our State. The Michigan farmer comes into competition with the Australian sheep-raiser, who uses Government lands fenced by the Government, and whose sheep require no herding, and whose only cost of production is the labor of shearing and marketing.

More than one-half the wool now consumed in this country is imported either in the form of wool or woolen goods. The increase in the world's production of wool between 1860 and 1885, both years inclusive, was over 100 per cent; and it has been the experience of the Australian producer that in 1881 his product brought scarcely more than was paid for half the quantity in 1852.

The increase in the production of foreign wools, and the comparative difference in transportation in favor of the foreign producer who reaches his markets by water, have placed the American farmer at a disadvantage even with a rate of duty that is seemingly high. To admit wool free could only result in such a decline in the American production as would practically ruin wool-raising as an industry; and with the decrease in the number of sheep would come a corresponding decrease in the demand for pasturage, hay, and oats, thus increasing the present depression in agricultural pursuits.

AN UNDERSTANDING WITH THE CANADIAN ADMINISTRATION.

A comparison between the Wilson bill as it comes from the House and the new Canadian tariff shows how close an understanding must have existed between the framers of the two measures. In each bill lumber, buckwheat, rye and rye flour, and corn are put on the free list when imported from any country which admits these articles free of duty.

Canada offers to place apples, beans, peas, potatoes, hay, vegetables, and barley on her free list, wherever any other countries do the same; and the Wilson bill places apples and peas on the free list absolutely. Eggs and salt are made free in both countries, and the United States offers Canada free oats, oatmeal, wheat, and wheat flour in exchange for like favors. Oats of metals are on both free lists, and so is wool.

It is interesting to note that the party in this country which is offering these concessions to Canada is the party which has denounced the policy of protection as unconstitutional and which is now theoretically engaged in making a tariff for revenue only. On the other hand, the party in Canada which is meeting the American free trader half way is avowedly the party of high protection and is still engaged in building up what is known in Canada as the national policy, the one object of which is to make that country independent of the United States.

The Canadians have made no mistake. They admit free of duties only those commodities in the production of which they have so much the advantage of us as to prevent us from entering their surplus products. They secure from us unlimited markets for their surplus products. For these favors they give no concessions in their tariff on manufactured articles, but still maintain in their duties at the prohibitive point, and they even go so far as to place a bounty of $2 a ton on pig iron.

For the past fifteen years Canada has been pursuing the policy of shutting the American farmer and manufacturer out of her markets. How successful she was is told by her minister of finance in his speech on presenting the new tariff measure. In 1878, says Mr. Foster, the people of the United States found in Canada a market for agricultural products and animals and their produce to the value of over $16,000,000; in 1891 the entire imports into Canada of such products amounted to less than $3,000,000.

Again, in 1877 Canada imported, mainly from this country, $13,555,079 worth of flour and grain, including pease. In 1893 these important goods had been cut down to $1,334,429. Only so recently as 1879-80 the Canadians took from us $1,734,225 worth of bacon, hams and shoulders; last year the amount so imported was but $127,442 in value.

Not only has Canada shut our farmers out of her markets; she has also appeared as our competitor in the markets of Europe. More than this, she has entered our own markets, and in spite of the duties, has firmly established her trade in competition with the American farmer in the markets of the United States.

In 1893 Canada exported horses valued at $1,461,000; of which amount the value of those sent to this country was $1,123,000; of $146,000 worth of swine exported we took $137,000 worth; of $1,217,000 worth of sheep our share was $1,098,000; of $336,000 worth of wood for wood pulp we took all but $15,000 worth; out of a total of $9,640,000 worth of planks and boards exported $8,313,000 in value came to the United States; of $554,000 worth of staves and sent $47,000 to the rest of the world; and we took $734,000 worth of shingles, or within $15,000 worth of the entire export.

From Canada we bought last year $324,000 worth of eggs; $52,000 worth of poultry; $246,000 worth of wheat; $151,000 worth of oatmeal; $834,000 worth of hay; $78,000 worth of clover and grass seed; $259,000 worth of potatoes; $422,000 worth of pease, and $225,000 worth of wool. The American farmer is now suffering from oversupply of his products in the markets of the world; and yet the Wilson bill proposes entirely to break down the barriers which have to some extent preserved to our own people their home markets.

CANADIAN CHEAP LAND AND LABOR.

The Canadian farmer has a double advantage over his neighbor across the border. First, his land is worth much less than is the land of his competitor; and, secondly, he pays his labor at least 35 per cent less than American labor is paid. Mr. Joseph Nimmo, jr., in answer to questions propounded by the Ways and Means Committee of the House, has discussed very successfully the question of the comparative cost of production in this country and in the Dominion; and information on which he based his conclusions, gathered from abundant sources, was well substantiated.

He reached this result: In order to allow the New York farmer to compete successfully with the Ontario farmer, the average rate of duty on Canadian farm products would have to amount at least to 44 per cent, of which 12 per cent represents difference in the value of lands, and 32 per cent represents the excess labor costs in New York. The figures for Michigan are very nearly the same; certainly there would not be a smaller discrepancy. The same reasoning, therefore, is the message which the Wilson bill brings to the Michigan farmer, who is asked to give his Canadian competitor free access to the markets of Detroit, Chicago, New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, or at best to allow a considerable reduction of the now inadequate duties.

Those persons who have not given careful attention to the location of Canada with relation to this country, fail to appreciate the importance of the question on the part of the Dominion. The natural course of Canadian trade is southward.

The maritime provinces are cut off from the remainder of the Dominion by the State of Maine, which extends 103 miles north of Quebec. New England, with a population about equal to that of all Canada, could easily find a market for all the products of the maritime provinces, such as lumber, coal, gypsum, grindstones, and fish, and in the light of experience it is safe to say that should the Wilson bill become a law the imports from these provinces will be more than doubled.

Toronto is only 150 miles from New York City, but by Canadian lines it is over a thousand miles from Halifax, the only Canadian port that is open all the year. The distance from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Boston and Portland, Me., by way of the Canadian roads is about the same as to New York, Baltimore, and Philadelphia. Even now the grain, wool, and other products of Michigan find their way by rail to Eastern markets across the Province of Ontario, and the roads which bring the goods of the East to our merchants traverse Canadian territory. The whole lands of Manitoba, separated from Ontario by a thousand miles of inhospitable country, find a natural outlet at St. Paul and Minneapolis; and British Columbia is naturally tributary to Portland, Oregon, and to San Francisco. To give these Canadian provinces a free or practically free and convenient market for their products, while obtaining nothing in return, is not statesmanship, to say the least.

AN ATTEMPT TO REVIVE THE DISCARDED RECIPROCITY TREATY.

We are not left to guesswork, nor yet to the figures of Treasury experts, to find how the Wilson bill would affect the trade relations between this country and Canada. The Wilson bill is a virtual attempt to obtain by coordinate legislation in the two countries, the revival of the provisions of the reciprocity treaty of 1904. In so far as the pending measure deals with Canada, it is open to all the objections which led to the abrogation of that treaty.

More than this, the settled and avowed policy of Canada now being to build up her own manufactures by shutting out those of other nations, there is at this time no such excuse for opening our markets to Canada's natural products as there was in 1854, when that country imposed but nominal duties on manufactures. The results of the reciprocity treaty, however, should be sufficient warning against any endeavor to revive it.

The leading feature of the treaty negotiated by Secretary Cass and Lord Elgin was, that the natural products of the United States and Canada should be admitted to each country, respectively, free of duty. At the time the treaty took effect (September 11, 1854) Canadian duties on manufactured articles varied from 5 to 125 per cent. Within three years Canada had placed duties of from 62½ to 100 per cent on our leading manufactures.

The effect of these increases was to cut down our exports to that country from over $20,000,000 in 1855 to less than $13,000,000 in 1867. Of the $239,000,000 worth of Canadian products which entered the United States during the continuance of the treaty, 94 per cent came in free, while but 58 per cent of the American products sold to Canada crossed the border without paying heavy tribute.

During the twelve years, while the treaty was in force, the entire sales of the people of this country to our Canadian neighbors—free and dutiable goods, domestic products, and foreign products re-exported to Canada—aggregated less by $25,000,000 than the free goods which the Canadians were enabled by the treaty to sell to the United States.

In the ten years from 1851 to 1861 Canada nearly doubled both the amount and the value of her improved land; her wheat crop increased 78 per cent, and her oat crop 91 per cent; her timber advanced more than 50 per cent in value, and her exports of lumber were more than doubled.

Unquestionably the treaty was a decided benefit to Canada, and had that country shown the least disposition to extend the reciprocity provisions of the treaty to manufactures in addition to natural products, that treaty would before this have brought about the entire abolition of duties between the two countries, to the mutual advantage of both.

As is was, the Chicago Board of Trade called for a more free and liberal treaty; the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce passed resolutions in favor of actual reciprocity; instead of the kind brought about by the then existing treaty, the Detroit Board of Trade finding that American manufactures were practically shut out of Canada, while Canadian wheat competed on equal terms with that of Michigan in the markets of New England, favored either a broader treaty or none at all; Oswego declared in favor of a customs union. Canada, however, gave no heed to these requests, and on March 17, 1867, the treaty was terminated at the instance of this Government. Since that time the trade relations between the two countries have been most unsatisfactory.

BENEFITS OF POLITICAL UNION.

The question asked a few days ago by the Senator from Delaware [MR. GRAY] is a pertinent one. How, he inquired, would commercial union benefit the farmers of the United States? This question is itself an argument against the Wilson bill, since it involves the admission that the Wilson bill does harm to the can farmer by reason of allowing the Canadian products to come into this country free of duty.

Political union would give to the State of Michigan at least one-third more territory in which to sell manufactures, and this building up of manufactures would in itself create a greater market for agricultural produce. The city of Detroit stretches for 8 miles along the river, and 4 miles from the center of the city land is worth $3,000 an acre for manufacturing purposes, while Canadian land across the three-quarters of a mile of water is worth less than $300 an acre. Political union would change all this, building up on both sides of the strait the commercial facilities which in proximity to navigable water bring about. It is absurd to say that a strait which forms the highway of commerce equal in turn to the teetering of the ports of London and Liverpool combined should form a commercial barrier between the United States and Canada greater than the Rocky Mountains ever formed between the Pacific coast and the remainder of the country. The manufacturers of Detroit, representing a capital of over $45,000,000, and paying annual wages in excess of $18,000,000, are shut out of a territory to which nature has furnished the easiest possible access; but to the products of Canada the doors are to be opened!

It is too much the custom in this country to belittle the resources and capabilities of our vigorous and enterprising neighbor on the north. Canada is nearly as large as all of Europe, and contains more than one half the fresh waters of the globe, with thousands of miles of coast lines. Her wheat area for the highest grades of grain is nearly four times as large as that of the United States. Her inexhaustible fisheries, her wealth of timber, the coast of Nova Scotia, and the immense deposits of iron ore in Ontario and Quebec, all await only the free markets of this country for their development.
